J. A. Newsham's Easter lilies are among the best in the city. They are mostly grown from Louisiana bulbs and have strong stems, with large, perfect flowers. Besides these, he has some elegant cattleyas for the holidays.

P. A. Chopin has his Easter lilies in first-class shape. They are all grown from bulbs raised by himself in different parts of Louisiana. The stems are extremely strong, with an abundance of buds, and the flowers are perfect in every detail. He was one of the first local florists to introduce the lily culture in Louisiana and hopes to start the shipping of bulbs in a few years.

ever grown for Easter, and will undoubtedly find ready buyers at top notch prices. R. E.

IMPROVING THE STAGING.

Some of those in the allied trades who exhibited at the National Flower Show at Boston made something of a grimace at the price of space, but it is pleasant to record that now that the show is over and there has been time for casting up results, practically every trade exhibitor expresses himself as well pleased with the business done. It was the first time that the allied trades have bought space in an exhibition designed primarily for the general public, and of course they wanted to put their best foot forward. There has been notable progress in the last few years in the staging of our trade displays. Not so many years ago all that was considered necessary was to set one's merchandise upon a table. The only adjunct was a sign. The larger it was, and the more glaring its colors, the better it suited. At the Boston exhibition many of those of the allied trades had the advantage of the use of some of the fixtures remaining from previous exhibitions, and on the whole the trade display was staged much more attractively than any of its predecessors, as can be seen from the accompanying illustration showing the booth of one of the ribbon houses, though quite naturally the exhibitor thinks this the most attractive display of the lot. So well was the S. A. F. executive committee pleased with the appearance of this exhibition that in framing the rules for the August exhibition it was voted to cut out the big signs and glaring placards, to the end that all our trade displays may in future have greater dignity and be more pleasing to the eye.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The dark and cool weather which prevailed last week shortened up receipts to such an extent that normal prices again reigned. It also kept stock in good shape, for the quality of cut flowers is fine, indeed. The supply of carnations and roses was equal to the demand, while valley, violets and bulbous stock were a little more plentiful. The only flowers in which a decided shortage is felt are American Beauties; even the Chicago market was of no help when this line of stock was called for. Wild smilax is also a thing of the past for this season. Common ferns braced up somewhat and now command $1 per thousand. The supply of Easter lilies, both plants and cut flowers, will be equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

At the club meeting, April 6, various topics of interest came up and created some enthusiasm. The entertainment committee was empowered to arrange for a May party sometime next month. Nic Zweifel entertained those present with a brief description of his trip to the Boston convention, plus the numerous side trips.

The Florists' Bowling League lost the final match with the Odunas, which was rolled at Sonnenberg's, on Third street, April 7. Thus the florists lost two out of three games. According to present plans, the local boys will journey to Chicago May 7 to roll the return game. Anyone desiring to be in it (for all are welcome), kindly inform Gust Rusch, care of Holton & Hunkel Co., who is the man in charge.

William Currie, C. C. Pollworth and Nic Zweifel, who attended the Boston convention, returned last week. They state it was the finest and largest show this country ever had, and a credit, indeed, to those who helped make it such.

The G. H. Hunkel Co. reports a heavy call for plumosus seed of late. Mail order trade is fully up to last year.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. cleaned up on Perle roses on Palm Sunday, owing to the confirmation exercises in the various churches. The firm's plants and cut stock for Easter are all in prime condition.

At the greenhouses of the Holton & Hunkel Co. they have been busy as bees shipping plants for the Easter trade in all directions. At the time of writing all the best stock is spoken for.

The Fox Point Floral Co., which forces a large batch of pot plants for Easter, reports being cleaned out, with the exception of a few spiraeas, on Palm Sunday.

The Mueller & Schroeder Co. is cutting exceptionally fine snapdragons, which command a fancy price. This firm's carnations, too, are in fine shape.

Roy Currie, of the Currie Bros. Co., says the firm sold an exceptionally large number of plants on the Saturday preceding Palm Sunday.

If business keeps up the pace it set the first day of this week, the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. can be more than satisfied.

Christ Peterson, lately from Chicago, has opened a stand for the sale of pot plants at 53 Martin street.

William Zimmermann is keeping up with the times, for one of his latest purchases was an auto.

The following were visitors: Ed Winterson, Chicago; James Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis.; Mrs. Miller, Mrs. J. T. Hinchliffe and Mr. Adams, all of Racine, Wis.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Palm Sunday made a unique spring record. Early risers found the earth completely covered with winter's snowy mantle. The warm sun of Monday melted this final reminder of winter and rapidly rising temperature gives hope of the real advent of spring. The plantsmen especially hope to avoid the extra trouble and expense of wrapping.

Prices of cut flowers are steady, and the improvement gradual. There will be enough of everything. For years "plant Easters" have been the fashion. The chances are about even again this year for both branches of the trade and plants and cut flowers will vie equally for public recognition. The week opens encouragingly. There is no surplus. The left-over stock of last week cleaned up rapidly. Beauties fell to 30 cents April 8. There seems to be an abundance of every variety of roses. If values rise twenty-five per cent above Monday's prices for Saturday, it is generally believed that this will be the limit. White carnations rose to 3 cents April 10. All varieties are abundant and quality is generally perfect; 4 to 5 cents will likely be the top quotation for Easter. Fine cattleyas sold at 75 cents and even $1 was paid for the best of them. A goodly variety of orchids are arriving and all of the best wholesale houses will have their share for distribution. The shipping demand is increasing all the time, keeping pace with the more numerous and larger sources of supply.

There will be plenty of lilies, and 12 cents seems to be the top quotation in pots, and 8 to 10 cents for the cut lilies, at which figure most of the preliminary booking has been made. Callas are holding at about the same figures and valley is steady at 3 cents for the high grade, with much inferior stock selling as low as $1 per hundred. There are oceans of sweet peas, violets and daffodils. The best violets will be scarce, the experts say, but of the medium grade there will be enough and to spare. Bulbous stock, especially tulips, is a drag, and hard to move at any figure.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club, April 10, was of exceptional interest. Routine was quickly dispatched. The dinner, reception, transportation and legislative committees made reports and were thanked, as were the donors of stock for the annual dinner decoration and Alex. McConnell for his decorative work. Robert Young reported all arrangements complete for the club's outing June 28. Resolutions on the deaths of Mr. Kessler, Mr. Pioroski and George Lorenz were ordered. L. W. C. Tuthill was elected to membership and M. H. Duryea, Joseph Roberts and James Fisher were proposed.

Exhibits of the evening included: Calla Elliottiana, from John Lewis Childs, of Flowerfield, L. I., was awarded the thanks of the club. Carnation Wodenethe, shown by Mr. Whitney, was given the thanks of the club, having previously been exhibited by C. H. Totty, the disseminator. Harry A. Bunyard, general manager for Arthur T. Boddington, staged a splendid collection of sweet peas, flowered from his firm's seed by William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass. Twenty-one varieties in many colors were included and a cultural certificate was awarded.

F. R. Pierson gave an interesting address on the National Flower Show. He said the total expenditure amounted to about $25,000, over $8,000 in premiums being awarded, but the admissions were over $19,000, and he assured those on the guarantee list that they will not only get their money back, but a dividend in addition. C. B. Weathered spoke of the many courtesies the New York visitors to the show had received and J. H. Pepper showed some views of the exhibition.

Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., gave a most interesting address on the gladiolus, illustrating his talks with colored stereopticon views. He was enthusiastically cheered.

The house committee, Messrs. Fenrich and Rickards officiating, provided most appetizing refreshments and it is difficult to understand why only one-third the club's membership attends these delightful monthly reunions. Among those present this evening were C. S. Lord, Minneapolis, and Fred Lautenschlager, Chicago.

Various Notes.

This will be the busiest auction week of the year. Extra sales are announced and the Fruit Auction Co. is offering stock every day, with John P. Cleary on the rostrum. Prices are at high tide, hardy roses selling at from 9 cents to 30 cents each. The crowds at Elliott's and MacNiff's are double those of last year, mostly made up of suburban buyers. Easter flowering plants are the principal offerings this week.

Of the better grade of plants the big growers announce nothing left. The advance orders have been enormous.

John P. Sharkey died April 6 at his residence, 102 West Forty-eighth street, and the funeral services on Sunday were attended by many of his florist friends. He leaves a wife and son.

The bowlers have decided to use Thumm's alleys, at Broadway and Thirty-first streets, Friday evenings the balance of the season.

J. J. Fellouris will move, May 1, to larger and more convenient quarters at 116 West Twenty-eighth street.

Robert Berry has become manager of a large estate at Great Neck, L. I.

Patrick O'Mara is in the south.

Arthur T. Boddington has returned from a trip to Bermuda.

A. T. Bunyard will open a Newport branch in June.

John Donaldson is convalescing.

The new market is open, and the growers are slowly changing to the larger quarters at Fifty-ninth street.

The first shipment of Easter lilies from Bermuda arrived April 10, 1,500 crates; price, 3 cents per flower.

Arthur Merritt is in business on his own account, on upper Broadway, in the store formerly occupied by Mengum & Westwood. Mr. Mengum is with Thorley and Mr. Westwood is manager of Fleischman's branch in the Pennsylvania terminal.

J. W. Merritt, of Brooklyn, has moved his florists' supply establishment to the ground floor at 386 Pearl street, where he has abundance of room and facilities for a large business.

The large dailies carry quite extensive advertisements of Easter stock, many of the large department stores making their floral displays a special feature. Trepel has this department in three of these stores under his management, and his aggregate purchases will amount to many thousands of dollars.

Russin & Hanfling say they will be open all of Saturday night. All the supply houses will doubtless concede this opportunity to their patrons, and every cut flower establishment will keep open house, as usual.

J. K. Allen says that during the last week he has averaged receipts of 500 Brunners daily.

J. Houck, of Bloomfield, N. J., is building 10,000 square feet additional to his greenhouse plant and installing a No. 14 Kroeschell boiler. This will make his total close to 40,000 square feet. He is a member of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., 111 West Twenty eighth street.

Mrs. Krick has a handsome store at 1379 Broadway, Brooklyn, close to the locality of the old store and business that was established by the firm in 1852. The trade welcomes her back to the fold.

Secretary Eagleson, of the American Institute, announces the fall dahlia show for September 19 to 21, and the mum show November 1 to 3.

A. T. Boddington gave a farewell luncheon to the English visitors on the eve of their departure for home April 4. These gentlemen were greatly pleased with their reception by the trade everywhere they went and were unanimous in declaring they had had the time of their lives.

April 12 the Horticultural Society of New York had an Easter plant and flower exhibition at the Museum of Natural History. J. Austin Shaw.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

With the approach of Easter the flower stores and many nurseries are piled with all kinds of flowering plants, especially lilies, and although the lateness of this festival this year makes a large sale of plants and cut flowers somewhat doubtful, a generally optimistic view is prevailing. Easter lilies, the predominant plants for the occasion, are not quite as plentiful as in former years, but those on hand are of a good quality, especially the ones grown from Louisiana bulbs. Spiraea Japonica, both white and pink, are much less grown than in former years and, with the majority of the growers, have finished blooming. What is still on hand should find a ready sale and bring a good price.

Rhododendrons, lilacs and hydrangeas are scarce, as also is Azalea mollis, and every one of these plants on hand will surely go in a rush. The usual amount of lily of the valley is forced by the various florists, and the market gardeners will bring in their usual supply of small sized flowering plants of many varieties. Since the last month the sale of outdoor plants has increased considerably, and the frequent, heavy rains we have had of late helped the outdoor stock along a good deal. For two weeks the first gladioli, both light and dark colors, have been in the market. Spanish iris has had a short season and hardly any are to be cut now. The same can be said of sweet peas; in fact, outdoor flowers are at present exceedingly scarce. Asters are planted by many florists in greater quantities than in former years; so are single tuberose, and both of these furnish valuable summer cut flowers for different uses.

Many large orders for wedding decorations after Easter have been booked with several of our leading florists, and the different social functions following the dull lenten season will be gladly welcomed by all the florists.

Various Notes.

Abele Bros. have a nice lot of white hydrangeas in bloom. Their enlarged grounds are constantly restocked with all kinds of commercial shipping plants. They report the present season the best they have known in the last five years.

Doescher & Jones, a young and enterprising firm, have a fine and healthy stock of different varieties of nephrolepis of all sizes, besides a large collection of outdoor plants for shipping.

C. W. Eichling's Easter plants are in time. He has a well grown lot of lilies and spiraeas, besides his usual fine lily of the valley.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. has a large and elegant stock of Easter lilies (giganteum and longiflorum), also gloxinias, bougainvilleas, Spiraea Japonica, in white and pink varieties, and valley, besides a fine collection of foliage plants. The four large rose houses are still furnishing a constant supply of fine blooms, as well as thousands of cuttings to grow their own stock and for the shipping trade.

J. A. Newsham's Easter lilies are among the best in the city. They are mostly grown from Louisiana bulbs and have strong stems, with large, perfect flowers. Besides these, he has some elegant cattleyas for the holidays.

P. A. Chopin has his Easter lilies in first class shape. They are all grown from bulbs raised by himself in different parts of Louisiana. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01.
Officers for 1911: President, George Amus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dörner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

FROM Easter to Memorial day this year is only six weeks—none too long a time to get the bedding plants into condition and most of them sold.

THERE is complaint from all over the country that the giganteum lilies for Easter have flowered on too short stems to realize the hopes of the growers.

AFTER having been without a variegated carnation for several years, it looks as though a couple more seasons will see the markets heavily supplied with striped and blotched varieties.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

A GREAT many florists are buying more glass than they have any immediate intention of using; at present prices a few hundred boxes of glass on the place are a cheap form of insurance.

SPRING weddings will now be in order. Don't forget that the sweet pea is quite a different flower from what it was a few short years ago and that it is the coronation flower in England. Use the modern sweet pea in your spring work and you will make a hit.

THE annual report of the Society of American Florists was received April 6. It is the usual volume of 260 pages and contains the stenographic record of the Rochester convention of August, 1910, fully reported at the time in The Review, with lists of members, etc.

FEW of the florists who cater to local demand have had, in past seasons, enough stock to go around. For such as these the low price of glass this season is an unmixed blessing. There is no danger that the resulting sudden increase in supply, whatever it may do to the big wholesale markets, will work harm in the country at large.

GOSPEL.

A good many people find it easier to criticize what others do than it is to do something better themselves. The publicity work of the National Council of Horticulture may not have been or be perfect, it may not be as strong as the trade would like, but there are in it fundamentals that are worth bringing again to the attention of some professional planters, as well as the amateurs for whom they are intended. For instance, how often does one see a florist disregard one or more of the rules laid down in the following:

"It is just as important for the man or woman who would beautify his home to consider where to plant as what to plant. Never plant flowers in a round bed. Plant in long beds in front of shrubbery, where the flowers will have a background of green foliage. Plant the tall flowers at the back, especially those with brilliant colors, like cannas, hollyhocks, and the like. Instead of a big canna bed in the center of the lawn, string the cannas out, two or three plants deep, in front of tall shrubbery, preferably back in the yard. Plant smaller and more delicate flowers near the front. Put some sweet-scented varieties near the porch and the windows of the living room. Little triangular beds in the sharp corners of the walks are good, unless you already have roses planted there. Above all, watch the color scheme and do not put clashing colors together.

"Do not plant flowers at all unless you are prepared to take care of them. Starved, sick, discontented flowers cry out for help to every passer-by. If you will consider carefully the questions of suitable soil, proper fertilizer, and choose varieties which fit your location, however, you can have a flower garden which will richly repay every hour's attention that you give to it."

Every florist ought to practice these things as well as preach them.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

This is the busy week, the one in which the market handles a greater quantity of material than in any other one week in the year. The start was made Saturday, April 8, when most of the wholesale houses had the biggest day since Christmas. Prior to that the demand was what one of the wholesalers likes to call lackadaisical, and in the early days of the present week the business was spotty; some houses had more than their share, and others less, and a rush of morning orders would be followed by a dull afternoon, and vice versa. Bright, warm weather April 9 and 10 accelerated production to a marked extent and all flowers were plentiful, even Beauties being fully equal to the demand, though that is not saying much, for buyers have almost ceased asking for Beauties.

The opening of the present week found the wholesalers in a quandary. Easter always has produced the largest volume of business of any day in the year, but as late as April 10 the wholesalers were practically unanimous in saying that the business booked was far below what it was the Monday before Easter last year. A few houses were able to report the normal number of orders on hand, and some said they were well booked up on certain specialties, but in the aggregate the orders placed in advance have been extremely light. It is a peculiar circumstance that the business booked from city retailers is much heavier, in proportion, than the bookings from out of town; usually it is just the other way. What has become of the orders no one seems to know. The general impression is that the falling off in advance orders is due to two closely related circumstances. First of these is the general impression existing throughout the country that there will be an abundance of stock this Easter, and, second, the recollection that at Christmas there was a sharp break in prices. There is every confidence that the Easter business will in the end make as large a total as last year, if not larger, but about the best that can come now will be a deluge of late mail and telegraph orders. These will add to the difficulties of handling in three days as much business as is ordinarily done in three weeks.

A couple of bright days have added immensely to the supply of stock and it is the general statement that recent weather conditions have been all that anyone could ask. The quality of stock is much better than it ordinarily is at so late a date in spring. Beauties will be the one really short item. The failure of the growers to get a Beauty crop is the subject of wide remark. When the largest growers say they are unable to handle Beauty orders and practically everyone is in more or less the same boat, the observers wonder what combination of circumstances could be responsible for so unfortunate a result. Everyone in this market had more Beauties for Christmas than ever before was known, and everyone has had fewer since Christmas than in any previous year. The weeks from Christmas to Easter have passed with some of the largest places completely at a loss to get the Beauties into crop again, something that never before has happened. The shortage has been so long continued that the demand also has become extremely light. The general impression is that there will be other roses of superior quality to meet any possible demand.

At the opening of the week white carnations were scarce, a condition not generally noted at Easter. The opinion of many is that greenhouse storage rooms are full of them, but there are those who say that first-class carnations will be good property all this week. Single violets are gone, but the doubles coming in are better than usual for the middle of April. Bulbous stock bloomed indoors is not in large supply, but there are uncounted thousands of the Virginia jonquils. Sweet peas are not so abundant as they were a fortnight or so ago, and the better quality sells excellently, though at no fancy prices. Orchids are slightly less abundant. Valley is among the most plentiful of items.

The predictions that the bulk of the lilies will be short-stemmed are turning out to be true; some of the houses found themselves sold out of long-stemmed lilies early in the week, while they had an abundance of short-stemmed stock. Under the circumstances long lilies ought to be worth the prices, but with so many shorts seeking a buyer it serves to demoralize values on all grades, for there still are long fancy lilies to be had in quantity, advance orders having been lighter than was expected.

who are looking for novelty can find a number of innovations in that.

A. Zech, chairman of the bowling committee, reported on the club's expedition to Milwaukee on a recent Sunday and stated that Milwaukee will return the visit May 7. He was authorized to provide entertainment. His committee also was empowered to do everything necessary to arrange for a picnic on a Sunday in July or August. A. C. Kohlbrand and Alex. Henderson reported on the entertainment of the English visitors in March and C. W. Johnson told of the expedition to the National Flower Show.

Frank Kral, William Horbitz, E. A. Ollinger and G. L. Klimmeck were elected to membership and an application was received from William Merchwart.

A. S. Swanson, of Elmhurst, showed a vase of his new winter-flowering Countess Spencer sweet pea.

W. J. Keimel promised a paper on rose growing for the June meeting.

Various Notes.

It is stated that W. E. Lynch, who for ten years has had charge of the cut flower department at E. H. Hunt's, is planning to go into the growing end of the business on his own account in the near future.

C. W. McKellar is one of the wholesalers who is handling Easter plants this week.

The first prize of $25 for best window decoration during the recent carnival at Evanston and Wilson avenues was won by Leopold Koropp with an exceptionally neat window of jonquils with a background of mirrors and streamers in the carnival colors, orange and purple.

James Psenecka, for several years foreman for Wiator Bros., is preparing to devote his time to the business at Wilmette started last season by himself and V. Bezdek under the name of the Northwestern Floral Co. Kyle & Foerster, who handle the output of the Wilmette concern, say that three new houses are to be added this year.

W. N. Rudd is sending the E. F. Winterson Co. this week large shipments of Easter pot plants, including lilies, well flowered Crimson Ramblers and spiræas.

E. E. Pieser says he thinks the flurry in ferns is over; that certain large holders were merely waiting for the prices to get to their liking.

Stollery Bros. won second prize on decorated automobile in the street fair at Wilson and Evanston avenues last week.

A. Lange has sent out an attractive 8-page Easter retail price list. Many of the other retailers have sent out special Easter printed matter.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business last week was good, considering the approaching storm. Easter prospects are quite promising. In fact, if the present fine weather holds out, there is every indication that all previous records will be broken. Large shipments of plants are being made daily by local plant growers.

The outlook for a good supply of cut flowers is bright, and it is the opinion of the retailers in general that the sale of cut flowers will be by far the best in the history of the city. Carnations will not be in as large supply as in some former years, but there will be enough to fill all orders. The indications are that violets will be good. Sweet peas are good, but by no means equal to the demand.

The large growers of Easter lilies report that these flowers will be well cleaned up, and on Monday, April 10, many growers of lilies and other plants were sold out.

Various Notes.

The report of the only exhibit by a retailer at last week's show, held by the Detroit Florists' Club, was unintentionally omitted in last week's notes. This one exhibit was unusually interesting and consisted of three attractive baskets of the newest in roses—Double pink Killarney, Aaron Ward and Irish Melody—and was staged by Albert Pochelon, of the Bemb Floral Co.

Ere long, horses will be used only for hauling soil by Detroit retail florists. J. F. Sullivan placed an order for an Oliver this week and W. B. Brown is having a delivery body built upon a newly purchased Beyster chassis.

No doubt one of the busiest men in town is Michael Bloy. He is doing both a retail and wholesale business and is working night and day.

April 9, showed a splendid collection of Easter plants, just waiting to be sent to their respective purchasers. Specially noticeable were the fine azaleas and hydrangeas.

Charles Warneke opened a store in the Valpey building, at 213 Woodward avenue, April 10, to be conducted during Easter week only.

C. H. Plumb, one of the largest plant growers here, was completely sold out on Monday, and when seen by the writer he was seriously pondering the problem of delivering all his plants. Another large grower, F. Meisel, was also sold out.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange reports a large sale of plants and on Sunday, April 9, the force worked all day, getting out thirty-one cases of plants. Fancy ferns are a strong leader with this firm and are being shipped to all parts of the country.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House is preparing for a big sale of cut flowers this Easter.

An important meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club will be held the Monday evening following Easter and every member is urged to attend, as this meeting is of the utmost importance.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market is fairly active, yet conditions are hardly satisfactory. The weather has had a steadying effect, keeping up quality and retarding the crops; still there has not been enough business to market all the flowers at listed prices.

The chief interest at the close of the present week, April 12, centers on Easter. Carnations advanced April 10, closely followed by callas, in anticipation of the demand for the churches for Holy Thursday. Sweet peas and violets have joined in the upward movement. But the important lilies and roses are expected to show little or no advance. There are immense crops of both Easter lilies and lilies of the valley in sight—crops too large to warrant any advance, except for the finest selected stock. The rose crops are likely to be fairly heavy. With such a wealth of other material, a general advance is not warranted.

There was a scarcity of white carnations on one or two days of the last week. Snapdragons are plentiful and cheap. Cattleyas have shortened decidedly. Single violets are still obtainable. Southern daffodils have arrived in fine shape. Beauties are more abundant. Delicate pink roses have been rather light in color. There has been no lily surplus.

Palm Sunday.

Every florist who has Easter plants expects his friends and neighbors to call on him on Palm Sunday and see all there is to be seen. Of course even the most energetic could not see more than a few of the many pretty sights to be seen in and around Philadelphia; as the pre-Easter season has been unusually active a little let-up seems permissible and instead of spending the entire day going from place to place one was selected. The choice fell on William K. Harris. There were two reasons for this; first and foremost, Mark Patton Mills had extended one of those cordial invitations that are a distinction in themselves and—matter of interest to a newspaper man—there was a little invitation in the papers to see the Easter show at Harris's on Palm Sunday.

I have been there before on that day, always in the morning, with a select few securing a stage rehearsal, so to speak, of the afternoon performance. I have there listened with deep interest to discussions in which his Grace of York and other famous horticultural celebrities took part; discussions on, for instance, the exact proportions of white and of green that should properly appear in a high-bred variegated plant of this or that variety. To go in the afternoon when the crowd was there was a treat never before enjoyed.

It was glorious. West Philadelphia came in force, despite the cold winds, undismayed by the inch of snow, fast disappearing, that had startled them on waking that morning. Fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, youngsters, lovers, all were there enjoying the beautiful sight. The shed was arranged as it always is, with groups of plants in half circles down the sides between the greenhouse doors; orders, we are told, ready for loading on wagons the instant Sunday shall have passed. The mixture of colors gives a peculiarly brilliant effect, toned by the darker surroundings. The houses were mostly open to the visitors. Officers were there to keep the crowd moving to the right to avoid conflict and congestion. It was an inspiring sight that should certainly be of lasting benefit.

There was a sprinkling of the profession. Israel Rosnosky was there. "A fine show, but not equal to Boston," he said. Such comparison is a compliment. Mark P. Mills was there, with a cheerfulness yet a gravity becoming in a man who has just one week's time to place most of the contents of some ris secured one bulb of the genuine simon-pure stock from a careful gardener to whom he had sold this variety when at the zenith of its fame. This bulb in such hands must have produced something in these four years, hence the question. Mr. Harris smiled thoughtfully and led the way to a barred greenhouse door that gave the manly physique of Mr. Shoch a close squeeze before admitting him. Once within the house and the door closed to the curious throng without, Mr. Harris led the way to the extreme end, where there was a noble group of the true Lilium Harrisii grown from bulbs of walnut size. These lilies showed their pyramidal form and handsome flowers to advantage. "This is my hobby," Mr. Harris said, "a toy that gives me pleasure. You know I helped my father care for this lily when a child; it has associations. My toy is proving profitable, too. These lilies are all sold as cut blooms to one man; no one knows where they go." It occurred to me this was strikingly true. "I shall keep the bulbs and have perhaps an exclusive strain of rare merit."

You may think that to write a paragraph just on a lily with such a wealth of material about you is improvidently wasteful. Yet remember, kind friend, that this was a holiday; the joyous laughter of children, inquiries of flower lovers, the throng everywhere, is the excuse. The jam was so great that when the time was up, leaving would have been a slow matter were it not for the courtesy and key of Edward Linwood.

Easter at Moorestown.

Visitors to the Floracraft Greenhouses of Walter P. Stokes have been rewarded by a really magnificent sight. One large King house is entirely filled with specimen hydrangeas, many of them in tubs—all unstaked. Just think of it, a house of big hydrangeas, a sea of pink and nary a stake! Is not that a feather in the cap of Edward Ross?

Lilies, too, are well done—taller than last year. And valley—yes, 75,000 of it; the kind of valley that makes Mr. Stokes wonder what brand to select to impress on all the fact that Floracraft valley is the standard. Why not call it Floracraft?

The Market.

Trade has been quiet for some days. The arrivals of flowers have fallen off somewhat, preparatory no doubt to the customary Easter pickling process, but the demand has been light. This, however, is the rule just before Easter and everyone is anticipating a bumper business at the end of the present week. The supply of Easter lilies appears to be about normal. With giganteums, which are mainly grown here, the complaint has been less of disease than the extreme dwarfness of the plants, many not exceeding a foot in height. Good lilies, either cut or in pots, are readily making $12.50 per hundred, but a good many are being sold at $10 and a few even less. These latter, however, are not first quality flowers at all.

Carnations have been abundant at from $1 to $3. There will be an ample offering of these for Easter and low prices on pickled stock are probable. Roses are in heavy supply. The warmer weather last week greatly increased the cut and caused a reduction in prices. American Beauties are of extra fine quality and rather more plentiful, but the Killarneys remain leaders.

Single violets are about done; such as still arrive are getting small. Some nice coldframe stock will last until Easter. There is still a good quantity of doubles, these usually flowering until the middle of May. Sweet peas are in tremendous supply, and the quality is superb. It is noticed that colors other than white, pink and lavender are hard to sell, dark blue and purple especially so. A few of the Countess Spencer type are now arriving. Dutch bulbous flowers continue abundant. Of Spanish iris the supply is increasing. Gladioli of the large-flowered types are coming in, but none of the small-flowered ones. Antirrhinums are fine and good colors sell well. Quite a number of stocks are seen. These sell better at Memorial day than now. Marguerites are increasing in quantity; the yellows are of grand quality and sell well. There is a heavy supply of pansies and more English primroses than a week ago. Mignonette is still seen of good quality. Callas are overplentiful. Valley continues to move rather slowly. Orchids are scarce, but not in much demand. Gardenias are plentiful and cheaper. Green supplies are selling better.

Trade in pot plants is now active and some of the largest growers are already pretty well sold out. In ramblers Tausendschon, Hiawatha and Dorothy Perkins are most in evidence. Some nice hybrids and Clothilde Souperts are also coming in. Among other plants seen are quite a variety of hydrangeas. These, however, are less popular at Easter than Memorial day. Marguerites are selling well, also genistas, ericas, Acacia paradoxa and azaleas. Deciduous shrubs in variety are being featured quite a little, and in the way of small and cheaper plants geraniums are being picked up in considerable numbers. In spiræas the pink Queen Alexandra is seen well flowered, as well as grandiflora, Gladstone and astilboides.

Various Notes.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. have had quite a call for lilies in pots. These they ship direct from the greenhouses to their customers. They are looking for a bumper Easter business. They state that the National Flower Show proved a grand advertisement for them, as it brought them many new customers. They have just shipped orders to Michigan, Illinois, Canada and Manchester, England.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, has a fine crop of annual chrysanthemums coming into flower. Winsor and Pink Delight carnations are extra fine with him just now.

The large new white carnation, Genevieve, which secured a silver medal for Patten & Co. at the recent exhibition, will be worth watching. It is a fancy flower and the fragrance beats that of any white on the market. They have had a heavy call for rooted cuttings this season.

C. E. Holbrow, of Brighton, has a beautiful lot of rambler roses, marguerites and other Easter plants.

Edward MacMulkin has an interesting group of named cacti as a feature in the center of his big show window. He has a fine lot of Erica cupressina and splendid batches of specimen azaleas, bougainvilleas, acacias, ramblers and other Easter plants.

Among those still bringing in single violets of excellent quality are Kidder Bros. and C. A. Sanborn, of Woburn; with doubles, H. F. Calder is still strong, also W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton.

Thomas Pegler has added a fine cash register to his equipment at the Boston Flower Exchange. He is handling at present quantities of excellent gladioli of the large-flowered type from W. A. Riggs, of Auburndale.

The finest golden yellow trumpet narcissus seen at the recent exhibition was King Alfred. This has a mammoth flower which completely places Golden Spur in the shade. William Patterson, of Wollaston, Paine Bros. and Mann Bros. have all grown some this season. Lester Mann states, however, that it will not force successfully, and as the bulbs are about $1 each yet, it is unlikely to be heavily grown commercially for some time.

to Pink Delight and Enchantress in the light pink class. All their carnations have stems of exceptional length. They sold over 8,000 sweet peas April 9.

William Sim is rapidly filling his numerous violet houses with tomatoes. His shipments of sweet peas are now immense in quantity and superb in quality.

P. L. Carbone is showing some grand standard Hiawatha roses and beautiful specimens of Ghent azaleas in pink, white and yellow; also quite a variety of charming deciduous flowering shrubs.

Frank J. Dolansky, of Lynn, has as usual an excellent lot of lilies, acacias, genistas and other flowering plants for Easter.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, have this season 4,000 spikes of Liliun candidum, the true broad-petaled type. The contrast between this and the narrow-petaled sort is marked. The latter is simply worthless in the market, but big bulbs offered at a low rate continue to tempt buyers.

Mrs. J. F. Flood, of Woburn, is just recovering from a serious sickness. Mr. Flood finds a ready market for all the Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri he can grow.

Herman Waldecker, of Braintree, among his other specialties has at present a fine lot of geraniums flowering in small pots, also sweet peas and mignonette, in addition to his main crop, which is carnations.

Adolph Koch, of Nobscot, has exceptionally good antirrhinums. He grows these in 7-inch pots, which he stands at intervals along his carnation houses, allowing them to root through. By this method he secures as many as fifteen to twenty spikes on many of his plants.

W. W. Edgar Co. has a capital lot of hybrid perpetual roses in pots for Easter, embracing many of the leading varieties. They have hit it just right with their lilies. White genistas, hydrangeas, acacias, azaleas, etc., are all in prime shape. H. H. Bartsch was in charge of the W. W. Edgar exhibit at the late national show and not J. F. Edgar.

Peirce Bros., of Waverley, have a fine lot of lilies for Easter, also large quantities of azaleas. Of gladioli they will have many thousands in a short time.

The finest pots of lily of the valley ever seen here are those grown by J. T. Butterworth for Easter. W. N. Craig.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Although the weather last week was not the best, trade nevertheless was encouraging. There was a continual demand for funeral work and every florist seemed to have a liberal share of it and there was plenty of one kind of stock or another to keep pace with the call.

Lilies now rule the market, but carnations are a decidedly scarce article. They are completely off crop and the dull weather of the last two weeks has not helped the situation. Roses are right in their glory, as they are fine in quality and abundant in quantity, while American Beauties are in a flourishing condition. It has been necessary to do a little scheming in order to keep the Dutch bulbs back, but in spite of best efforts many will be ready too soon; consequently a loss is expected along that line. Valley will be plentiful for Easter, likewise daffodils and narcissi. The outdoor daffodils will also be right in line, which is something the florists prefer not to see at this time.

Green goods are exceedingly scarce. Pot plants, such as spiraeas, azaleas, etc., are in good demand, the supply being equal to it thus far.

Trade throughout the lenten season

Club Meeting.

The Dayton Florists' Club held its regular monthly business meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Young, 105 Holt street. After a short business session, the club adjourned for a social hour. There was an exceptionally good attendance and Mr. and Mrs. Young proved themselves to be royal entertainers. Dainty refreshments were served, and a good time enjoyed by all. H. H. Ritter, the retiring president of the club, was presented with a beautiful walking stick as a token of appreciation of the faithful services he has rendered to the club in the two years of his administration. Mr. and Mrs. Horace Frank favored the guests with several vocal selections that were greatly enjoyed.

New York, April 10.—Mushrooms arriving late today and feeling less firm. Cucumbers plenty and weak. Lettuce steady. Other stock without change. Beet tops, 50c to 60c box; cucumbers, 60c to 90c doz.; lettuce, $1.50 to $2.25 strap; mint, 65c to 75c dozen bunches; mushrooms, 75c to $1.75 4-lb. basket; radishes, $2 to $2.75 hundred bunches; rhubarb, 25c to 65c dozen bunches; tomatoes, 5c to 10c lb.

ROOT-ROT OF LETTUCE.

I have been growing lettuce for two seasons, in rich soil on the ground level. I have been cutting Grand Rapids weighing from half a pound to a pound and a half. Yet, in spite of ventilation and cultivation, I am troubled somewhat by root-rot. Would equal parts of sulphur and lime, sprinkled over the soil and worked into the soil between crops, help any? Would the sulphur injure the lettuce of the succeeding crop? Would chrysanthemums grown in this soil be affected by the same fungus? H. S. M.

Lime and sulphur are much used for this fungus, which spreads over the surface of the soil, causing the young plants to rot off and fall over. It is usually applied only to the affected parts of the beds, after removing the rotted plants.

I am wondering if you are not watering too often. Fresh air is most important, and careful watering next, in preventing all lettuce diseases. Water well when you do water, so it will not be necessary to water so often, and do not keep the soil too wet. In the winter months less water is required. Cultivating the surface soil will also help it to dry out on top and to keep sweeter. Water carefully between the plants and do not wet them any more than is necessary.

I do not think the sulphur could do any harm to the next crop, as the percentage of sulphur would be small. It is customary, however, to scrape off the top soil and wheel it out before spading under. This takes out some disease and insects and would get the sulphur out also. Chrysanthemums would not get the same fungus.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business is about the same as previously reported; funeral work constitutes the major demand, with an occasional wedding to help out. The counter trade is brisk, but usually of small amounts, and the totals are discouraging. Stock is plentiful in almost every line, and close attention is required to keep it on the move. Sweet peas are plentiful, but violets are becoming scarce and a few days more of sunshine will put them out of the market.

The Easter stock of lilies matured early and some of the growers had trouble in keeping stock back till it was needed. Ramblers, tulips and rhododendrons about round up the potted stock and, of course, lilacs are in great demand.

Outside flowers are progressing rapidly, tulips and hyacinths are at their height and lilacs will soon follow, but there is hesitancy about putting out bedding stock, as all danger of frost has not passed.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

The weather of the last month has been all that could be desired and, while some of the garden stuff is not as far advanced as in previous years, still we feel well satisfied, especially when we read of the cold, disagreeable weather our eastern friends are having to contend with. Bulbous stock is blooming outside and it looks as though that kind of material will be plentiful for Easter. Carnations are of a good quality, but the supply seems to be rather limited. Valley and roses are scarce and are bringing a good price.

Pot plants seem especially scarce, with hardly an azalea to be seen. Ferns and palms are in good demand, but are mostly of the smaller grades; no one seems to care to go in for the larger sizes. Most growers are having trouble with their Easter lilies and it seems that we Tacoma growers have been given a bad lot of bulbs in general. Most of them will be on time, but there seems to be too great a variation in height, some of the giganteums ranging from six to thirty-six inches in height.

LACY CO.,

R. D. No 189. Fruitvale, Oakland, Cal.

Business last week was unusually good, due, perhaps, to the visit of our esteemed ex-president, Mr. Roosevelt.

Various Notes.

The Floricultural Society met in its new club room in the Chamber of Commerce building April 6. After a general business meeting it was unanimously voted to hold a rose show in Tacoma about June 20. A committee of five, Messrs. Olson, Halkier, Seamons, Bentheim and Smith, was appointed to make arrangements. Mr. Roberts has been asked to lecture on roses at the next regular meeting.

J. L. S.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Everything in town is satisfactory with the exception of retail trade, but the less said about that the better. There is such a superabundance of all kinds of stock that prices have been thrown to the winds and the growers take about what they are lucky enough to get and say nothing. There is a decrease in bulbous stock, however, and daffodils, early tulips and narcissi are not quite as much in evidence as they have been. Gesnerianas and other late kinds of tulips move fairly well, but at low prices. Irises in several shades, as well as peonies, help to keep up the showing, together with a world of fruit blossoms, lilac and native wild flowers and greens. From all accounts, there will be a great quantity of stock for Easter and prices, in consequence, are liable to be lower than they were a year ago.

The Spring Flower Show.

The spring bulb show, given under the auspices of the California State Floral Society and the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, from March 30 to April 2, was one of the most successful ever given here, both from a financial and artistic standpoint. The general public took a tremendous interest, as the heavy attendance showed, and practically all the growers in San Francisco and vicinity aided, both by their exhibits and attendance. The weather was all that could be desired and everything was just right. The display of seasonable flowers was the finest ever shown in San Francisco, and too much credit can not be given to those who had the affair in charge. Although it was too early for much of an assortment of outside stock, with the exception of bulbs, these, with a large variety of greenhouse flowers and flowering plants, filled the large hall at the Fairmount hotel.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. had a large and dazzling array of potted azaleas, wistarias, palms and evergreens

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, June 20 to 22, 1911.

COUNTER trade will come with a rush when it does come.

VISITED CHICAGO: Carlos Jensen, manager of export trade for L. Daehnfelddt, Odense, Denmark.

HENRY NUNGESSER, president of Henry Nungesser & Co., steamed for Europe April 5 on the Mauretania.

JOHN S. WEAVER, of the Glen Mawr Seed Farms, Kinzers, Pa., is planning to attend the Fourth International Gentile Conference, to be held at Paris, September 18 to 23.

THE southern part of France experienced, April 5 and 6, the coldest weather of the winter. Reports imply much damage to crops for the export seed and bulb trade, but it almost always is that these first tales of disaster are much exaggerated.

E. D. ROBERTS, the seed corn man from Red Oak, Iowa, who escaped prosecution in the courts of Benton county last fall on a technicality, has been indicted by the federal grand jury at Council Bluffs on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

MAIL order seed trade has held up better than it usually does after the peak of the season is passed. Weather conditions have changed little since the early part of March; in fact, many sections of the country had colder weather in the first week of April than they experienced in the first part of March.

THE crop improvement committee of the Council of North American Grain Exchanges is waging an active campaign for the use of better-bred seed by grain growers. A booklet of 132 pages has just been issued, containing much that will interest seed dealers. Copies may be had by addressing Bert Ball, secretary, Board of Trade building, Chicago.

NEW YORK SEED LAW AGAIN.

The seed trade in the state of New York is again called upon to rally around the flag of rational seed legislation. Assemblyman Gregg introduced a bill known as No. 834 in the state legislature March 3, which demands the united opposition of the trade. The bill has been read once and referred to the committee on agriculture. Marshall H. Duryea, who is the New York state correspondent of the American Seed Trade Association, is arranging to have a hearing on the bill, to take place sometime after April 17, to which date the legislature has adjourned owing to the recent fire in the state capitol. The trade will be informed through this col-

In commenting on the matter Mr. Duryea says: "You will note in reading this bill that it is of the utmost importance, not only to the seedsmen of the state of New York, but to the seedsmen in other parts of the country as well. Unfortunately, the matter has come up at a very inopportune time of the year, but I hope as many New York seedsmen as possible will be present when the hearing on the bill comes up."

The provisions of this article shall not apply to any person growing and selling agricultural seeds to seed merchants, or shipping to a general market to be cleaned or graded before being offered or exposed for sale for seeding purposes.

Sec. 341. Samples, publication of results of examination. Samples of seed shall be taken in duplicate. ENGLISH SEEDSMEN ALARMED.

The seed trade in England is in a high state of excitement over the proposal to fix an arbitrary legal standard of germination for seeds; they see in it the ruin of the English industry of seed growing, as it not infrequently happens that in unfavorable seasons the germination of the crop from the finest pedigreed stocks is below the standard fixed by the proposed law. On this subject Watkins & Simpson say:

"We are wondering what would have to be done after seasons such as the last two we have experienced, when the germination of seeds produced by nature after such bad summers and harvests, was so much below the normal standard, and, of course, below the rigidly fixed standard which would be in vogue. Some seasons it would mean that nearly all seeds would have to be got from abroad in order to sell them with the required standard of germination, and English seeds, we suppose, would have to be thrown away; as it has often happened and will probably in the future, that we get bad seasons and harvests when the continent of Europe and America have good seasons and harvest weather; and in fact they generally have better seasons than we do. But if we had seasons recurring such as the last two it would become impossible to sell seeds at all, as the germination produced all over Europe has been more or less the same and much below the usual standard of germination, and if seedsmen are bound to deliver a high standard of growth or germination they must, for their own protection, of course, insist upon the same high standard being delivered to them by the English farmers, who are the actual growers and producers, from the seedsmen's pedigree stocks, of the seeds they sell. Will this help the farmer?"

"How are the difficulties of this sort, we wonder, to be got over by such grandmotherly legislation? You know, as we know, that farmers and horticulturists would far prefer to have

The Market.

Business last week was fairly good. The downtown florists say they had a good transient trade all the week, while the uptown florists say business dragged a little. Great business is expected all over the city this week, the last of Lent; at least, great preparations are being made for Easter. The weather has kept cool and the growers say that everything will be just right in plants and cut flowers. The wholesale market was in good condition all last week and large consignments are expected all of this week, as well as plenty of stock for Easter orders which have been placed ahead.

Lilies will be more plentiful than was expected. Carnations have been coming in heavily all the week and will continue so this week, with prices not over $5 per hundred for extra fancies. Roses, too, will be plentiful. Long, fancy Beauties and other roses are now arriving in large lots. Killarneys in all varieties, Maryland, Ivory, Richmond, Bride and Maid are of extra fine quality. Violets will be scarce. The cool weather, however, has helped them greatly and many more will be in than are usually expected at this late date. Lily of the valley is fine; so, also, are candidum and auratum lilies; in fact, all bulb stock is expected to come in heavily this week. Sweet peas will be abundant in all colors, with extra long stems, at 75 cents per hundred.

Smilax and asparagus are having a big call. Common ferns are still scarce.

Various Notes.

Dr. Noah M. Glatfelter, a noted botanist, died here last week. He was 73 years old. A son and three daughters survive him. He was famed for his knowledge of willow trees and as an authority on mushrooms. He was well known among the trade here and abroad. His death was caused by a fall from a ladder while looking over the trees in his garden.

Joseph A. Matter, at 3530 Watson road, has made application for membership in the Florists' Club.

A. Jablonsky and W. C. Young made the rounds of the growers in the southern part of the city last week, and say they found them all in excellent shape for the Easter trade and the stock all of extra good quality.

Peter Craig, representing the Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago, called on the trade here last week, selling florists' boxes. Mr. Craig reports a satisfactory southern trip.

Robert F. Tesson, well known in the trade, called last week, visiting friends. Mr. Tesson now runs a successful dairy farm in Clayton, Mo.

Frank Fillmore's place is in fine shape for Easter and spring business. He is again first in with a fine cut of candidum lilies. Mr. Fillmore is growing Dorothy Gordon and Pink Delight carnations with good success. A fine bench of lilies and hydrangeas was seen, as well as a good line of bedding stock.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, is still cutting a fine lot of his new violet, Mazzura. The Smith Wholesale Floral Co., which handles the output, says the

We understand some people are offended occasionally by our advertising. Now we don't expect to please everybody and we are always willing to be criticised, for none of us are perfect in our lives; but it seems strange that no one will write us just why they are offended. Some people like to be lathered with flattery and then massaged with egotistical slush. It makes them feel their oats, as the farmer says, and, as soon as they are truth-struck, it paralyzes them. Their judgment is so warped that their thoughts run like a scenic railway car. Be a man and use common sense. If we are wrong, criticise us—we want criticism. The only difference between us and some other firms in this line is, that we tell you right out what we think, while the others think the same but say nothing. Don't be afraid of just criticism; you ought to be thankful for it. Our goods we praise because we sincerely believe they are positively the best imported. We don't care what others say nor what the prices of other firms are—we make our own prices and we deliver the goods—the best money can buy.

Friday, April 7, was Arbor day in St. Louis. The school children planted trees all over the city. It was celebrated at Fairground, where Mayor Kreismann, Dr. Wm. YONKERS, N. Y.

Friday, April 7, a well attended meeting of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held and several matters of interest discussed. The executive committee reported that the rose show will be held June 14 and all seems favorable to a most successful exhibition. Three associate members and one active member were elected, and two active and one associate proposed.

Some fine melons, Sutton's Scarlet, were exhibited by M. Grey, superintendent of Greystone, who received a cultural commendation. Louis Milliot exhibited the new rose, Veilchenblau, but the variety did not impress members as being suitable for forcing.

Hamilton Scott was elected president and Messrs. Rennison and Milliot were nominated members of the executive committee.

H. Nichols read an interesting and instructive paper, taking as his subject, hardy roses. The meeting closed after according the essayist a standing vote of thanks for his services. H. M. B.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

In the northern part of the country the season has been so late in opening up that nurserymen fear the sudden arrival of summer before they can get away with the big volume of business that is in sight. A short rush season never pans out like one that is longer and more deliberate.

IMPROVING PROPAGATION.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin (B. P. I. No. 202) in which the subject of "The Seedling-Inarch and Nurse-Plant Methods of Propagation" in connection with tropical and subtropical fruits and ornamental plants is discussed.

The seedling-inarch method, it is believed, is destined to prove of the greatest importance in a wide range of plant industries in which the early fruiting of a variety is desirable. This shortening by a year or more of the time required for the fruiting of a new variety is a matter of such unusual importance as to demand the widest publicity among all interested in the cultivation.

While investigating the asexual propagation of some tropical fruit trees and other plants, it was discovered that a large number of hard-wooded shrubs and trees are capable of a rapid increase when propagated by processes which may be termed the seedling-inarch and nurse-plant methods.

These methods are inexpensive and, owing to their simplicity, may be used by persons without previous experience in the propagation of plants. The ever-increasing number of plant breeders will thus be enabled to save much time in determining the value of hard-wooded plants raised by means of hybridization. The methods can be used in manipulating seedlings of rare trees and shrubs intended for crossing, so that each plant will bloom in a much shorter time than if left to grow on its own roots. Seedlings of all hard-wooded plants resulting from collections made by travelers in foreign countries may thus be brought to the flowering stage and their value determined quickly.

The most remarkable feature of the new methods lies not only in their simplicity, but also in the certainty of the unions which result. The writer has few unsuccessful unions and none among diameter as the stem of a seedling. A satisfactory union may thus be induced where other methods of asexual propagation have invariably failed.

Very young seedlings of hundreds of rare hard-wooded plants may be worked on the same or allied species or genera and their value determined much in advance of the time when they would flower on their own roots or on plants obtained by grafting or budding from the mature shoots of the seedlings.

Hard-wooded seedlings which need to be flowered in the shortest possible space of time, in order to determine their value, are used for inarching as soon as the first leaves attain a fairly firm texture; but when seedlings are used as stocks for the vegetative propagation of established varieties by uniting the stock to small branches, then larger seedlings are used.

The methods of propagation followed up to the present time have all been more or less faulty and cumbersome. The budding of seedlings in nursery rows requires the service of a trained propagator who knows what to do and how and when to do it. The average cultivator can hardly hope to acquire the skill necessary for the operation; moreover, there is always danger of loss from transplanting budded seedlings. Propagation by the older method of inarching on plants growing in 5-inch and 6-inch pots, sometimes for more than a year, is an expensive method, necessitating the erection of strong staging around the parent trees for the accommodation of the plants in pots; moreover, the roots of the seedlings become curled in the pots and make it

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade here for the last two weeks has been good, with plenty of stock. Roses are in fine condition and are quite plentiful. Carnations are in good shape and, with fair weather, there will be a heavy cut for Easter. Enchantress is more plentiful than any other variety and is the best seller. Sweet peas are coming in heavily and are good sellers. Valley is in good supply and is generally cleaned up.

There will be quite a lot of bulbous stock on the market for Easter, and the outlook is bright for a good supply of cut stock of all kinds and also a fine lot of blooming plants. There is a lot of fine Crimson and Baby Ramblers. Azaleas will be in good shape and there will probably be enough to go around. Some of the bulb stock may be a little soft, but the most of it will be in good condition.

Various Notes.

The club dance, given April 5, was quite a success again and brought a good number of the craft together for a good time.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting heavily in carnations and has a fine batch of ramblers which are just right.

Sherman Stephens reports heavy business in funeral work and expects a big Easter trade.

E. Metzmaier is looking forward to a brisk trade for Easter and says business is heavy in all lines.

William Graff has been "under the weather," but hopes to be better in time for the Easter rush. J. M.

Binghamton, N. Y.—C. H. Wilbur has bought the residence adjoining his greenhouses, at 124 Oak street, and is now occupying it.

Springfield, O.—The Snyder park board has accepted the proposition of the Florists' Club to make a rose garden in Snyder park, and a committee, consisting of Superintendent McIntire of the park and Member McGregor of the board, has been appointed to confer with members of the club

Has your order of Rose Stock been placed?

If not, it should be at once, and we are in the market to supply it. Remember that we are headquarters for grafted Roses, and are especially strong on Standard Commercial varieties.

We are ready to supply in quantity, as well as quality, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, My Maryland, Kaiserin, Bride and Bridesmaid.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The feature of last week was a tremendous glut of carnations, which, however, were cleaned up Saturday by making considerable sacrifice in prices. There was a great oversupply in all varieties except, perhaps, the white, but with a number of the growers they are going off crop and will be a little short for Easter.

Roses of good quality are holding up fairly well. Quite a number of inferior quality are seen on the market, but this has been due to the long spell of cloudy weather. However, every day shows some improvement. Some few violets are still to be had, but they are of inferior quality.

Of daffodils there seems no end, and the price has been cut to two dozen for 5 cents and over 30,000 were left on the street Saturday night. The trade in pot plants is picking up and fine large specimens of spiræas, rhododendrons and azaleas are to be seen in the windows. Hyacinths and tulips are moving fairly well.

Various Notes.

Mr. Richmond, the superintendent of exhibits of the S. A. F., reports a heavy run on floor space for the coming convention. He sold over 7,000 square feet at the Boston show and still has a few prominent spaces left. Q.

MARKET FOR PROVIDENCE.

About a dozen flower growers in Providence and adjoining towns are talking up a scheme to form a flower exchange, such as is successfully operated in Boston and other large cities, and while the plan has not got beyond the paper stage, there is a probability that it will be carried out.

Growers have been dissatisfied with the methods that have to be employed now. Unless they have a ready and constant market for their flowers they are forced to go to the different retail florists and try to sell whatever they want. The scheme which has been talked up is to hire some suitable quarters in the wholesale district of the city and there the growers will congregate every morning with the flowers they have for sale. The local retail florists would then go to the exchange, find more readily what they want from the supplies of several growers and the work for both the grower and the retail florist would be greatly facilitated.

The New Fern Nephrolepis Dreyerii. (Sport of Boston.)

The New Fern Nephrolepis Dreyerii

(SPORT OF BOSTON)

GROWN BY

G. DREYER, Elmhurst, Long Island, New York

THIS New Fern, when exhibited at the S. A. F. & O. H. Convention last August, received the following description: "Nephrolepis Dreyerii has many good points which will render it popular. It makes a quick growth, is compact, of good color, and stands considerable rough treatment, adapting itself to almost any condition. It is of the Scottii type, but not as stiff, the fronds drooping gracefully, giving the plant a very attractive appearance."

Price: 2 1/4-inch pots, per 100, $25.00; per 1000, $200.00.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was dull last week, funeral work composing the main call. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful and the outlook for Easter is good. The indications are that stock of all kinds will be abundant. Quantities of lilies are to be had and other pot plants are also numerous; therefore it will take an enormous trade to clean things up.

Various Notes.

A. W. Brandt suffered a loss of about $100 one day last week, when the wind broke a plate glass window in the front of his store. The corner policeman pulled an old man away from the window just in time to keep him from being cut and a woman in the store fainted when the glass collapsed.

E. A. Nelson is well fixed with blooming plants for Easter. He has several hundreds of the best spiræas that are to be seen about the city. He also has a fine lot of hydrangeas, azaleas and lilies. Mr. Nelson recently invested in two new wagons, one a top delivery wagon and the other a large two-horse open wagon. The latter is equipped with two removable decks, and Mr. Nelson expects to haul enough plants in one load during the bedding season to keep two men busy all day. Mrs. Nelson, who has been ill, is slowly recovering.

A. Wiegand & Sons are well supplied with blooming plants for Easter. They have an unusually fine lot of lilies this year. They are also well stocked with rambler roses, hydrangeas, lilacs, azaleas, spiræas and other plants. This firm has been cutting large quantities of cattleyas lately.

The Pahud Floral Co. has deferred building for another year. Recently this firm purchased glass and expected to rebuild the entire place this year, but circumstances necessitated a change in plans.

The Smith & Young Co. has been cutting some of the best sweet peas seen in this market this year.

Ollie Hobbs, of the Bridgeport Nurseries, has been ill with pneumonia. Mr. Hobbs has charge of the Indianapolis branch of the business, and it is suffering considerably on account of his absence, as this is the busy season.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. recently made a delivery of a large funeral order to Shelbyville, a distance of about thirty miles, using the auto delivery truck for the purpose.

Nature's Best Fertilizer is Sheep Manure

Sheep's Head Brand furnishes the valuable organic matter and humus necessary to grow crops. It improves the mechanical conditions of the soil.

Makes compact clay more open and porous, makes light, sandy soils more retentive of moisture, keeps soluble plant foods within reach of rootlets of growing vegetation. Greenhouse Heating.

IS THE CHIMNEY LARGE ENOUGH?

I intend to move my two boilers up on the ground. One boiler is 54 inches by 16 feet and contains thirty-six 4-inch tubes; the other is 60 inches by 18 feet and contains forty-four 4-inch tubes. My chimney measures twenty-four inches square, inside. Now, by adding fifteen feet to the chimney, making it thirty-nine feet high, do you think I can make it do for the two boilers? It is a brick chimney. I was told by the steam trap man it would do the work, but I should like to hear what you think about it. The grate surface in the large boiler is $5\frac{1}{2} \times 5$ feet; in the smaller boiler, $5 \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ feet. Both are tubular boilers. B. F. C.

The two boilers should have a somewhat larger chimney than the one described, in order to work up to their full capacity, but as they have a large grate surface, it should be possible with careful firing to obtain satisfactory results from them.

PLANNING A NEW RANGE.

We are to begin a greenhouse establishment here, in eastern Kansas, and wish to know what is considered the best arrangement of the houses and boiler shed, and what is the best method of heating. This year we shall build one house, 27x150 feet. Every year we shall add glass. Should the boiler pit be put north of the entire proposed range or at one end? How far from the houses should the boiler shed be built? Is it not an accepted doctrine that houses should run east and west? Is hot water considered the best method of heating for places up to 50,000 feet of glass? In hot water heating, is the trend now to the use of large or small pipes? Is the overhead flow considered the most satisfactory? Do growers put the boiler shed in the center of a range and build houses east and west from there?

K. G.

There is no general rule that governs the location and arrangement of the houses making up a large greenhouse plant. We often find some of the houses in a large range running east and west, while others run north and south. In a large plant it is customary to place the boiler shed in the middle of the north side of the plot on which the houses are located. If the houses are to run east and west, a central alley or head house is run out to the south from the boiler shed and the other greenhouses are built upon either side of this house, while if they are to run north and south, the head house is run to the east and to the west and the other houses are built out to the south from the head house. The boiler shed should be as centrally located as possible and at the same time be convenient of access for the handling of coal, ashes and supplies.

The Kroeschell a Coal-saver—Heats Up Quick

The No. 4 boiler we purchased of you in 1909 has given the very best satisfaction—would wish no better. Have taken out return tubular boiler this fall, which used one-half more coal than your present boiler. Your boiler is so easy to regulate that in a few minutes I can run up the temperature by opening drafts. The flow and return connections with Generator all work the very best, according to your plans. We cannot give your boiler enough praise. So far as I have given it a test, my old boiler would not be in it, considering how much more attention the old one took.

installing the hot water system will be of less account. In case a hot water system is used in a large plant, as is sometimes the case, it is customary to provide for mechanical circulation by means of a pump.

For gravity systems it is customary to use 2-inch pipes for the returns, but when the circulation is secured by pumping, a smaller pipe can be used. In some successful systems boiler tubes are used for radiation. Some or all of the flow pipes are generally carried overhead, while the returns are either under the benches or upon the side walls.

A SMALL FORCING HOUSE.

I have a small forcing house, running east and west, with the boiler shed at the west end. The greenhouse, without the shed, is 11x40 feet, and seven feet from floor to ridge pole. There is an 8-inch concrete wall, four feet high, on the south side, and the wall on the north side is three feet high, with one foot of glass. There is a door in the east end and the rest of that end is glass. Can you tell me the number of square feet of space in this house, and how to pipe it for hot water to produce a temperature of 50 degrees and also of 60 degrees? I should like to have an overhead flow under the ridge pole and returns under the benches, which are two feet six inches high. I have several lengths of 1½-inch and 1-inch pipe. Can I use these? What rating of boiler do I require to run this house without forcing, in this part of New York state, where the outside temperature is sometimes about 10 degrees below zero?

H. J. P.

From the description it is evident that the house covers 440 square feet and contains not far from 2,400 cubic feet of space, but these dimensions are not used to any great extent in estimating the amount of radiation required. Instead, the amount of exposed glass and wall surface is taken into account. In the house described there is not far from 565 square feet of glass and 300 square feet of cement wall. To heat the house to 60 degrees,

By carrying 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler and setting the valve to carry 5 or 10 pounds on the line, you always have a reserve to fall back on in case of a sudden drop in temperature. one 2½-inch flow and seven 2-inch returns should be used. For 50 degrees, leave out two of the return pipes. The flow can be under the ridge and the returns under the benches, as suggested.

While it will be better not to attempt to use the smaller pipes, if they are well above the heater they could be used, putting in two 1-inch pipes in place of a 2-inch and three 1¼-inch for two 2-inch. The boiler should be one that is rated for 225 square feet of radiation.

THREE MINNESOTA HOUSES.

What size of steam boiler will be required to heat three new greenhouses, in which there are 20,000 square feet of glass and 1,000 square feet of concrete block wall? The place is not especially well sheltered and I have known the outside temperature to be 32 degrees below zero here. Roses, carnations and general stock are to be grown. What size of pipe is best? Would it be a good plan to have a coil under each bench? There are to be four benches in each house, all raised. Should the steam enter the two coils at the end next to the boiler and the other two coils be supplied at the farther end of the house?

How many square feet of glass are figured for each foot of radiation, with the outside temperature 20 to 30 degrees below zero, to maintain a greenhouse temperature of 60 degrees without crowding the heating system? How many square feet of glass would be figured under the same conditions, if hot water were used? M. G.

Under the conditions mentioned, it will be well to have a sixty horse-power boiler. Without knowing the dimensions of the houses, it will not be possible to give any really definite advice. Ordinarily it is best to use 2-inch pipe for the coils in a hot water system and 1¼-inch pipe for a steam-heated house, although if the houses are quite long it might be best to use 1½-inch pipe for steam. While it is a good plan to place a portion of the pipes on the side walls, it is generally desirable to have the greater portion under the benches.

The plan proposed for connecting the coils with the feed pipes is a good one, but it is not necessary to do so, except, perhaps, in long houses. Everything considered, there is no better way than to connect the feed pipes with the coils at the end away from the boiler. If hot water is used it is customary to run one flow pipe on each wall and another under the ridge, in houses 27x125 feet or less. For houses larger than this, it is well to run two other flow pipes on the purlin posts.

As a rule, a 2-inch or 2½-inch flow pipe will answer for a steam-heated house.

Ordinarily one square foot of steam radiation will heat six square feet of glass, and one foot of hot water radiation will answer for three square feet of glass, if a temperature of 60 degrees is desired. Under the severe conditions mentioned, it would be better to make the figures four and two, respectively, although a little more could be carried on a pinch for a short time.

LANCASTER, O.

Fire badly damaged the greenhouses and almost totally destroyed the boiler house and heating plant at the establishment of M. M. Miesse Wednesday, March 29, about midnight.

There was no watchman on duty Wednesday night, but when Mr. Miesse left the boiler room about ten o'clock everything was all right and there were no evidences of fire anywhere. About 11:30 Mr. Miesse was awakened by what sounded to him like the falling of hail stones on the roof. On going to the window he discovered that flames had entirely enveloped the boiler house and were rapidly spreading through the greenhouses.

After an hour's hard fight by Mr. Miesse and his men, aided by a splendid water system, the flames were brought under control, leaving the boiler house in ruins and ten of the eleven greenhouses damaged for a distance of fifty feet from the ends. The loss amounts to between $4,000 and $7,500, but most of the stock in the portions left standing will be saved. Mr. Miesse expects to rebuild the range as soon as possible.

FALL RIVER, MASS.

The Florists' Association has registered another complaint about the system followed by the park commissioners regarding the sale of flowers to owners of lots in cemeteries. This point has been agitated for the last two years, but this time the florists want an opinion from the city solicitor as to the right of the park board to carry on a business of selling flowers. Chatterton Warburton and Patrick H. Sullivan, representing the association, recently called at the mayor's office and formally presented their protest, asking that the mayor seek an opinion on this matter. The association objects to the sale of flowers by the board to others than those who have arranged for the perpetual care of lots.

The Market.

Even though the weather during the last week has not been ideal, trade has been good. Possibly the lack of spring sunshine, coupled with the two or three snow storms, makes the house-grown flowers appear more valuable than usual. The market has not been overstocked. Although carnations have been specially plentiful, the demand has been sufficient to clean up everything, and at prices that netted a reasonable profit.

The outlook for the Easter trade is unusually good. Flowers will be plentiful, and while prices are little, if any, lower than last year, they will not be beyond the reach of even a modest purse. The growers and wholesalers are rejoicing in the fact that, while the supply is large, the prices remain high enough to permit their realizing a fair return for their efforts.

Easter lilies are plentiful, with prices ranging from 15 cents to 25 cents per bloom. Killarney and Beauty roses are quoted at $6 to $18 a hundred. Carnations are abundant, and there is a good supply of sweet peas, daffodils, tulips, azaleas and primroses.

Various Notes.

George B. Hart is planning for a record-breaking Easter business, and says that the market has never before been so well supplied with flowers for this season. E. F. R.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The weather has been quite unsatisfactory; the only redeeming feature is that as a rule it continues cool. That there will be plenty of flowers for Easter seems quite evident at this time. Business generally was quiet last week, with nothing of any importance reported from any source.

The shops are all attractively decorated with blooming plants and are looking their best. The employees are all busy getting things in shape for the expected Easter rush. There have been a number of complaints about the disease in giganteum lilies; however, there will probably be all that is wanted for Easter.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, who has been away for some time, returned last week looking much improved and ready to take hold of her usual large trade.

The A. W. Smith Co. is quite busy pushing the seed and landscape departments of the business. The firm is sending out some attractive advertising matter.

Randolph & McClements, with their large store and conservatories attached, are now making an Easter show of blooming plants that are a revelation to most people.

H. L. Blind & Bros. are behind no one in the way of taking advantage of display to sell their stock.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. are the youngest firm in the east end district, but have already built up a trade which would be a credit to an older concern.

The Zieger Co.'s two stores are showing up in their usual attractive way at this time. They, like all the rest, would give one the idea that plants were to be the only kind of flowers sold for Easter.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, April 4, in the assembly room of the Fort Pitt hotel. Some good exhibits of Easter plants were made by the Phipps Conservatories, of Schenley park, and by the North Side park, the John Bader Co. and Fred Bartsch. Reports were received from the members who had attended the Boston show; all were pleased with the show and what they saw there. There was a good attendance and several new names were presented for membership.

L. J. Rowe, of Titusville, Pa., has been cutting a lot of Merry Christmas mums; he also has a house of fine Primula obconica.

Ed McCallum, of the McCallum Co., is the latest to adopt a motorcycle as a means of amusement here. He is hoping the machine may never break down a long way from home. Hoo-Hoo.

Fairfield, Conn.—N. S. Goulden's automobile was recently destroyed by fire at Fairfield Beach—reduced, as the reports state, to "a heap of junk." The loss of $1,500 is only partly covered by insurance.

Don't Go Back to Stage Coach Days

Suppose your grandfather did ride in them and made money—suppose your father did build wooden houses and made money—what of it? That was then, this is now! What chance has a stage coach today? That is, if you want to get anywhere and want to cut down repairs—grow top notch stock and have money in the bank—write us.

the arrest of a young man named W. G.

had then gone to neighboring towns and

THE EASTER TRADE REPORTS

SUMMARY OF THE SEASON.

Weather Favors the Florists.

Easter is, indeed, the great floral festival. This year it was greater than ever—especially in the quantity of stock offered to the public.

Weather conditions this year were extremely favorable, and in marked contrast to what the trade had to contend with one year ago, when Easter was three weeks earlier. March in 1910 was an extremely warm month and as a consequence growers' calculations were upset, the quality of stock falling below what was anticipated. This year the latter part of March and the first part of April were cool. The season is backward throughout the greater part of the United States. The result was that the quality of the stock was incomparably better than a year ago, while the lateness of the date still made it possible to have everything ready in time. It is safe to say that no previous Easter ever afforded a better average run of stock than was available this year.

The days preceding Easter were warm and pleasant almost everywhere that flowers are sold in quantity. It was an immense help in the marketing of an enormous quantity of stock. The weather is one of the most important factors insuring the success of the retail trade. Hardly ever does it happen that there is better weather, taking the country as a whole. To this propitious circumstance the florists owe very many thousands of dollars, and they also were saved, by the mildness of temperature, a great deal of work in preparing for deliveries.

Supplies Enormous.

Though the last week in March and first week in April afforded little sun and much cold over large sections of the country, crops were in such a stage that practically everything planned for Easter was ready. Bulbous stock, a large part of which had been expected to be gone, proved abundant. Also, violets, which are at the end of their season, were prolonged so as to afford extremely large quantities for Easter. Roses and carnations were in full crop everywhere and even the shortage of Beauties, which has been general since Christmas, began to be overcome by the approach of spring. Each year increasingly large quantities of pot plants are grown for the Easter trade, so that on the whole this year's Easter supply of salable material was much greater than ever has been offered before, while the quality was unusually good.

The combination of good quality, large supplies and consequent moderate prices, coupled with favorable weather conditions, could not otherwise than give a splendid total of business. Year after year increases have been reported so steadily that the unthinking regard them with incredulity, but everyone recognizes that the flower business is expanding steadily, and pretty nearly all who are engaged in it will agree that at no season does it take a longer leap ahead than at Easter. This year the greater quantities of stock available and marketed must have produced a splendid increase in the total of retail sales, though the lower average prices of cut flowers at wholesale make the results somewhat less favorable for growers and wholesalers than they were for the retailers.

The Plant Trade.

The plant growers have been so successful in recent years that their number is increasing rapidly and this season the average quality of their output was exceptionally high. Lilies have never been more abundant and there never has been a year when roses in pots were so plentiful, so varied or so well flowered. As to azaleas the report is mixed. In some sections of the country they were abundant, in others scarce. Everywhere there were increased quantities of acacias, genistas, bougainvilleas and hydrangeas. The latter proved about the poorest seller of the lot and where any plants were left it almost invariably was the hydrangeas. The largest plants were the slowest sale. The demand is for small and medium sized plants and made up plant arrangements.

Cut Flowers.

If there was any place where cut flowers were scarce, the shortage might easily have been made up by recourse to any of the wholesale markets. There never has been an Easter when cut flower supplies have been so large; there seldom has been one when quality was so good, and no one remembers an Easter when good cut flowers sold more cheaply. There not only was little advance in prices for the holiday, but in some cases the holiday prices actually were lower than those which had been prevailing a few days previously. When retail stores have bought in advance big stocks of flowering plants, it is natural for them to push the sale of the plants until they are sure of a clearance; then cut flowers, which can be had on short notice, begin to receive attention. But not a few retailers noted an increased demand for cut stock, since fine flowers were to be had at customary prices.

A great many retailers, and especially those located downtown in the cities, found their greatest trouble was in waiting on the would-be buyers. It was fairly well demonstrated that no matter how much stock is produced, if quality is right and prices reasonable there are plenty of people ready and anxious to buy it the day before Easter.

MORE ABOUT COLOR.

General Suggestions.

Following the previous color studies, a number of suggestions and questions naturally arise and new combinations suggest themselves. A few of these have been jotted down at random and will be considered in the same way.

In reading or analyzing color, get into a good, clear light—not necessarily direct sunlight. Artificial lights change color. Under their influence pinks are more intense, violet becomes redder and yellow is softened. In planning decorations consider the color of electric lights and candle shades. Scarlet flowers will be a little dulled in a general red light, losing some of the yellow cast.

One color kills another when the greater strength of one dulls the other. When this happens you may be sure that you cannot develop any harmony between them.

The Omnipresent Yellows.

Yellow is the most widely distributed color in the floral world. I have yet to find a flower which contains no yellow, either as a dominant color or in composition. It does not follow that a yellow can be readily found that will harmonize with these tones of universal yellow. On the contrary, the yellow is often so obscure that it is not worth while to try to develop it with the assortment of flowers ordinarily at hand.

Yellow contains more warm light than any other color. It is the best to illumine a dark corner, in case it harmonizes with the permanent decorations of this dark corner. A bunch of coreopsis is a summer sun in a dark hall, but beware lest the dark hall be a crimson red.

Do not divide colors equally in a combination. Always have one in excess of the other or others. I was almost ready to say, the greater the excess of one color the better. Anyhow, do not balance or nearly balance the quantities of color.

Tints in So-called Whites.

All so-called white flowers are tinted with some other color—sometimes almost imperceptibly, it is true, but to a good color eye the tint will appear, and may be developed by experimenting with some flower which contains the color which you can detect in the white flower. If you find traces of lavender or violet pink in a white flower, use it with a decided tone of one of these colors found in another flower and you will not only have established a harmony, but will have developed the more delicate flower.

Traces of these tints may often be seen toward the base of a petal outside, or may be caught in the light which opposite petals reflect against each other down toward the base of the flower inside. Thus the tint has betrayed itself through the reflection, though otherwise its presence could scarcely have been detected. Or, as was suggested before, trace the tints of the green along the veining of the under and upper sides of the leaves or the lines of the stems. Whatever color tints the green will give the key to the coloring of the flower.

Coloring which would be permissible in landscape gardening which has the aid of soft backgrounds, sunlight and atmospheric tints, might be unpleasant indoors, where harsher details would change the effect.

Delicate Combinations.

If you want to use creamy or yellow white with a lighter white, introduce a little blue; for example, Bride roses and sweet alyssum will come together with a better grace by the aid of some ageratum or forget-me-nots.

When you can do so, combine your yellow pink peas with your creams and leave the lavender white to keep company with the crimson pinks.

Smoke tree and tritoma make a combination second only to blue lavender well as tints, or you will lean toward the insipid. Throw the light colors against the darker, after finding out one or more of their common strains of color.

Queries: Have you observed the difference in color of the gray greens of the mature carnation foliage, which could be accounted for by means of any of these color laws laid down in our late series? Why would tritomas and the yellow and yellow orange nasturtiums make a good bedding combination?

FREE HELP.

If there is any other class of business men who get as much free help from the newspapers as do the automobile makers it is those who make their living through the sale of plants, nursery stock and gardening implements. Every effort to encourage the city beautiful idea is of direct benefit to someone in the horticultural trades. And every editor is for the uplift. Hundreds, possibly thousands, of daily and weekly papers are printing the press stuff of the National Council of Horticulture, they all are boosting the local flower shows, and in many cases they either have horticultural editors or make a spring feature of a "best lawn," "best back yard," or "best window box" contest. It all helps the seller of seeds, plants or nursery stock.

As an example of the way the editors play up gardening in the spring, the Des Moines Daily News has offered tin cans and dead leaves from your yard, so that the tender green grass can have some show.

Because, in deciding which yard in Des Moines is the neatest and cleanest, grass will cut some figure. Ray Weirick, city landscape engineer, is going to give you a series of lessons through the News on how to make an attractive yard. The first lesson will appear within a day or two. Mr. Weirick will be one of the judges to decide who has the most attractive yard on May 1. So you can get some good pointers from his lessons.

All such work helps the florists. If there's something of the kind doing in your town, better help it along. One way to get your full share of the benefit would be to arrange for advance information of what each day's paper will recommend and to advertise the same stock as close to the gardening articles as you can get your advertising placed.

THE PENULTIMATE DESIGN.

In the collection of unique designs, the one shown in the illustration on page 11 is entitled to a place at the front. It represents a derrick in flowers, made by Lester F. Benson, an Indianapolis florist, on the order of a committee representing the Structural Iron Workers of America, for one of their members who was killed as a result of his gauntlet catching on the hook as the engine started. The man was lifted thirty feet from the ground before his cry, "Slack down," was heard, and before the order could be obeyed the glove slipped from his hand, resulting in a fall which broke his neck. The design was made sectionally, to work the same as a real derrick, and the committee insisted on the florist placing a glove on the hook!

Of course no florist maintains that such a design is in anything but the most execrable taste; such gruesomeness is an utter perversion of the idea which prompts the sending of flowers to a funeral. The flowers should carry a message of sympathy, and by their purity and beauty should speak of the life beyond, should contain no suggestion of mundane things, least of all a reference to the route of departure of "the late lamented." The derrick design appears to be just one step removed from the limit. The man who wishes to accomplish the ultimate no doubt will make for a murder victim some such design as the following: Take two clothing-store wire dummies; fit them out with suits of flowers, instead of cloth; raise the arms of each, one figure leaning forward in the act of firing a flower pistol; bring the left hand of the other toward where a man's heart is supposed to be, and the right hand to his uplifted head; lean this figure backward. Mount the two figures, in the relationship that will suggest itself, on a base of boxwood or galax and there will be nothing further that can be demanded of the florist, unless with such a design the widow fails to survive the shock.

For the florist who makes monstrosities in flowers it is to be said: Hardly any florist has so poor a conception of the uses of flowers that he suggests any such designs; the florist nearly always simply is carrying out the instructions he receives from his customers, and must either do this or see an order involving a goodly sum go to a competitor. Florists are like others—they are likely to do that which they are best paid for doing, but it is in line for every florist to do something toward turning customers to better things in flowers.

GOOD PLANTS TO GROW.

I am contemplating growing plants for the wholesale market and would like to have someone give me the names of the varieties of the following plants that are good sellers: Six geraniums, three red, two pink and one white; three good salvias; ten coleus and three good ferns.

A. B. C.

In double geraniums: S. A. Nutt, dark red; Alphonse Ricard, vermilion scarlet; E. H. Trego, bright scarlet; Jean Viaud, rosy pink; Beaute Poitevine, shrimp pink; La Favorite, pure white.

In single geraniums, which are less used for bedding than the doubles, a few fine sorts are: Snowdrop, pure white; Telegraph, Lincoln red; Admiration, shrimp pink; Paul Crampel, brilliant scarlet; Jacquerie, crimson scarlet; Granville, rosy pink.

In scarlet salvias, Zurich, dwarf variety; Bonfire, dwarf, and splendens compacta, are all excellent. The old splendens, the type from which the three aforementioned sorts have sprung, is a taller grower, and many still prefer it on that account.

In Coleus, Verschaffeltii, crimson, and Golden Bedder, yellow, still head the list. Others of value are: Firebrand, Queen Victoria, red, with golden border; Brilliancy, immense leaves, carmine shading to deep maroon; Spotted Gem, green blotched crimson; Eldorado, deep yellow, beautifully blotched; Hero, black; Mrs. Hayes, rich gold, margined crimson; Rob Roy, dwarf, crinkled edges, reddish pink.

In ferns, Nephrolepis Whitmani, elegantissima and Bostoniensis are great sellers. Other desirable sorts to grow are: Adiantum cuneatum, Pteris Cretica Mayii, Cyrtomium falcatum, Aspidium tsussimense and Pteris serrulata. These latter sorts are good to make up into fern dishes in small sizes, but the nephrolepis would probably be the best ferns for you to wholesale in quantity.

Give the clumps of valley an average night temperature of 55 degrees and they will be in season. There is now no need to keep them in the dark at all. Grown in the light, they will be much stockier and carry finer foliage.

NAMES OF PLANTS.

I want to know the names of the following plants:

Begonia No. 1—I want to know the name of this begonia. How can I start it and where will I be able to get more plants? I have tried time and again to get it by taking cuttings, but have no luck.

Begonia No. 2—I want to know the name of this begonia. Will it seed and come up? Where can I get it?

Cactus No. 1—What is the name? I call it rat tail. Is that right?

Cactus No. 2—What is the right name? How can it be propagated and when?

E. T. O.

Begonia No. 1—Begonia semperflorans gigantea rosea. It roots readily from cuttings in a little bottom heat. Use soft growths and trim off the leaves closely when inserting the cuttings. It should be procurable from such firms as Dreer's, Vincent's and other Review advertisers.

Begonia No. 2—Probably a form of B. Erfordii. This will seed freely and the seeds are easily germinated. Scatter the seeds on prepared pans of leaf-mold and sand. Water the pans before sowing the seeds and do not cover the latter at all. Keep well covered with glass and paper until germination takes place.

Cactus No. 1—Evidently one of the many mesembryanthemums. This is easily rooted from cuttings. Let the cuttings lie and dry for a day or two before placing in sand, and water more sparingly than you would mums or carnations.

Cactus No. 2—Am not sure of this cactus. Will look it up and send name later.

Mount the two figures, in the relationship that will suggest itself, on a base of boxwood or galax and there will be nothing further that can be demanded of the florist, unless with such a design the widow fails to survive the shock.

For the florist who makes monstrosities in flowers it is to be said: Hardly any florist has so poor a conception of the uses of flowers that he suggests any such designs; the florist nearly always simply is carrying out the instructions he receives from his customers, and must either do this or see an order involving a goodly sum go to a competitor. Florists are like others they are likely to do that which they are best paid for doing, but it is in line for every florist to do something toward turning customers to better things in flowers.

GOOD PLANTS TO GROW.

I am contemplating growing plants for the wholesale market and would like to have someone give me the names of the varieties of the following plants that are good sellers: Six geraniums, three red, two pink and one white; three good salvias; ten coleus and three good ferns.

A. B. C.

In double geraniums: S. A. Nutt, dark red; Alphonse Ricard, vermilion scarlet; E. H. Trego, bright scarlet; Jean Viaud, rosy pink; Beaute Poitevine, shrimp pink; La Favorite, pure white.

In single geraniums, which are less used for bedding than the doubles, a few fine sorts are: Snowdrop, pure white; Telegraph, Lincoln red; Admiration, shrimp pink; Paul Crampel, brilliant scarlet; Jacquerie, crimson scarlet; Granville, rosy pink.

In scarlet salvias, Zurich, dwarf variety; Bonfire, dwarf, and splendens compacta, are all excellent. The old splendens, the type from which the three aforementioned sorts have sprung, is a taller grower, and many still prefer it on that account.

In Coleus, Verschaffeltii, crimson, and Golden Bedder, yellow, still head the list. Others of value are: Firebrand, Queen Victoria, red, with golden border; Brilliance, immense leaves, carmine shading to deep maroon; Spotted Gem, green blotched crimson; Eldorado, deep yellow, beautifully blotched; Hero, black; Mrs. Hayes, rich gold, margined crimson; Rob Roy, dwarf, crinkled edges, reddish pink.

In ferns, Nephrolepis Whitmani, elegantissima and Bostoniensis are great sellers. Other desirable sorts to grow are: Adiantum cuneatum, Pteris Cretica Mayii, Cyrtomium falcatum, Aspidium tsussimense and Pteris serrulata. These latter sorts are good to make up into fern dishes in small sizes, but the nephrolepis would probably be the best ferns for you to wholesale in quantity.

VALLEY FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Will clumps of valley brought into the greenhouse now and not separated be out for Decoration day? J. J. U.

Give the clumps of valley an average night temperature of 55 degrees and they will be in season. There is now no need to keep them in the dark at all. Grown in the light, they will be much stockier and carry finer foliage.

NAMES OF PLANTS.

I want to know the names of the following plants:

Begonia No. 1 I want to know the name of this begonia. How can I start it and where will I be able to get more plants? I have tried time and again to get it by taking cuttings, but have no luck.

Begonia No. 2 I want to know the name of this begonia. Will it seed and come up? Where can I get it?

Cactus No. 1 What is the name? I call it rat tail. Is that right?

Cactus No. 2 What is the right name? How can it be propagated and when?

Begonia No. 1 Begonia semperflorans gigantea rosea. It roots readily from cuttings in a little bottom heat. Use soft growths and trim off the leaves closely when inserting the cuttings. It should be procurable from such firms as Dreer's, Vincent's and other Review advertisers.

Begonia No. 2 Probably a form of B. Erfordii. This will seed freely and the seeds are easily germinated. Scatter the seeds on prepared pans of leaf mold and sand. Water the pans before sowing the seeds and do not cover the latter at all. Keep well covered with glass and paper until germination takes place.

Cactus No. 1 Evidently one of the many mesembryanthemums. This is easily rooted from cuttings. Let the cuttings lie and dry for a day or two before placing in sand, and water more sparingly than you would mums or carnations.

Cactus No. 2 Am not sure of this cactus. Will look it up and send name later.

NOTES ON

A GROWERS' OBSERVATION.

Primula Obconica.

I was first introduced to Primula obconica in 1888, when working in England. Since then, till only a few years ago, I had seen little of it. It was natural that the improvements worked during a period of almost twenty years were a great surprise to me. From that tiny whitish flower had developed something remarkable, not only in size, but also in range of colors, which could not help but attract, and the vast sales now are proof of its popularity.

We have now three distinct varieties of P. obconica; namely, obconica grandiflora, obconica grandiflora fimbriata and obconica Arendsi, commonly called gigantea. Then there are the subdivisions of grandiflora compacta and gigantea compacta. These, however, always appeared to me more like plants that for some reason or other did not grow well; they do not show in their character the grace and boldness of their sisters, and I have dropped them entirely.

The Obconica Colors.

The grandiflora type gives us now a wide range of colors, including white, apple-blossom, rose, carmine, blood red, true blue and purple, and then there are the many shades of lilac, reminding one of the daintiest hues in cattleyas. It is hard to say which shade to give the preference; wait long enough, till they have at least a dozen flower spikes open, and they will all sell. The grandiflora fimbriata does not contain so large a variety of colors, white, pink, carmine and light and dark lilac being all, and of these the most perfect flowers are found in pink and white shades. Of the Arendsi or gigantea type, originator's strain, we have only lilac, rose and carmine as colors available for commerce, as the other colors of oculata (dark-eyed) and fimbriata are too expensive as seeds for the present. I have noted that some firms list gigantea in white, but the originator does not list this color, nor does any other European seed house, to my knowledge.

The distinction between the grandiflora and gigantea types is quite marked, much less in the size of the flower than in the plant itself. The foliage of gigantea is heavier and the flower stems are stronger, while the flower itself expands more, with the single flowers generally larger, though the apple-blossom shade of grandiflora has flowers fully as large as any of the gigantea type.

Cultivation of Obconicas.

Many writers seem to advocate extremely early sowing, some advising a sowing in January and early February. My experience teaches me that the best time is the last part of February and the early part of March, if frame culture can be given in summer. A cool place makes them grow surprisingly fast and a strong dose of liquid cow manure every week will work wonders.

I sow my seeds in flats, in which the soil reaches to within one-half inch of the top. The soil is not pressed down hard, but simply shaken down and leveled. The seed is then sown and wetted down with a fine syringe. This wetting down just lets the seeds sink into the soil to the right depth. A pane of glass, cut to the size of the flat, goes on, with two thicknesses of newspaper on top of this. As soon as germination starts, one paper is taken off and a little air is given. When the seed leaves have formed, the other paper comes off during the night and dull weather. I have found that this method gives me the best results; it seems that every seed makes a plant.

The soil used for sowing should not contain any leaf-mold or peat—just plain, ordinary, spent hotbed soil, completely decayed and well mixed with sand. The flats should be put in a fairly warm place for the first four weeks and kept cooler and cooler as the plants grow.

I transplant into flats from the seed flats and then into 2-inch pots. Those that I grow to larger sizes, mainly for the purpose of testing, get a stiffer soil every time they are transplanted. During the summer they are in shallow frames, covered with shades made of ordinary building laths, where they can be syringed several times during the noon hours without removing the shades. Over night the shades are, of course, removed. After they are in the houses, they are kept cool, which gives the flowers size and color, and the weekly dose of liquid manure or nitrate of soda must not be neglected. Brilliancy of color and size of flower are entirely in the hands of the grower.

Chinensis Grandiflora Fimbriata.

The large flowering, fringed Chinese primroses have been known much longer than the obconicas and were fairly well developed twenty years ago, but have also experienced much improvement, of course, since then. In this class we have two varieties, Carbuncle and Defiance, which have perhaps the finest and brightest deep, glistening red colors which I can recall in any flower. All colors of this class are desirable, for we must please many tastes. There are the pure white, the scarlet, blue, blush, rose, carmine, mauve, spotted, striped and marbled. The colors are all distinct and fresh; nothing looks washed out.

In the main, these Chinese varieties are treated like the obconicas, but we cover the seeds slightly when sowing and they get a lighter soil, with plenty of spent and well decayed horse manure. A cool atmosphere makes the most perfect plants and produces the best flowers, and they are certainly profitable plants to grow. While I prefer growing obconicas in 3-inch pots and planting several together in 5-inch or 6-inch pans with Asparagus Sprengeri, I prefer the Chinese as single plants, with massive foliage.

Chinese Gigantea.

During the last season I have tried to a larger extent the gigantea strain of the Chinese primroses offered by a few specialists in Europe and have been much pleased with the results. The flowers are decidedly larger; they are deeply fringed and pure in color. The colors are limited to a few shades so far, but no doubt others will follow as development advances.

The strains offered as double flowering have so far been disappointing, and not one of the many hundreds I have grown could hold a candle to the double varieties which were grown twenty years ago by the thousands for cut flowers in Germany. Those that I have gained so far from seed were certainly flattered by the designation of "semi-double," and in real double flowers, such as linger in my memory, there is "nothing doing."

I do not sow the Chinensis as early as the obconicas. A sowing in the middle of March produces, under favorable weather conditions, excellent stock for shipping in the early part of June. After they have reached a certain size they grow fast and the nicest plants can be obtained for Christmas sales by sowings made about the end of April.

Kewensis and Forbesi.

Primula Kewensis is not known as well as it ought to be. My opinion is that it should be grown in 3-inch pots, and should be planted three together when in bloom, in a 5-inch or 6-inch pan. As single plants they make a straggly appearance, but several together have such a profusion of yellow and look so much like spring that they are simply charming. The photograph from which the illustration on page 12 was made does not do justice to the plants, but they will be found ready sellers. The cultivation is similar to that for the other varieties, but they like a heavy soil. They can also be wintered in frames, under the protection of leaves. They are used for spring sales, in filling vases or for bedding.

Primula Forbesi is a graceful variety, not much used, but useful for baskets in winter or several together in pans. The flowers are produced in greatest profusion. An improvement of this variety will be found in Primula malacoides, introduced this season. I am growing a few for trial, but I do not think it is offered yet in this country. We give Forbesi the same treatment as we give the Chinensis, and a few can be used by everyone.

ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Miltonia Vexillaria.

Miltonia vexillaria, the beautiful early summer flowering orchid, has just commenced to push its flower spikes. It grows well in winter in the cattleya house, but in summer prefers cooler and somewhat shadier quarters, although some successful growers have excellent success in growing it with cattleyas all the time. While the leaves are somewhat soft when compared with such orchids as cattleyas, lœlias, cœlogynes or dendrobiums, they are much benefited by direct sunlight from the middle of November until the middle of March, after which time a light shade usually is found beneficial. The influence of sunshine toughens the foliage, turns it to a ruddy or magenta hue and puts the plants in a better condition to withstand our hot summers. When the young growths are sending out roots is the correct time to do any needful repotting. There is no better compost than moderately soft osmunda fiber. The tough and hard variety is better for cattleyas, but not quite so good for miltonias.

Thrips is an arch enemy of this miltonia, but a dipping in tobacco water or spraying with the same liquid will keep it away. Miltonias and odontoglossums are injured by heavy fumigations. They will not stand hydrocyanic acid gas, and some of the nicotine extracts and even tobacco stems will hurt them. A temperature of 56 to 58 degrees at night for the next few weeks, with a light spraying overhead on bright days, will be found to suit these miltonias.

Lælia Anceps.

The season's crop of flowers on Lælia anceps will now be cut and any rebasketing or potting should be done. They are likely to succeed better in pans than in baskets, as the roots are more under control. Pure fern fiber is the ideal compost for them and water must be sparingly applied until the roots are well advanced and growths started. Many people fail to flower lœlias satisfactorily, especially the beautiful white varieties, such as Stella, Schroedera, alba, Dawsoni and others. The trouble is that they are given too much summer shade, and while this treatment produces big bulbs and beautiful dark green leaves, the crop of flower spikes is almost nil.

In their native habitats in Mexico, L. Anceps is nearly always found on trees or rocks, growing in the full sun, and during the growing season is drenched almost daily by torrential rains. Under these conditions it makes hard bulbs, with tough, but not dark green leaves. We must imitate these conditions to some extent under glass, by giving the plants merely sufficient shade to prevent the sun burning the leaves, and by syringing freely every afternoon in summer. One good grower hangs his plants on a tree, where they get plenty of sunshine, and uses the hose on them freely. He always gets a big crop of flowers, as will anyone who omits heavy summer shade. They do not want a warm house at any time. They are really cool orchids and 50 to 55 degrees at night is ample for them. In summer any airy, light greenhouse will suit them, with the plants hung well up to the glass.

Calanthes.

Early in March was the proper time to start the bulbs of calanthes, using ordinary seed flats, half filled with crocks or coarse ashes. On this we place a layer of moss and fill the balance with sharp sand. We place the bulbs fairly close together, but allow room between them for the young growths when they appear. Give one soaking watering; then apply moisture rather sparingly. In a warm, moist house, kept at 65 to 70 degrees at night, root and growth action will soon commence. When ready for repotting, mix up a compost of two thirds fibrous loam, from which the finer particles have been screened out, and one-fourth old, lumpy, dried cow manure, to which should be added some sharp, gritty sand. Use either pots or moderately deep pans. Three good bulbs will go in an 8-inch pan and one bulb in a 5-inch pot, or, if extra strong, one in a 6-inch pot. One-third of the pot should be drainage and, in potting, the compost should be made so firm that the bulbs will stand up without stakes.

Oncidium.

That valuable fall flowering oncidium, varicosum Rogersii, is now in active growth, and if any repanning has not yet been done, it will be better to delay it for a season, as more harm than good would come from disturbing the plants now. A top-dressing of fresh fern fiber can be given, picking out some of the old compost. It is better not to use any moss; there is always the likelihood of shell snails or other such pests lurking in it and they usually place themselves in evidence when the young flower spikes appear. This oncidium does specially well in 5-inch and 6-inch pans, hung close to the light at the cooler end of the cattleya house, or in a house where odontoglossums thrive. They dislike a close, moist atmosphere.

Phaius Grandifolius.

Phaius grandifolius, the stately old

Miltonia Vexillaria Exhibited at a Boston Flower Show.

terrestrial orchid, is only occasionally met with in good condition. A good specimen, carrying a number of spikes fully expanded, is quite effective. Smaller plants also, in 6-inch or 8-inch pots, carrying two or three spikes apiece, are useful and a large vase of stalks makes a striking appearance in a room. The plants are now starting to grow and repotting is seasonable. They do well in fibrous loam, with the addition of a little fern fiber, lumpy cow manure and coarse sand, allowing an ample space for drainage. While they enjoy a brisk heat when growing, the house should not be close and stuffy, or black spot will soon disfigure the leaves. When well potbound and in active growth, they appreciate a watering once a week with liquid manure. A winter minimum of 55 degrees is right.

Phalænopsis.

It is unwise to allow the flower spikes on phalænopsis to remain too long, as they severely tax the constitutions of the plants. When the flowers are cut is a good time to do any needful top-dressing or repotting. Phalænopsis make thick roots, which cling stubbornly to the receptacles in which they are growing. To remove those intact is difficult and often impossible. When in pots and pans, or even small circular baskets, a good plan is to stand these within one of the deep, cylindrical baskets. A good size is nine inches deep and six inches across the top. The compost must be coarse; lump charcoal, with fern fiber and some fresh sphagnum, will be found suitable. The moss does especially well as a surfacing. Plants not in need of rebasketing can be given a top-dressing.

As phalænopsis leaves are easily scorched, some shade is now necessary when the sun shines. Roller or lath blinds are best, but white lead and kerosene will answer where there are no blinds. The latter have a decided advantage, as they can be kept up during dull, gloomy weather. Phalænopsis grandiflora and P. Schilleriana are the two best commercial varieties, and the importations of these two kinds alone, from the Philippines via San Francisco, now amount to many thousands a year. A night temperature at this season of 65 to 68 degrees will be found right for phalænopsis.

Shading.

Cattleyas, lœlias and the tougher leaved orchids want little shade until the sun gets strong. Any applied should be light. On the other hand, odontoglossums, masdevallias, phalænopsis, cypripediums, miltonias, and other orchids whose foliage is readily susceptible, should have had shade from the early part of March. If this shade is movable, it is, of course, much to be preferred early in the season. As a general rule, orchids get too much shade. The deep green bulbs and leaves produced under these conditions are pleasing to the eye, but are never so satisfactory when the time comes for flowers.

PLANTING TREES AND SHRUBS.

This is a late season and planting in more northerly latitudes has only just started. Vegetation is unusually dormant for the season, and this is an advantage. Nearly all retail florists are called upon to do some planting of trees, shrubs or hardy perennials for their customers. This is an important branch, with wonderful possibilities in it, and is worth developing as much as possible. Any country florist who fails to take advantage of this line of work is away behind the times. There is more money at this season in planting hardy stock than in the floricultural end of the business. Of course, we do not mean that the latter should be neglected, but the hardy end should be encouraged in every way, and one good way is to have a little tasteful planting about your own place, only a few in number, where prospective customers can see them.

In planting large shrubs, cut them back quite hard, and if you get shrubs of any kind which may have been stored in some nurseryman's shed over winter, remember that they are likely to go back in many cases when set outdoors. Three or four months in a dark cellar and then exposure to sun and wind is a hard ordeal for any shrub, deciduous or evergreen, to withstand. In buying shrubs and trees, insist on having such as have been outdoors over winter, even if only heeled in; they will give you much greater satisfaction.

In planting trees and shrubs, advise your customers to spend ten times as much in proper preparation of the ground as on the shrubs or trees, if they want permanently satisfactory results. Of course, you may claim that this would reduce sales. Not at all. Any man who gets shrubs and plants them thus, finding that they do well, will want more, and his neighbors will find his garden and its preparation something which they will want to copy.

Always dig holes of ample size. Always have roots moistened, if dry, before planting. In the case of evergreens, puddling the roots well after planting, before filling in, will make chances of failure less. Never use manure in direct contact with the roots. Use it on the surface as a mulch. Tramp the soil firmly. No loosely planted tree or shrub will thrive, and remember that the larger the trees or shrubs, the greater the necessity for heading back to insure their living.

ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Miltonia Vexillaria.

Miltonia vexillaria, the beautiful early summer flowering orchid, has just commenced to push its flower spikes. It grows well in winter in the cattleya house, but in summer prefers cooler and somewhat shadier quarters, although some successful growers have excellent success in growing it with cattleyas all the time. While the leaves are somewhat soft when compared with such orchids as cattleyas, laelias, cecilogynes or dendrobiums, they are much benefited by direct sunlight from the middle of November until the middle of March, after which time a light shade usually is found beneficial. The influence of sunshine toughens the foliage, turns it to a ruddy or magenta hue and puts the plants in a better condition to withstand our hot summers. When the young growths are sending out roots is the correct time to do any needful repotting. There is no better compost than moderately soft osmunda fiber. The tough and hard variety is better for cattleyas, but not quite so good for miltonias.

Thrips is an arch enemy of this miltonia, but a dipping in tobacco water or spraying with the same liquid will keep it away. Miltonias and odontoglossums are injured by heavy fumigations. They will not stand hydrocyanic acid gas, and some of the nicotine extracts and even tobacco stems will hurt them. A temperature of 56 to 58 degrees at night for the next few weeks, with a light spraying overhead on bright days, will be found to suit these miltonias.

Lælia Anceps.

The season's crop of flowers on Lælia anceps will now be cut and any rebasketing or potting should be done. They are likely to succeed better in pans than in baskets, as the roots are more under control. Pure fern fiber is the ideal compost for them and water must be sparingly applied until the roots are well advanced and growths started. Many people fail to flower laelias satisfactorily, especially the beautiful white varieties, such as Stella, Schroedera, alba, Dawsoni and others. The trouble is that they are given too much summer shade, and while this treatment produces big bulbs and beautiful dark green leaves, the crop of flower spikes is almost nil.

In their native habitats in Mexico, L. Anceps is nearly always found on trees or rocks, growing in the full sun, and during the growing season is drenched almost daily by torrential rains. Under these conditions it makes hard bulbs, with tough, but not dark green leaves. We must imitate these conditions to some extent under glass, by giving the plants merely sufficient shade to prevent the sun burning the leaves, and by syringing freely every afternoon in summer. One good grower hangs his plants on a tree, where they get plenty of sunshine, and uses the hose on them freely. He always gets a big crop of flowers, as will anyone who omits heavy summer shade. They do not want a warm house at any time. They are really cool orchids and 50 to 55 degrees at night is ample for them. In summer any airy, light greenhouse will suit them, with the plants hung well up to the glass.

Calanthes.

Early in March was the proper time to start the bulbs of calanthes, using ordinary seed flats, half filled with crocks or coarse ashes. On this we place a layer of moss and fill the balance with sharp sand. We place the bulbs fairly close together, but allow room between them for the young growths when they appear. Give one soaking watering; then apply moisture rather sparingly. In warm, moist house, kept at 65 to 70 degrees at night, root and growth action will soon commence. When ready for repotting, mix up a compost of two-thirds fibrous loam, from which the finer particles have been screened out, and one-fourth old, lumpy, dried cow manure, to which should be added some sharp, gritty sand. Use either pots or moderately deep pans. Three good bulbs will go in an 8-inch pan and one bulb in a 5-inch pot, or, if extra strong, one in a 6-inch pot. One-third of the pot should be drainage and, in potting, the compost should be made so firm that the bulbs will stand up without stakes.

Oncidium.

That valuable fall flowering oncidium, varicosum Rogersii, is now in active growth, and if any repanning has not yet been done, it will be better to delay it for a season, as more harm than good would come from disturbing the plants now. A top-dressing of fresh fern fiber can be given, picking out some of the old compost. It is better not to use any moss; there is always the likelihood of shell snails or other such pests lurking in it and they usually place themselves in evidence when the young flower spikes appear. This oncidium does specially well in 5-inch and 6-inch pans, hung close to the light at the cooler end of the cattleya house or in a house where odontoglossums thrive. They dislike a close, moist atmosphere.

terrestrial orchid, is only occasionally met with in good condition. A good specimen, carrying a number of spikes fully expanded, is quite effective. Smaller plants also, in 6-inch or 8-inch pots, carrying two or three spikes apiece, are useful and a large vase of stalks makes a striking appearance in a room. The plants are now starting to grow and repotting is seasonable. They do well in fibrous loam, with the addition of a little fern fiber, lumpy cow manure and coarse sand, allowing an ample space for drainage. While they enjoy a brisk heat when growing, the house should not be close and stuffy, or black spot will soon disfigure the leaves. When well potbound and in active growth, they appreciate a watering once a week with liquid manure. A winter minimum of 55 degrees is right.

Phalænopsis.

It is unwise to allow the flower spikes on phalænopsis to remain too long, as they severely tax the constitutions of the plants. When the flowers are cut is a good time to do any needful top-dressing or repotting. Phalænopsis make thick roots, which cling stubbornly to the receptacles in which they are growing. To remove those intact is difficult and often impossible. When in pots and pans, or even small circular baskets, a good plan is to stand these within one of the deep, cylindrical baskets. A good size is nine inches deep and six inches across the top. The compost must be coarse; lump charcoal, with fern fiber and some fresh sphagnum, will be found suitable. The moss does especially well as a surfacing. Plants not in need of rebasketing can be given a top-dressing.

As phalænopsis leaves are easily scorched, some shade is now necessary when the sun shines. Roller or lath blinds are best, but white lead and kerosene will answer where there are no blinds. The latter have a decided advantage, as they can be kept up during dull, gloomy weather. Phalænopsis grandiflora and P. Schilleriana are the two best commercial varieties, and the importations of these two kinds alone, from the Philippines via San Francisco, now amount to many thousands a year. A night temperature at this season of 65 to 68 degrees will be found right for phalænopsis.

Shading.

Cattleyas, lalias and the tougher leaved orchids want little shade until the sun gets strong. Any applied should be light. On the other hand, odontoglossums, masdevallias, phalænopsis, cyrtopodiums, miltonias, and other orchids whose foliage is readily susceptible, should have had shade from the early part of March. If this shade is movable, it is, of course, much to be preferred early in the season. As a general rule, orchids get too much shade. The deep green bulbs and leaves produced under these conditions are pleasing to the eye, but are never so satisfactory when the time comes for flowers.

PLANTING TREES AND SHRUBS.

This is a late season and planting in more northerly latitudes has only just started. Vegetation is unusually dormant for the season, and this is an advantage. Nearly all retail florists are called upon to do some planting of trees, shrubs or hardy perennials for their customers. This is an important branch, with wonderful possibilities in it, and is worth developing as much as possible. Any country florist who fails to take advantage of this line of work is away behind the times. There is more money at this season in planting hardy stock than in the floricultural end of the business. Of course, we do not mean that the latter should be neglected, but the hardy end should be encouraged in every way, and one good way is to have a little tasteful planting about your own place, only a few in number, where prospective customers can see them.

In planting large shrubs, cut them back quite hard, and if you get shrubs of any kind which may have been stored in some nurseryman's shed over winter, remember that they are likely to go back in many cases when set out doors. Three or four months in a dark cellar and then exposure to sun and wind is a hard ordeal for any shrub, deciduous or evergreen, to withstand. In buying shrubs and trees, insist on having such as have been outdoors over winter, even if only heeled in; they will give you much greater satisfaction.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Lorraine Begonias.

The pressure of other work incidental to Easter trade has probably prevented the Lorraines getting the attention properly theirs. Cleared benches gives a chance to spread out the young stock, which has no doubt been standing too close to do well, and there is now an opportunity to get a lot of the rooted cuttings potted off. Keep them quite close together when potted. Use a light compost; leaf-mold and sand are sufficient. If a little bottom heat is at command, so much the better. Continue to put in batches of cuttings when procurable. The old plants will now be making a good deal of growth and quite a batch of cuttings should be obtainable. Lorraines are looked upon as difficult subjects to root by some, but there is really no special difficulty in it. If the propagating bench is warm and a top heat of 60 to 65 degrees maintained, with the necessary shade and watering, few should fail to root. Those who only grow a few dozens or a hundred or two of plants may just as well buy young stock in 2½-inch pots from one of the specialists in this begonia.

Poinsettias.

While there is yet ample time in which to start poinsettias intended to produce cuttings to make plants for pans, quite a few growers plant a bench or house of them for cutting, while others grow them singly in 6-inch pots, and where you want stems of good length and bracts twelve to eighteen inches across, or even more, it is time now to start up the roots which have been dormant since Christmas. Head them back a little. Pot up singly, or plant in flats and place in a temperature of 55 degrees. Do not give any higher temperature, as it will only mean soft, lanky cuttings. Be careful not to give much water at the root until the plants are breaking. It is easy to kill them with an over-supply while they are dormant, but use the sprayer freely until they break. Then water the roots more freely.

Primulas.

The earliest sowings of obconica and Sinensis primulas have just been transplanted into flats of light soil. Here they will remain until they are meeting in the rows, when they will go singly into 2½-inch pots. A high temperature is neither necessary nor desirable for these primulas; 50 degrees at night is ample, and the young plants want to be kept near the light, but need a little shade from the direct rays of the sun. Sowing of these primulas is still seasonable. You will not get as fine Christmas plants as from the earlier sowings, but they can be grown into nice little stock in 5-inch pots, which is a convenient size for marketing or retailing. Even if the obconicas are only in 4-inch pots, they will be serviceable for making up into pans when in flower.

Gloxinias.

The earliest started gloxinia tubers will soon be throwing flowers. Be careful, in watering, not to pour it over the foliage. If the sun's rays chance to hit them while damp, scorching will follow. As the pots begin to fill with roots, an occasional weak dose of liquid manure will be found helpful. Elevate the best plants on inverted pots and be sure that they are shaded sufficiently to prevent scalding of the leaves. If a batch can be timed to flower about Memorial day, they will prove useful for bouquet work where rather choicer flowers are wanted. If stems are of insufficient length, it is easy to add a stake or wire to offset this difficulty. There is still ample time in which to start a batch of tubers for later summer blooming. Place them in flats covered lightly with leaf-mold and sand, in a warm, moist house, and they will quickly start to grow. Then pot off singly. Gloxinias are serviceable during the summer months, when flowering plants are none too abundant.

Calceolarias.

Calceolarias will soon be in flower; in fact, the rugosa section is already nicely open. Be sure to stake the plants securely before they bend over. They are brittle and easily broken. Use neat stakes; those painted green are, of course, preferable, not only for calceolarias, but all other pot plants. If growers would only pay a trifle more attention to their supports, their plants would look a lot better. Nothing so disfigures and hurts the sale of an otherwise fine plant as a number of cumbersome stakes. Always use them as thin as is consistent with rigidity, and if painted green they are of course much less conspicuous. But to return to the calceolarias, they want shade now. Any sun will be injurious, especially to the large-flowered or herbaceous section. Fumigate every few days, and grow the plants as cool as possible. Feed regularly once the pots are full of roots. Cow or sheep manure, with some soot added, will keep the foliage dark green and tone them up.

FACTORY FOR YOUNG STOCK.

A good many people who buy each season a few hundreds or a few thousands of rooted cuttings or young stock out of pots, do not appreciate the extent of this department of the business with some of the specialists. The accompanying illustration will serve to give an idea of the immense quantities of stock propagated by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. The smaller of the two pictures shows the propagating house for bedding plants, where rooted cuttings are turned out literally by the hundreds of thousands. The larger picture is reproduced from a photograph made in what is probably the largest greenhouse in the United States given over exclusively to the grafting of roses. This is an iron frame house 51x475. The picture shows propagating cases of a combined length of almost 1,000 feet. The total grafting here this season amounts to 780,000 rose plants. This house holds at one time only one-third the season's output.

At the time of the Boston flower show many visitors from a distance took the opportunity of visiting the Pierson plant. No matter how well kept the visitor's own greenhouses were, he almost invariably commented on the apple-pie order of everything in the Pierson establishment.

BOSTON.The Market.

Easter has demonstrated with additional force that pot plants are what the public wants for this great floral festival. The sale of them was tremendous, breaking all previous records. On the other hand, cut flowers were a secondary consideration. A few sorts sold well, but others were a perfect glut and hard to move. The days preceding Easter presaged a poor cut flower market, as supplies were heavy and demand light for a week, with little animation, even April 15. Weather conditions were almost ideal, the temperature well above freezing and no wind, rendering much wrapping quite unnecessary.

Lilies, of course, were the leaders in plants, and, contrary to some predictions, there were enough to go around. The quality was fairly good, prices being $10 to $12.50 per hundred buds. Probably nine-tenths were giganteums. Azaleas were seen in great numbers and sold well, especially the white and light pink varieties. The deep pinks moved more sluggishly. Azalea mollis, when well flowered, sold well. Roses of the rambler type had a big sale. Tausendschon was immensely popular. Dorothy Perkins also sold heavily. White Dorothy was seen in considerable numbers and cleaned out well. Hiawatha was the most popular single scarlet, while Paradise, Lady Gay and other varieties were seen. Mignonette, Clothilde Soupert, hybrid perpetuals, such as Frau Karl Druschki and Brunner, and Beauties all had a good sale. Crim-son Rambler was little seen, and the red Baby Rambler sold poorly as compared with the pink and white. Genistas had quite a call. Acacias were chiefly armata. In ericas, cupressina and melanthera had the lead. There were also some good yellow ones of the waxy type. Boronias at $3 to $10 each, retail, had a fair sale.

Bougainvilleas, both large and small plants, had an excellent sale. In spiræas, Gladstone and astilboides were the favorites. A limited number only of Queen Alexandra appeared. Marguerite Queen Alexandra was a favorite. For bulbous pans the demand was strong. Geraniums in 4-inch and 5-inch pots, carrying two or three trusses, sold in considerable numbers. Rhododendrons of light shades, especially pink and white Pearl, went quickly. Hydrangeas were extra fine and sold better than a year ago. H. hortensis in blue, pink and white proved a favorite. Apart from flowering plants, the demand was not great. Small ferns, palms, nephrolepis and colored-leaved stock, such as crotons and dracænas, were somewhat neglected. All in all, Easter business in plants was good, both for growers and retailers.

Coming to cut flowers, the report must be less favorable. Never during Easter week have we seen business so dead. An advance in prices did materialize in a few lines, but as a rule even prices of a week previous were not maintained. It was the same old story—those who marketed their flowers each day are feeling much happier than those who held back supplies until Friday and Saturday and then flooded and demoralized an already jaded market. Roses were in heavy supply and prices ruled lower than usual. Killarneys were favorites. The higher priced grades were less wanted than more moderate priced ones. Beauties were good; so were Wards, Bon Silenes and Safranons. Carnations were surely never in such a deplorable condition at Easter. Some realized $3 per hundred, but many went at $1 and some less, or not at all. Bulbous flowers sold better than carnations, but were overabundant. Sweet peas in pink, white and lavender of good quality sold well, realizing $1 per hundred. Such single violets as appeared made $1 to $2; doubles also sold out well. Valley moved moderately well, as did English primroses, marguerites, yellow and white, and Spanish iris. Cut lilies had a good sale, and L. candidum, if of good quality, sold well.

There were few cattleyas, but the demand was light, while gardenias were largely neglected. Stocks and antirrhinums were each druggy, although of excellent quality. Pansies were overabundant. Callas sold well. For Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus the demand was good.

Easter with the Retailers.

Arnold & Petros did an excellent business. They had extra good Tausendschon roses, azaleas, lilies and pans of bulbous stock and are well pleased with their first Easter business.

J. J. Casey, at the Rosary, on Clarendon street, had a great call for yellow marguerites and English primroses. His specimen bougainvilleas and large pans of Easter lilies were noteworthy.

F. H. Houghton had excellent white camellias, a grand lot of dwarf azaleas, kalmias, rhododendrons, Erica cupressina and an excellent lot of pot plants.

Carboe's store, as usual, was a delight to walk through—the arrangement is so artistic and so different from that of the regular flower store. Standard ramblers, basket trained ramblers, ericas in variety, cyclamens, Ghent azaleas and genistas were all extra fine. Tausendschon was the favorite rose. We noted fine vases here of the perennial delphiniums, both light and dark blue.

W. E. Doyle did a heavy plant trade. Here tubs of gardenias were heavily flowered. Boronias were excellent, as were azaleas and ramblers. Large made-up pots of lilies were in heavy demand, as were nicely flowered geraniums in 5-inch pots.

Edward MacMulkin had an attractive Easter window in white. He reported a great sale for hydrangeas, especially hortensis, also Tausendschon and Dorothy Perkins roses, bougainvilleas, azaleas and ericas.

Huge bunches of pansies and single violets were features at Wax Bros.' place. Here Beauty roses were fine. This firm had a big sale on lilies, azaleas and acacias.

Thomas F. Galvin had one window filled with bougainvilleas and lilies, another being devoted to hydrangeas, at his Tremont street store. Specimen plants of Queen Alexandra marguerite were fine. The business done here and at the Back Bay conservatories was away ahead of a year ago.

Penn's place was, as usual, crowded to the doors and their Easter trade has been a record-breaker. All good flowering plants had a great sale, while valley, violets, primroses, Beauty roses and yellow marguerites were cut flower favorites.

S. Hoffman did a hustling business at his stores and greenhouses, and disposed of a tremendous amount of material. His specimen ramblers, acacias, lilies, rhododendrons, kalmias, azaleas and other plants were equal to the best seen anywhere.

J. Newman & Sons did a splendid Easter trade. Their bulb pans, hydrangeas, lilies and azaleas had a great sale. Pot plant business vastly exceeded that in cut flowers.

At Zinn's, on Park street, trade was brisk, both in cut flowers and plants. Acacias, genistas and ericas were of excellent quality here.

H. R. Comley, at 6 Park street, did the largest plant business he has ever had. Everything new, rare and unique in plants and cut flowers was to be seen here. Gladioli, Spanish iris, anemones, ranunculi, pans of valley and cyclamens were noteworthy here.

With Growers and Wholesalers.

William H. Elliott had a heavy Easter cut of roses. William Shean, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Rhea Reid and Safrano, among others, were of fine quality. He had a heavy call for Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri.

H. M. Robinson's commission house was a busy place Easter week and business was considerably ahead of a year ago. Sweet peas sold well, and there was a marked scarcity of violets. Roses and carnations were each in oversupply. Greenery was in heavy demand.

William Sim had 100,000 sweet peas for Easter and the quality was superb. He also had 50,000 single violets from houses which had been shaded.

The W. W. Edgar Co. had a splendid Easter trade. Their lilies were among the best seen in Boston, while azaleas, genistas, ramblers, etc., were all cleaned out.

John McFarland sold 10,000 valley April 15. He sold all his lilies. He is now cutting some good Carnot roses and gardenias.

H. T. Capers, for the Halifax Garden Co., handled 100,000 sweet peas and 60,000 carnations at the Boston Co-operative Market Easter week.

William S. Phelps, of Marlboro, was strong on pink antirrhinum. He has been cutting perennial larkspurs of good quality for a month. These are sold by J. M. Cohen. Mr. Cohen sold over 20,000 carnations April 14 and 15.

Welch Bros. were well satisfied with Easter trade. They did a heavy plant business direct from their growers' establishments. Their roses, valley, carnations and other flowers were fine, as were Rhinebeck violets.

The Sutermeister estate, Readville, through William Caraher, disposed of every pan of bulbous plants they had, including 1,500 of narcissi alone.

H. L. Belcher, of Winthrop, sold 10,000 valley April 15 and a large quantity of bulbous flowers. He has 25,000 geraniums now coming on for spring trade.

The finely grown geraniums seen in a number of leading stores were grown by George M. Anderson, of Milton. These met with an excellent sale.

S. J. Goddard had the best Easter business on record. His home trade exceeded that of all previous years. Carnations were in heavy crop, and he had a fine variety of other flowers.

Thomas Roland's plants were seen at every high-class store in the city and outskirts, and many customers asked for Roland's plants. His wonderful exhibition at the National Show proved a splendid advertisement. Mr. Roland had a grand Easter business.

Mann Bros. and Paine Bros., of Randolph, were the heaviest sellers of bulbous stock and both disposed of a big lot of flowers. John J. Fee, of Jamaica Plain, another specialist, sold out clean.

The lilies and other plants grown by A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, were of exceptionally fine quality.

Peirce Bros., in addition to large quantities of lilies and azaleas, had genistas and other plants. They had a heavy cut of carnations and yellow marguerites.

John Barr, of South Natick, sold out all his cyclamens. He had a grand crop of carnations of superb quality. Scarlet Glow and Mrs. B. P. Cheney, the new variegated, were fine, as indeed were all varieties.

From Lewis Small, of Tewksbury, came a fine cut of annual chrysanthemums, and among extra quality carnations were Pink Delight and Winsor.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, had a tremendous pick of carnations. He still grows Queen of excellent quality and says that some prominent retailers ask for it, in preference to White Enchantress, and pay the same price for it.

Various Notes.

Adolph Koch, of Nobscot, is bringing in the first white feverfew of the season.

Remember the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club April 25. In addition to the lecture on "Gladioli," by B. Hammond Tracy, there will be reports from the National Show entertainment committee and other business of interest.

The death of William H. Knapp, reported in another column, removes one of the most estimable of our local growers, one for whom everyone had the highest possible regard.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

From the reports of the local trade the business done from Friday to Sunday was the largest and best Easter ever experienced. The weather was our friend again, as Saturday was clear and Sunday most glorious. The west end florists, although their show houses were battered up by Thursday's great hail storm, made a grand show of blooming plants and cleaned up on them by noon Sunday. Never before were there so many fine blooming plants seen and sold as this Easter, and they brought good prices at that. The leading florists say the majority of the buyers want blooming plants for this holiday.

Lily plants became scarce in places when the hail almost killed the crop. These, with hydrangeas, azaleas and Dutch bulbous stock in pots and pans, had the call. The cut flower sales were also large in all sections of the city. The wholesale markets were well supplied with a fine lot of lilies, both Harrisii and callas.

The consignments of carnations were large in all varieties, with Enchantress leading in demand. The quality was extra good, with prices not over 50 cents per hundred. Roses, too, came in large lots and cleaned up early at $10 per hundred for extra selects. Killarney, Richmond and My Maryland had the call. Long Beauties also came in for good demand. There were more violets and sweet peas in the market than we expected, with clean-up sales on the best. Dutch hyacinths, tulips, valley and other bulb stock had a great demand. There was also a big call for smilax, asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengeri, adiantum and common ferns.

We can safely say that the 1911 Easter was a grand one for the St. Louis florists in all sections of the city.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club meeting Thursday afternoon, April 13, was not so well attended, owing to the greenhouse men all being busy. When President Connon opened the meeting there were only fifteen members present. Joseph A. Matter made application for membership and Thomas C. Carr, of St. Louis, and Frank H. Wild, of Sarcoxie, Mo., were elected to membership. The trustees reported that they were at work on the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration and that they would make a full report of their plans at the May meeting. Treasurer Smith made his first appearance at the meeting as a married man and was congratulated on all sides. The feature of the meeting was a talk by J. F. Ammann on what he saw and heard at the Boston flower show, and it proved to be one of the most interesting talks ever given before the club.

The next meeting of the club will be held Thursday, May 11, at 2 o'clock.

A Great Hail Storm.

The great hail storm Thursday, April 13, did the greatest damage to florists in the history of St. Louis, or, as some of them say, greater than any in the United States. All florists with glass in its path suffered a great loss, including many in Kirkwood and Webster Groves. Those near Clayton and Olivette escaped the hail. The majority of those whose places were damaged had hail insurance.

The greatest loss to the city florists who had show houses was in plants. The houses were all filled with fine blooming plants of all kinds, and the falling glass and heavy rain that followed did great damage. The Missouri Botanical Garden and all South St. Louis florists escaped the hail. The heaviest losers were as follows: C. Young & Sons Co., hardly any glass left and their Easter and Decoration day stock a complete loss; the Bentzen Floral Co., Richard Frow, Mr. Sanger, A. G. Greiner, Sanders Nurseries, Alex. Waldbart, Mr. Huettemann, Robert Scott, Koenig Floral Co., Mr. Meinhardt, Grimm & Gorly, Alex. Johnson, John Nyflot, John F. Shields, Chas. J. Bleeckert and James Steers. The city park department at Forest Park also had a great loss to bedding stock and the palm house.

The store men had show houses damaged to the following extent: Kalisch Bros., $600; F. C. Weber, $600; F. H. Weber, $200; J. F. Windt, $800; Townsend Floral Co., $400; Ellison Floral Co., $800; Theodore Miller, $500; City Park Department, nearly $1,000.

At Kirkwood and Webster Groves the loss was great and the amount of glass broken at these places swamped the glass dealers with orders the next day. The largest places damaged were: Oakland Floral Co., Hugo Gross, William Winter and F. W. Ude, Jr. There was hardly a pane of glass left at any of these places. There were others who also suffered great losses, including W. J. Pilcher, A. G. Ahner, G. E. Ahner, Chas. Ude, F. W. Ude, Sr., George Hartman, Aug. Hartman, Gus Gross, Venne-mann Bros., Mr. Wolfsberger, the three Scheidegger brothers, W. A. Rose, Luther Armstrong, Cannon Floral Co., Jos. Hauser, and quite a few smaller places.

It is estimated that about 215,750 feet of glass will have to be replaced in Kirkwood, Webster Groves and Old Orchard alone, to say nothing of probably as much more being needed by the city growers.

Various Notes.

Frank Fillmore was sporting a brand-new delivery wagon for the heavy Easter orders.

Pierre Schnider, foreman of the Oakland Floral Co., says in all his experience he never saw such large hail stones as fell last Thursday, and he has seen many hail storms.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, got in just in time to book large orders for the Peerless glazing points for hail sufferers.

Grimm & Gorly had one of the largest Easter annexes in the city, a few doors west of their store on Washington avenue. They say their Easter trade was the largest in years.

The Mullanphy Floral Co. and the Bentzen Floral Co. have baseball teams this year and the two teams will battle next Sunday at one of the local parks.

The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. and the Kahn Glass Co. were swamped with orders for greenhouse glass the day after the hail storm.

The florists on South Grand avenue, the Eggeling Floral Co., R. J. Windler, C. C. Bergstermann and Charles Beyer, all say that their Easter trade was better than last year.

C. Young & Sons Co., notwithstanding the great loss by hail and water, saved enough stock to make a grand display at their salesroom. They cleaned out early on plants and did a large cut flower business. J. J. B.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The long looked for Easter rush is a thing of the past and was highly satisfactory to all concerned. Outside of the brisk wind on Saturday, the weather for the last week was ideal, thus saving the trouble and expense of extra wrapping. The wholesale growers of pot plants certainly were fortunate, for it was only a matter of packing the plants on the wagon and then off again. While the mercury was up during the day, the nights were cool, thus bracing up stock in good shape. It can safely be said that, on the whole, the quality of cut flowers was away ahead of that produced for some seasons back. If violets are of good quality at this time, which they are, then we have proof enough that growing conditions are pretty good.

Easter lilies, both potted and cut, were rather shorter stemmed than last year with a good many growers, but the demand was good and they moved well. In fact, all blooming plants, from a hyacinth up, when well done, found ready sale. Cut flowers also had their inning, considering that the supply was fully up to the demand. Roses, carnations, snapdragons, valley, sweet peas, violets and the various sorts of bulbous stock, all of really fine quality, sold well. The demand for American Beauties was light, due, no doubt, to the fact that for some time past it was next to impossible to get any. The supply in this line was just about equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

To judge by the way the store of the Baumgarten Floral Co. was crowded with ready orders, and everybody busy, one would conclude that business with them was certainly satisfactory.

Wm. Zimmermann, located at the corner of Fifth street and Grand avenue, has the advantage of displaying stock on two streets, and, with the windows filled in an artistic manner, he got an amount of business which, as he says, was fully up to that of last year.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. was well prepared in the line of blooming plants and reports heavy sales in this line. The firm also had a large lot of home-grown Easter lilies, which cleaned out well.

"We did an enormous business in every line," was the answer given at the store of J. M. Fox & Soh on Sunday forenoon. While they had not had time to figure up, they thought it was ahead of last year.

It was one continual rush from morning till night for the Aug. F. Kellner Co. to get out all the church decorations on Saturday. As this firm makes decorating a specialty, a good share of such work is always secured.

The force of the W. A. McKenney Co. were busy as bees, and business with them was satisfactory, indeed.

It was the first Easter experienced by the A. Currie Co., and they say that they were well satisfied with it.

To sell all good pot plants out of such a large lot as the C. C. Pollworth Co. had, certainly speaks for itself. Shipping trade with them was first-class.

Both H. W. Hunkel and Fred Holton made good use of their autos during the last week, taking prospective buyers to their Brown Deer and Humboldt street greenhouse plants on short notice. Their pot plants and cut flowers all were in prime condition and moved well. Their shipping trade ran ahead of expectations. The only article they ran short on was wild smilax.

With an increased force, the Wisconsin Floral Co., on Grand avenue, could not, owing to the lack of room, take care of the transient trade, which was ahead of last year. While pot plants sold well, they had more call for Easter lilies, sweet peas and violets than for roses and carnations.

Fred Bliese, of Schneck & Bliese, Waukesha, Wis., was in the city the first part of the week, selecting stock for their Easter orders. E. O.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

Easter of 1911 may be put on record as the most strenuous in the last six or eight years. It rained continuously from Monday morning until Friday night and the prospects were gloomy, indeed, among the florists, but on Saturday the sun came out in all its glory, and by night the supplies were pretty well cleaned out. Judging from reports all around, the amount of business done showed about a ten per cent increase over that of last year.

In pot plants, lilies, hydrangeas, spiræas and roses were plentiful and in fine shape. There was no bulb stock in this market, owing to the warm weather during March. In cut flowers, lilies, roses, carnations, valley and violets had the call and everything in that line was cleaned up early. All in all, it was a highly satisfactory Easter, even if the business was all done on the last day.

Various Notes.

Honaker the Florist had a grand display of potted plants for Easter, especially in lilies, hydrangeas and roses. His two large windows contained beautiful displays of decorated potted plants, surmounted by an electrically lighted cross and arch. They report a slight increase in business over that of last year.

John A. Keller displayed an elegant lot of plants, especially lilies, rhododendrons, azaleas, hydrangeas and spiræas. He was also fortunate in having a large cut of fancy carnations and violets. He had a unique and attractive window display, consisting of a 4-foot egg, broken at one side, inside of which a Belgian hare and her family made their home. A neatly made fence surrounded the display. This firm reports trade satisfactory in every way.

The Michler Bros. Co. reports the best Easter trade in the firm's history. They disposed of an immense lot of pot plants and cut flowers. This company has had an extra busy spring, outdoor planting and landscaping being their specialty.

Anderson & White were the only ones in town with a fine lot of hyacinths and Murillo tulips in pots and pans. They also had a fine lot of Gladstone spiræas, ferns and palms. They report an increase over last Easter.

Kelley & Current report a satisfactory trade, especially in pot plants. This firm has in course of construction a new house, 20x100, to be used for roses.

James P. Keller, of the firm of John A. Keller, has contracted for a car of greenhouse glass, 16x24 D. S. A., for summer delivery.

Lucien Le Clere, formerly of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., is visiting his parents. He leaves for Chicago this week. J. P. K.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The fine weather April 14 and 15 was the salvation of the New York Easter. A snow flurry struck the town at 3 a. m. Sunday, about which hour the wholesale stores and markets were a scene of activity, the cut flower buyers placing their final orders for Easter distribution. After Thursday until that hour the finest of spring weather prevailed. No wrapping of plants was necessary. The retailers were never so favored by both weather and prices. Never before at Easter could grand roses, carnations, violets and, in fact, every kind of cut flowers be purchased at such reasonable figures. It surely was the retailers' harvest. Early on Saturday, with most of them, every plant had been sold and the plant growers were called on for more. The large plantmen were sold out, many of them, a week before. Never were flowering plants so popular and so rapidly disposed of. Everywhere the same results were seen. If anything was disappointing, it was the lilies in pots. These closed out slowly, and a few were left, while a good many cut lilies were sold late at a considerable sacrifice from the quotations of Saturday morning.

In the cut flower market the rose shipments were enormous, far beyond any former Easter. Immense quantities came in from a congested city to the south of us. The natural consequence was a surplus which was closed out at the buyers' option. One remarkable fact was the absence of pickling. Everything had quality and color, and was worth all that was asked for it. American Beauties never got above 40 cents, and fell gradually to 25 cents. The supply was immense, but the quantity of top quality was not excessive. They will likely go much lower this week. All varieties of roses fell Saturday evening, the best Killarney going to 18 cents and lower, and the shorter grades of Maids were under 5 cents for the selected. Straight slips were going at 3 cents. Maryland joined with the rest in the recession, and only Richmonds of the top grade held at the morning figures.

There was an enormous stock of carnations, and 4 cents was top for the best of them. Most of the receipts sold at 3 cents and under all day, and $20 per thousand was the asking price at 2 o'clock Easter morning.

Over 1,000 boxes of violets arrived April 15, and 75 cents per hundred was the top figure at any time for the specials. The rest held fairly at 50 cents when good, but a lot of the violets were not up to the mark. The street men used immense quantities of the day-old surplus at $2 to $3 per thousand. Anything left Monday morning was closed out at half this figure. Several million violets came to the New York market during the week. Several wholesalers disposed of over 100,000 each April 15. This week will about end violet shipments.

Valley was scarce and, while most of it was sold at 2 cents to 3 cents, the best houses were bidding 4 cents for it late. It is back again this week to normal figures. There were no orchids to spare and the best cattleyas touched $1 each. Lilies sold at $10 per hundred for the best, but there was a wonderful supply of them and they fell to $8, and even $6, as Saturday night wore on. This week $6 will be the top, but fortunately the slaughter of last year did not occur. There was no rise in bulbous stock, tulips, hyacinths, narcissi and daffodils all holding at only regular prices. There were few gardenias of merit in the market. Callas held easily at $1.50 to $2 a dozen.

Opinions differ as to the outcome of the business. Many retailers honestly declare it the best ever, and the consensus of wholesale opinion is that it was better than expected.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be May 8.

The auction houses never had so many buyers, nor realized better prices than this year. The clean-up of Easter flowering plants was complete. The dates are advertised in the local dailies and the public is getting wise to its opportunity.

The new store of J. J. Fellouris, at 116 West Twenty-eighth street, is 100 feet deep, and the second floor will be fitted up for a wholesale place. A complete new front is to be built. The location is excellent.

Frank L. Moore, of Chatham, N. J., marched with his old regiment, the Seventh New York, April 19, at its anniversary.

Traendly & Schenck received last week a shipment of grand carnations from the New Jersey State Experimental Station at New Brunswick.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Club announces another big fall flower show, with better location and facilities than last season.

Easter was too late this year for general satisfaction. In 1943 it will be April 25, which will be altogether too late for most of us.

George Siebrecht, of Siebrecht & Siebrecht, has been ill for a week at his home in Astoria.

All the supply men say this was the best Easter in their experience, the call for baskets and novelties of every kind coming from every part of the country.

The seedsmen's harvest time is drawing to a close. The cold weather has prolonged it and most of the houses have caught up with the orders. The local trade will keep them all busy, however, until the middle of May.

J. McHutchison is back from a trip to South America.

Hilda roses at M. C. Ford's were a popular specialty. Grand carnation stock came from Hession.

Gunther Bros. say they never handled a larger quantity of violets at any Easter. One grower, they state, sent them 100,000.

H. E. Froment says over 20,000 Killarneys from one grower came in Saturday morning.

Geo. Saltford repeated his Easter experience and shipped great quantities of violets to out-of-town customers.

The Kessler Bros. found their new store and greenhouses a great convenience. They did a large plant business. Another week will find them in the new store at 113 West Twenty-eighth street.

Walter Sheridan says he never had so large and fine a stock of roses at any Easter in his long experience.

A. L. Young was more than pleased with the increase in his Easter trade.

J. K. Allen closed out all his plants early and says his Brunner roses sold splendidly.

Charles Millang, Moore, Hentz & Nash, B. S. Slinn, Jr., Bonnot Bros. and A. Moltz & Co., all in the Coogan building, did a large business. Charles Millang handled a lot of plants at his new stands on the second floor.

The Easter rush kept down the attendance of bowlers last week. The contest for team membership at Baltimore begins May 6 and lasts until August. Matches will soon be rolled with Tuxedo and Madison. The club will use Thumm's alleys the balance of the season, Thirty-first street and Broadway.

Joseph G. Leikens, now at Fifty-sixth street and Fifth avenue, has leased from John M. Ellis the dwelling at 20 West Fifty-seventh street, on a plot 30x100 feet. The lease will run for ten years and will aggregate $250,000. The building will be remodeled for use as a retail store.

A well attended meeting and exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York was held April 12 in the American Museum of Natural History. The exhibits were nearly all from private establishments, but John Lewis Childs received honorable mention for two pots of Amaryllis formosissima and certificates of merit for Calla Elliottiana and Calla solfatere. Lager & Hurrell received a silver medal for Miltonia Bleuiana. J. Austin Shaw.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall on Wednesday evening, April 12. President Trepass occupied the chair and a good number were present.

The result of the competition for the society's prizes was as follows: Twelve mixed carnations, first, James McDonald; one calceolaria, first, Alexander McKenzie; flowering shrub, first, Alexander McKenzie. A certificate of culture was awarded to William Eccles for a vase of mixed carnations, and to J. W. Everett for gardenias. Honorable mention was awarded to George Dorber for mushrooms, to James McDonald for antirrhinums and to George Dorber for a vase of mixed roses.

A. McKenzie, J. W. Everett and George Dorber spoke as to their methods of culture in preparing for their exhibits. Various questions were placed in the question box and were all answered satisfactorily.

G. Barton, R. Wright and E. Westlake were the judges appointed.

Harry Jones, Thomas Rolley and Andrew McHenry were elected to active membership.

It was decided to hold the fall exhibition November 1 and 2. The executive committee was requested to draw up a preliminary schedule and present it at the May meeting, and also a schedule for the rose show, which will be held the night of the June meeting.

J. Ingram offered a prize of $5 for sweet peas, twenty-four varieties, twelve of each. W. A. Sperling, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., offered a prize of $5 for tulips, six varieties, six of each, for the May meeting. They were both heartily thanked for their generous offers.

The society's prize in May will be for tulips, three heads of lettuce, and outdoor flowering shrubs, to be cut from outside. E. W.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Every Dayton florist is satisfied that for once in his life Dame Fortune has smiled on him. No one could have dreamed of a better trade than was experienced last week; even the weather man was most generous, for he sent along some fine, cool weather, and not too much or too little sunshine, which just kept stock in a fine, salable condition. It was especially favorable to bulbous stock. Consequently, with these conditions prevalent, there were no kicks coming; moreover, the kicks were converted into compliments, which, together with the financial results, made the florists feel extremely happy.

It is quite evident that people are becoming more educated to the importance of flowers for Easter, as each year their popularity increases. Every florist had his share of trade, and the heaviest demands were for potted plants. The majority of cut flowers sold were of the fancy grade, while a liberal amount of funeral work consumed the short-stemmed stock.

Lilies could not have been finer in quality, and the quantity equaled the demand. Roses were also plentiful and stock was fine, but carnations were off crop, and the demand for them exceeded the supply, white being especially scarce. Valley, daffodils and narcissi, although abundant, were all consumed, and pot plants of every description were cleaned up. Green goods were scarce.

Various Notes.

One of the most beautiful displays in the city was that of the 75,000 Easter lily blooms at the Miami Floral Co.'s greenhouses, the sight of which attracted hundreds of admirers. This company shipped out some exceptionally large lily plant orders, besides supplying the local demands. Splendid crops of Beauties and roses were easily disposed of, as well as great quantities of valley, which were unusually fine. Naturally this firm is more than satisfied with results.

"Easter business out our way was the best it has been for several years," is the report of Mrs. L. D. Johnson, successor to Mrs. B. Hendrichs. Along with the general Easter rush, she also had a brisk demand for funeral work.

"We got all that we had anticipated," is the way the Heiss Floral Co. puts it, in answer to the question, "How's business?" Another good thing they say is that the demand took everything in sight, so that there was no waste. They also had several large decorations.

Mrs. J. F. Young tells us that she could not have expected a better business. Although trade in the cut flower line was not so brisk as it has been in previous years, owing to the advanced prices, nevertheless the demand for pot plants far exceeded previous records and this, together with an abundance of funeral work, brought a most satisfactory Easter week.

Miss Olive Ritter says that trade in her section of town was the best it has been since she started in business. She realized a good thing out of fancy Easter baskets of plants.

The report of Mrs. B. Haschke is that trade went far beyond her expectations, everything being sold out clean. Mrs. Haschke has the credit of having the best display of hyacinths in the city.

M. D. Schmidt & Son realized a big business in pot plants, such as cinerarias, primroses, hyacinths, spiræas, etc., all of which were in splendid condition.

M. Anderson, who conducted retail stores in Dayton, Middletown and Cleveland this year, reports that the income from each place was most satisfactory.

"Pot plant trade was the best ever," is W. W. Horlacher's way of expressing it, and he has no kick to enter regarding the cut flower trade.

With a broad grin across his face, H. H. Ritter announced that Easter business this year was the best he had ever experienced.

John Boehner says, "Don't forget to mention that the foregoing are also my sentiments."

M. & L. Johnson report that they never had a nicer Easter.

The Advance Floral Co.'s Easter display in the Arcade was especially beautiful, and their report on business chimes in with the rest. R. A. B.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Easter proved a record-breaker for this city. There were potted plants and cut flowers in plenty, but as a rule there was a general cleaning up at good prices. In addition to the regular retail flower stands, many of the dealers opened temporary places in vacant stores in the residential sections of the city, while in a number of cases growers themselves hired empty stores for a few days. All of the department and dry-goods stores had plants and flowers and many corner groceries dipped into the pie with the expectation of getting rich quick. Many of the latter, however, had a hard scramble to come out whole. As a rule, the stock that was offered by the grocers was inferior and such as the regular flower stores would refuse to handle. Prices ranged about one-half higher than at ordinary times.

Various Notes.

T. J. Johnston & Co. had the table decorations and George Johnson & Son the hall decorations for the annual banquet of the New England Manufacturing Jewelers' and Silversmiths' Association at Infantry hall recently.

Charles H. Hunt, of Burnside street, had a store at 393 Westminster street during the Holy Week.

Frey Bros. are busy on outdoor work and have considerable work booked for this spring.

Philip Lavery, who has been employed by T. O'Connor for the last two years, is now in the employ of J. B. Canning.

Simon Colitz, Woonsocket, reports an unusually large trade for Easter.

Everett Wordell has been engaged as gardener at the estate of Roswell B. Burchard, at Little Compton.

Theodore R. Peterson, proprietor of the Hogg Greenhouses, reports one of the biggest Easter trades ever experienced by him in this city.

Max Villiers has returned to the employ of Johnston Bros. This firm was obliged to work its force all night Friday and Saturday to fill Easter orders. They handled thousands of potted plants.

Mr. Bryant, representing A. H. Hews & Co., of Cambridge, Mass., was a visitor in this city last week.

M. Macnair conducted a large overflow sale in a corner store near his place during Easter week.

J. Kopelman augmented his selling force in his Washington street store by more than half a dozen clerks for the holiday trade. Several thousand plants of various descriptions were disposed of. A large proportion of these came from his own houses at Oaklawn.

George Hunt has been elected fire commissioner of Providence.

Anton Christensen, gardener at the Dr. Wolcott Gibbs estate at Newport, received word last week of the death of his wife a few days before in Denmark. Mrs. Christensen left for her native home last summer in the hope that the change of climate would benefit her health. W. H. M.

BUFFALO.

It would be hard to say that Easter business was larger than ever, but we can safely say that it was away above the average. Weather conditions were not ideal, but at the same time it was not inconvenient for deliveries, and this is the one important point. Friday was rainy and chilly, but this soon broke and orders came in a rush on Saturday and Sunday. Cut stock was in big demand, with the usual amount of plants and plant baskets. Large plants sold well, especially the rhododendrons and azaleas. The bulk of the lily stock was short and all available Easter lilies which were tall were quickly disposed of. Violets were much better in quality than predicted and sold well, as did sweet peas, valley and orchids. Carnations and roses were in big demand and the red in both Beauties and Richmond were quickly bought up. R. A. S.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE sweet pea was one of the most popular flowers this Easter.

QUEEN MARY has designated Carnation Winsor as the official flower for her coronation functions.

THERE is one business facility the florists of Great Britain now have that is not given to the trade in America: In England insurance is written against bad weather, and for such an occasion as Easter merchants in many lines protect their investments in perishable merchandise by taking out Pluvius policies.

OBITUARY.

Walter H. Knapp.

Walter H. Knapp, for twenty-six years a florist in Newton and Wellesley, Mass., died April 11, at Rutland, Mass., after an illness of two weeks, though he had been in poor health since early winter. His body was taken to Newton, where the funeral took place from his home, at 121 North street. He was born in Brookline and obtained his education in the public schools and later at Amherst Agricultural College, from which he was graduated in 1875. His death marks the second in a class of eighteen in thirty-five years. Aside from his vocation as a florist, he won considerable local prominence as a singer in church choirs in Newton and Wellesley Hills. He was about 56 years old and is survived by his mother.

In the death of Walter H. Knapp, April 11, at Rutland sanatorium for tuberculosis patients, Boston has lost one of its most upright and highly respected florists. The deceased gentleman was born fifty-six years ago in Brookline, Mass., and was educated in the public schools there and later at Amherst Agricultural College. Since 1875 he had followed the florists' business in Newton and Wellesley, growing a miscellaneous line of plants, such as the average florist does not handle. In addition to an excellent home trade, he had a stand at the Boston Flower Exchange, with which he had been identified for over sixteen years. He was at one time a member of the firm of Callender & Knapp, taking over the business himself on his partner's death and continuing it successfully. Mr. Knapp's was a familiar figure in flower circles, and at the annual dinner of the flower market he has made some interesting addresses.

Mr. Knapp belonged to the S. A. F. and won considerable prominence as a singer in local churches. He never married, but lived with his mother, who survives him, and for whom much sympathy is felt. At the funeral services April 14 many of his brother florists attended to pay their last tribute of esteem. Among many beautiful designs was one from the Boston Flower Exchange and another from the salesmen and buyers at the wholesale markets.

W. N. Craig.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The Easter trade, both wholesale and retail, turned out better than seemed possible forty-eight hours before the day dawned. Business was slow in developing and the early part of the week did not produce, with many, a volume of sales equal to those of a year ago. April 14 was the big shipping day in the wholesale market, but it did not come up to previous high records. The retailers did the bulk of their business Saturday, and it was Saturday evening and Sunday morning that the wholesalers wrote the tickets that made the Easter week compare favorably with last year. Prices were not excessive at any time or on any line of stock, so that the retailers were able to sell at little more than their usual scale of prices, and in the end rounded up an immense volume of cut flower business, in addition to their plant trade. The market undoubtedly handled more flowers for Easter than in any other one week in the history of the business in Chicago. Practically everyone did as much business as at any preceding Easter, and some had nice gains because of the large supply and in spite of lower average prices.

If lilies are considered the most important item at Easter, no one went without them this year. The supply was much greater than at any previous Easter. Prices were not strong at any time, and among the stock left unsold were some of the best lilies received during the week; the fact seemed to be that the short lilies, for which the wholesalers were willing to take 6 cents in large lots, cleaned up, while for the stock held to be worth 10 cents or better there proved to be no buyer. The stock carried over was in no case an important part of the week's receipts, so that on the whole wholesalers and retailers feel satisfied with the outcome, however it may be regarded by the growers.

Receipts of Beauties proved to be considerably heavier than had been anticipated. There were moments when stock was not available for orders, but those who needed Beauties had much less difficulty in obtaining them than had been expected. Of other roses the supply was enormous, the quality in general was exceptionally fine, and buyers were given full value for their money. With so large a supply of fine long roses, the shorts did not fare well, and there were extremely heavy receipts of roses that, while they carried good heads, were short in stem. The buyers who could use this stock in large quantities obtained bargains. Richmond was the one rose of which more could have been used, and for this many substituted short Beauties, a condition exactly the opposite of the general holiday experience.

Another item on which this year's experience was the opposite of the usual was white carnations. Ordinarily these are the wholesaler's chief problem at Easter; the supply usually is greater than of any other color and, if any carnations are a glut, it ordinarily is white. This year white was about the only color it was difficult to supply, though red and dark pink also were in request. Enchantress was the carnation that piled up and pulled down the Splendid stock in the shorter grades—but buyers should not forget that the longest buds are on the longest stems; if you want to give your customers a better rose than your competitor does who is using our Killarneys, order a little longer stems; you may find it pays well.

KILLARNEYS

averages. It is worth while noting that prices on carnations Saturday, April 8, were higher than they were Saturday, April 15. There is considerable complaint of the condition in which carnations were received from the growers—some of them will never cease pickling, and the pickler invariably holds his stock until after the best market has passed.

The strongest demand proved to be for sweet peas. These were in fair supply and generally of excellent quality, but the demand was unexpectedly brisk and many more peas could have been sold had they been available at the right time. For the supply being less than was expected, blame is laid on the dark weather of the fortnight before Easter week. For the increased demand, credit is given to the increasing popularity of the flower and the fact that the quality compared favorably with the quality of violets, many of which were so poor that no one would buy them. Some of the leading retail stores refused to handle violets at all, though a part of the eastern doubles proved to be of first-class quality and were readily salable. Just a few singles came in and were quickly snapped up. Cattleyas were in good demand, and more of these might have been sold. There also was a first-class demand for valley, but the supply was adequate. Spanish iris had a good sale and was widely used for corsage work. There were only moderate arrivals of bulbous stock, and this was slow sale.

Monday morning after Easter brought the wholesalers a run of business that spoke for a satisfactory clean-up by the retailers. Receipts were extremely light, and left-over stock was generally pretty well cleaned up Monday morning, but by afternoon the tide set in again and the market is now heavily supplied in practically all lines. Active business is anticipated, partly because the average quality of stock is so good, while prices are extremely reasonable; this always brings the buyers in. Beauties are among the plentiful items once more.

Easter Plants.

The supply of Easter plants was the largest this city ever has known. There has been more bulbous stock in pans when Easter was earlier, but short lilies in pots were plentiful enough to take the place. There also was an abundance of long-stemmed pot lilies. Azaleas, especially in the smaller sizes, were not plentiful. There were more rhododendrons, hydrangeas, genistas, spiraeas, primulas and other plants than usual, and generally the quality was excellent. But it was on roses that the principal increase and improvement was noted. The ramblers were never so well flowered or shown in such variety.

Easter With Some Retailers.

The Easter business came late, but with most of the retailers it made a satisfactory total, in most cases ahead of last year. Some of the larger and more costly plants, such as roses grown in odd form, were left, but lily plants cleaned up. Cut flowers were not overbought and there was fully as good satisfaction with the cut flower end of the business as with the plant end in most stores.

E. Wienhoeber Co. never had so choice an Easter stock or so good a store arrangement. While plants were as numerous as ever, cut flowers were used extensively in tin-lined baskets. The lilies never were better. Larger plants than usual were shown here, many of them single specimens in fancy receptacles. Victor Bergman, who makes up these combinations, is wonderfully skilful in his color combinations.

It was W. J. Smyth's first Easter in his enlarged store and he was able to make a much better display than ever before, principally plant combinations in baskets. The Michigan avenue window was used for an arrangement in which both plants and cut flowers were in the rich real Italian terra cotta Mr. Smyth picked up on his recent trip to Boston. There was a considerable force of extra clerks to handle the trade, a large part of which came the last day. True to tradition, the largest show window was broken Easter week, but this time it was only splintered by a stone. A smaller window also cracked April 14.

C. A. Samuelson had a rose garden for his Easter window, the center occupied by a pink rambler trained on a cross, with lilies, spiræas and valley growing naturally from a ground of green moss in front. The stock of plants, especially roses, was larger than ever and a satisfactory clean-up was made. A large number of mail orders are handled here.

George Wienhoeber, of the Fleishman Floral Co., says the lenten season was the best his concern has yet had, scarcely less active than before Lent. The week before Easter he says sales every day ran ahead of the corresponding day last year.

Andrew Miller got in from California Thursday, helped out in the Easter rush at Mangel's, where Henry Klunder now is right-hand man, and went out on his run again April 18. Last fall Mr. Miller, who once was one of Chicago's leading florists, decided to return to the trade, but a few weeks in the Mangel store brought on an attack of his old ailment and he went back to conducting for the Pullman Co.

For its Easter comment-maker the Bohannon Floral Co. showed several rambler roses trained on balloon trellises, with live song birds in small cages hung inside.

Harry Rowe's new conservatory was a great aid in making a display and in handling the rush. A rambler rose trained in the form of a yacht was the central feature of the window display.

Gus Lange had his store so full of extra clerks that it looked crowded even in the lulls, which were short and infrequent. Few flower stores make a larger number of sales than does Lange's. He could not fill all his orders for sweet peas.

Plants, and then more plants, expresses the main call with the Geo. Wittbold Co. Made-up baskets were also in big demand. Louis Wittbold said that Friday it looked as though business would be light, but Saturday and Sunday more than made up for it, and little was left.

Lilies had the main call with Leopold Koropp, but plant baskets also sold well, and the total business was considerably ahead of previous years.

Cinerarias sold especially well with Stollery Bros., and it was said that "cut flowers weren't in it compared with plants." They found only slight demand for fancy basket arrangements.

H. N. Bruns says business for Easter was the best ever. Not a single Easter lily was left in the store. Baby Ramblers and other plants at $2.50 and $3 had an extra good call.

"An enormous business, with fancy made-up baskets as the leaders, and azaleas, Baby Ramblers, Easter lilies, etc., following closely," is the report from George Asmus, manager for Schiller the Florist. Everything salable was disposed of and stock was bought Monday morning to fill orders.

Various Notes.

John Starrett, florist at the La Salle hotel and one of the oldest men in the trade in Chicago, is having more than his share of misfortune. Wednesday morning, April 12, his son Will, who was employed by the Chicago Carnation Co., was found dead in bed, and Sunday, April 16, a daughter, Mrs. Copper-smith, died under tragic circumstances, it being suspected that she received a dose of the wrong medicine. Will Starrett was 26 years of age and leaves a widow. Mrs. Copper-smith was 29 years of age and is survived by her husband and two children. The two families live within a block of each other on Cottage Grove avenue.

August Poehlmann states that Poehlmann Bros. Co. had six large houses of lilies for Easter. He estimates the number of flowers at 125,000 and says that on the whole the length of stem and quality of bloom was all that anyone could ask. They had none of the dwarf lilies that were so common.

of several growers to his staff since April 1, one of the largest sending his first consignment three days before Easter.

W. F. Hoerber states that though the glass of Hoerber Bros. has only been doubled since last Easter, the cash receipts for the week were four times those of a year ago.

A. F. Longren is preparing to take the road again for E. H. Hunt. W. E. Lynch says cut flower sales showed a good increase over last Easter.

Henry Van Gelder says the Percy

Jones force worked till midnight three days last week.

L. Baumann has just recovered from a ten days' siege with the grip.

Wietor Bros. say Easter was like Christmas, the best yet.

At J. A. Budlong's it is said that Mrs. Jardine rose was in special favor at Easter. John Mangel has for some time made it a feature of his window display.

Stollery Bros. had a big decoration Tuesday night, April 18, at the Arcadia, Evanston and Sunnyside avenues, for the annual charity ball of the North End Women's Club. It was stated that two tons of Michigan spruce and pine were used in place of the usual wild smilax, and eight large hanging baskets, each about six feet in diameter, were strung down the center of the hall.

Kyle & Foerster say their lily receipts were much heavier than they expected, but that they sold every flower, except part of a consignment received Sunday at nearly noon.

Peter Reinberg has every reason to be satisfied with Easter, according to Tim Matchen's view.

John Zech says that every order sent out for Easter called for more or less sweet peas. The sweet pea used to be considered a flower that would not ship, but now it is one of the big shipping items.

Robert Northam says George Reinberg never before cut so many roses or short Beauties for Easter.

The Geo. M. Garland Co. has put up two small lean-tos by the side of its factory. They are only temporary, however, being used as shelters for steel work until the larger new building, previously mentioned in The Review, is completed.

A carload of Illinois self-watering window and porch boxes was recently ordered by J. Bolgiano & Son, of Baltimore, from the American Metal Box Co., 181 North Dearborn street. Included in another order recently received was a combination dining-room dome electrolier and flower box costing $160. This latter order amounted to over $900 and was for the outfitting of a private home in Indiana.

In the election April 19 August Poehlmann was returned as president of the village of Morton Grove, and his brother, Adolph, was chosen as police magistrate.

MALDEN, MASS.

E. D. Kaulback & Son have had good success with their Easter lilies this season. They grew 25,000 bulbs of the black-stem giganteum type and succeeded in getting 20,000 in flower on 20-inch to 36-inch stems for Easter. Every plant was sold and shipped before April 15. They stake each plant, put cotton batting in the open flowers, tie buds and flowers up in tissue paper and ship in crates holding twenty-five plants each. They have done this for a number of years and find it quite satisfactory. They intend to grow 30,000 giganteum lilies for next Easter.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Easter Plant Market.

It was an excellent Easter. The weather, contrary to expectations, was cold and cloudy, so that there were some unfinished but no overripe blooming plants despite the late Easter. While the weather cost the growers a little more coal than they expected, it was a great aid in keeping finished stock in condition, while to the retailers the cool weather was a godsend, for they had no waste from too rapid development. The supply of blooming plants was the largest the city ever has known. The demand for them was fully equal to the supply. This is taking the plant market as a whole. There was waste in some places; there was shortage in others. On the whole, the waste appears to have been considerably smaller than the combined shortage.

The demand commenced at the end of March, with the transfer of blocks of plants from one grower to another to meet requirements. Then came the out-of-town orders, carrying off some of the finest material. The later shipping orders and the local orders filled the first five working days of last week, the large department stores buying heavily. The week closed Saturday with a sort of free-for-all scramble, growers taking the leftover stock, odds and ends, good, bad and indifferent, to the center of the city, where it was sold. This Easter curbstone business that ended with midnight was perhaps the most surprising feature of the week. The authorities restricted the business, both in time and place, so that the crowd was in a buying mood when afternoon came. Good prices were realized and a big lot of stock was marketed, much of which would otherwise have been lost. The growers generally did well. The retailers did even better. The street men are happy.

The lily regained much of its old popularity as the typical Easter plant. The stock was large and fine, with few late and fewer diseased. The chief drawback was the want of height in many of the plants. The prices ranged from 8 cents to 9 cents and 10 cents to 12 cents for each bud of finger length and flower. As usual, the 12-cent stock was the cheapest.

The azalea came next. Belgium sent us poorer stock than usual. This was clearly shown in the quality of the azaleas flowered for Easter. Mme. Van der Cruyssen was actually scarce in the smaller sizes. Plants that will have to hustle to be perfect by Whit-

It was prophesied hydrangeas would be overdone because more were grown, as they force slowly, making them unpunctual, and because some buyers shun them, fearing their future owners won't water them enough. Yet hydrangeas may fairly be said to have sold out. This was remarkable under the circumstances. Their uniformly superior quality is the explanation.

Astilbe William E. Gladstone was the spiraea of the season. Everybody grew it. Everybody grew it well and it sold well. Some Queen Alexandra lent variety. Rhododendrons were probably next in favor. The varieties of a pretty shade of lavender led. No other plant gives this shade so pretty and effective. Too large rhododendrons went slowly; some were left.

Lilacs, genistas, deutzias, daisies, cinerarias, primroses, hyacinths, daffodils, tulips, valley all went well when well done, and fairly well anyhow, for people wanted plants in bloom this Easter.

A distinct step in advance was evidenced in the presentation of Easter plants in the shops. The beauty of the plant was enhanced, not marred. That was the aim. No color clash. An azalea in a basket of natural willow, a hydrangea surrounded by ferns are instances of the prevailing tendency that merits encouragement.

The Easter Cut Flower Market.

Surprising in view of the immense quantity of fine plants marketed during the week, the cut flower market was active, even buoyant, from start to close. The cool, dark weather was an immense benefit, though it may have discouraged consumption for corsage wear. Still it helped quality more than it discouraged buying, and we have every reason to be thankful.

The volume of business was undoubtedly the largest in the history of "The Rising Eastern Market." Prices were moderate, the increase coming from increased quantity. There were three factors in the demand—shipping orders from other cities, local orders from the city and suburban shops, and orders from the street men of this city, Baltimore and Atlantic City. All were heavy, each in their way helping the market, the street men giving better prices and turning more leftovers into cash than they have ever done before.

Corsage bouquet flowers were the liveliest. Violets, despite the near approach of the end of their season and some discouragement from the wholesalers, who distrusted them, were in urgent request at $1 to $1.50, both for Hightstown and Hudson River. Sweet peas were even livelier at from 75 cents to $1.50. The supply fell far short of the demand. Valley was used in great quantities at $2 to $4. Cattleyas were scarce at 60 cents to 75 cents, the supply being divided about equally between Mossiae and Schroederiana. Gar-denias brought from $1 to $4 a dozen; most of the sales were close to $1.50.

Carnations were the weak spot in the market. There was an oversupply that pulled prices down as Easter approached. The fancies brought 4 cents to 6 cents, select and white 3 cents and the ordinary 2 cents, the street paying from that down to $10 per thousand for leftovers and failing to clean them up even then.

Roses were in good supply, with little change in prices over a week ago. Really choice stock went up, but that was all. There was a shortage in Richmond. Moderate price met most favor. Lilies, as is always the case, were in oversupply. The temptation to clean up the plants by cutting the bloom at the last moment usually breaks the market or leaves a lot over. Some brought 15 cents, but 12 cents and 10 cents were the prevailing prices. A few short ones brought 8 cents. Callas brought from 15 cents to 20 cents.

After other flowers, pansies were active at 75 cents. Daisies were dull at $1.50, white especially so. Snapdragons brought 75 cents to $1.50 a dozen; lupinus, $1 for the same number; northern daffodils, $3; southern daffodils, $1; mignonette, $2 to $5, and lilac went briskly at 75 cents to $1 a dozen.

Greens were quiet and unchanged, except smilax, which advanced to $15, $20 and even $25.

The Sign of the Rose.

Fashions in flowers, like fashions in dress, are the result of the taste of the artist and buyer combined with the skill of the artist. The artist produces a pretty effect, the buyer admires, criticises, suggests an improvement; the artist aims to vary, to improve. These variations and improvements on last year's effects make the floral fashions of the season. In flowers, as in dress, there are different extremes suited to the widely different tastes of the purchaser, but in flowers, as in dress, there is a general tendency—sometimes a predominating color, sometimes a style in arrangement.

The Sign of the Rose, on Broad street, is a symphony in lavender and white produced by the pretty Bluebird boxes, designed for the lavender shaded double violets, with, it may be, a gardenia to lighten the effect, with the pure white Easter lilies, appropriate to the season, in the background; a few ribbons and a little green give the artist touch.

The shop inside was banked with made-up baskets of plants arranged for effect and convenience. When asked for his ideas on Easter flowers, Mr. Fox said that the baskets are made up this season in solid colors; "no hash" was the terse and graphic description. Wooden Dutch buckets, with birch bark covers, held Dutch hyacinths and tulips and daffodils, only one color of one variety in each. English baskets held English primroses and golden genistas, the same rule applying. An effective basket is the long-handled English double basket, so to speak—two baskets, each large enough for a single plant, showing at the handle. The commercial instinct, so necessary to bring success, combined with the artistic, here prompted Mr. Fox to remark, "You sell two plants instead of one by this arrangement," but a glance at his face showed that the pretty effect of this natural willow basket, with its two shapely specimens, pleased him most.

The display showed no preference for any special variety of blooming plants, only an absence of hydrangeas. "They are not satisfactory to us," Mr. Fox said, "because people will not water them enough." A strong effort was evidenced everywhere toward originality and taste, in receptacles as well as in arrangements.

The Floral Arcadia.

The impression of the Floral Arcadia given to the passer-by from Broad street is that of handsome specimen plants, relying on their own perfect symmetry and beauty for success. They are arranged boldly, with a strong background of green that gives them a confident air of a plant assured of success. The impression created on the passer-by on Fairmount avenue, west of Broad—fourteen-seven, to be exact—is of beautiful, moderate priced plants for the masses, arranged in compact rank as soldiers on review, certain that each one of them has a special mission to perform and is there to perform it. Magnificent azaleas, hydrangeas with immense heads grace the Floral Arcadia; hyacinths in varied hues, well grown geraniums in full bloom fill fourteen-seven. One is for the classes, the other for the masses. An eminent writer once said that "nowhere else in Philadelphia was this combination of two stores, each intended for a different kind of business, to be found under one management." The remark was made of two stores in this city, one under the proprietor's name, the other that of the liveliest kind of a live wire; here the two are under one name, Fred Ehret.

Unfortunately, Mr. Ehret was away—the demands of business, nothing else could tempt him now—so it was necessary to get ideas uninspired, as it were. Two came promptly, quite enough for today: The first, that Mr. Ehret considers hydrangeas a good investment at current prices, and Mr. Ehret has a skilled eye for an investment—the F. A. has some perfect specimens, while fourteen-seven had a battalion of equally perfect small fellows; the other idea was the way to use those short-stemmed lilies, too abundant this year: "jigs" they are christened by the irreverent; short for giganteum, you know. They are short, painfully so as

Various Notes.

Hope you had a good Easter! Memorial day will be Tuesday, May 30.

M. Rice spent Easter in London. While in Boskoop, Holland, he visited a show of choice hardy flowers.

Henry F. Michell reports that the National Sweet Pea Society's prize list is out.

George Black, of Black Bros., Baltimore, Md., was a recent visitor.

Mrs. H. Bayersdorfer left the hospital April 18. She is convalescing rapidly.

Robert A. Craig reports a fine Easter.

William Berger made a unique design for the funeral of John S. Trower, reputed the wealthiest colored man in Pennsylvania. It was a floral church about seven feet long, five feet wide and three feet high, with a steeple six feet high or three feet above the church.

DENVER.

The Market.

The Easter rush is over, and everybody seems satisfied with the amount of business done. It is still too early to say with any accuracy as to how it compares with other Easters, but most of the retailers report a complete clean-up, which would indicate perfect satisfaction. (This letter was written on Sunday afternoon, and there were yet some lilies on hand; it was expected that a large proportion of these would be sold before closing time that night.)

Little in the way of Easter business was done before Saturday. In other years a great part of it was over by Thursday night, but it was not so this year. Friday morning there was snow on the ground, and the air was quite cool. This seemed to put a damper on business, and the outlook was anything but pleasant, but on Saturday the sun came out in all his glory, and the stores were crammed with buyers all day and until late that night.

The demand was primarily for lilies, but the other usual Easter plants also found purchasers. Ramblers were in especially fine shape this year. There were also some good azaleas, hydrangeas and rhododendrons. A great many buyers are always looking for something new in the way of a plant. Perhaps that is the reason pink spiraeas sold so well. They have not yet become common.

No fancy prices were demanded for cut flowers, and this probably helped their sale. There was a good supply of almost everything. Carnations were plentiful, except red, for which there was an unusual demand. Of Killarney, Richmond, and Beauties in all grades, there was no surplus. We were quite fortunate in having violets, they having passed safely through the recent wind storms, and while they were not of the best quality, they sold well. Some extra fine sweet peas were noticed. Most of the cut flowers were sold on Sunday morning, and in these, as well as in plants, there was practically a clean-up.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club, held Tuesday evening, April 4, there were present only about a dozen members. This is the smallest meeting this season, and it is hoped that there will be a better attendance next month.

C. G. Bates gave an interesting talk on the work of the Forestry Reserve, and it is a fact much to be regretted that there were not more present to listen to him.

Some one has said that the most they did at the last meeting was to eat sandwiches and drink soda water. Enough had been provided for the usual number (about forty), and the dozen who were present had considerable difficulty in seeing that nothing was wasted.

There will be a card party and dance Saturday evening, April 22, at T. M. A. hall, 1743 Champa street, to which all the members and their friends are invited. An enjoyable time is assured.

Various Notes.

The first annual flower show of the Elitch-Long Greenhouses was given on the Sunday before Easter, the display being arranged in the theater at Elitch's Gardens, where the greenhouses are located. A universal invitation had been given, both through the newspapers and by mail, and the resulting attendance was most gratifying. Some fine specimens were exhibited.

At the opening of the W. C. Walter store at Fifteenth and Cheyenne streets, Saturday, April 8, 10,000 carnations were given away. From the appearance of the front of the store during the noon hour, one might think they were giving away gold bricks or silver dollars, so eager was every man, woman and child to get into line.

It is rumored that the members of the New York Floral Co. will retire soon. M. Nicholas is desirous of spending a few years in California, but does not wish to go until he has disposed of his store. It is a money-making concern, and there is little likelihood that he will have any trouble in finding a buyer.

Ben Boldt is credited with having had some of the finest rambler roses that have been seen, but they were sold long before Easter, and several out-of-town florists who arrived late were sadly disappointed in not being able to buy any.

There is not a bale of sphagnum to be had at wholesale in Denver. The Barteldes Seed Co. is the only concern that handles it in quantities; in fact, they are the only ones who ship any into this market, and they will not have any for several days.

STRONG, LIGHT AND CONVENIENT

WHY use heavy wooden Boxes for Shipments of Flowers and Plants when you can get a box better adapted to your needs, weighing about one-half as much?

Our Boxes are made to fold flat; thus insuring economy in storage space and enables the commission merchant to knock them down and return them in bundles, reducing return charges--they can be used over and over.

Our Patented K. D. Tin Corner is the only satisfactory K.D. corner ever adapted to a Corrugated Shipping Case. It gives you a perfectly flat box. Costs no more than set up corners.

"The New Home of the Park Floral Co." is the title of a little booklet recently sent out by that concern. It is attractively gotten up, and contains excellent views of various parts of the store, offices, workroom, basement, kitchen and dining room.

Alphonse Heuer, one of the oldest employees of the Park Floral Co., will soon erect some greenhouses in Aurora, where he will grow plants. Mr. Heuer has been especially successful in rooting cuttings of Begonia Lorraine and the different varieties of Rex begonia, in which he takes a great deal of interest.

C. F. Maler has some extra fine sweet peas; he is also bringing in some good bunches of pansies.

The Elitch-Long Flower Store had an attractive window decoration Easter week. The important feature was the pond, in which played several baby ducks, which greatly delighted the children.

Last week the Park Floral Co. had its first real test of the conveniences of its new store. There had been considerable conjecture among some of its competitors as to whether customers would go upstairs to the conservatory without any trouble, but it was found that few hesitated. Anyone who did not wish to go to the conservatory generally found something in the salesroom that suited him or her exactly.

Visitors: A. Gardner, Greeley; N. E. De Golier, Loveland; C. A. Espelin, Fort Collins; Fred d'Allemand, Longmont; D. R. Gwillim, Victor; Chas. J. Pass, North Platte, Neb. M. R. J.

Great Barrington, Mass.—The deed has been recorded transferring from Theodore B. Dellert to Edward B. Dolby, of Pittsfield, the greenhouse property, including the land and dwelling house on Humphrey street. Mr. Dellert also conveys the good will of the business and agrees not to engage in that line of business in Great Barrington for a term of five years.

Huckleberry Branches

$2.00 per 50 lb. case.

Now that the season for Wild Smilax is over and no more stock can be supplied, we wish to call your attention to the branches of the Huckleberry Tree as a most elegant decorative green. The branches are flat, very thickly furnished with exceedingly lustrous green leaves, and it seems to adapt itself to almost any position in decoration that the Wild Smilax can be used in, and will prove of great value to you for your decorations through the months of April, May and June.

Do not order to arrive much before the date of using. Huckleberry will retain its color several days in decoration, but is not a good keeper in the case.

Kills Weeds in 48 Hours

Ammoniated Lawn Lime, a light top dressing for lawns, does it. Kills flat-leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours.

Saves time and labor weeding lawns.

Is far superior to hand weeding, because it kills the weeds, making the pulling up or injuring the grass unnecessary. This wonderful compound will kill the weeds without injury to the grass, when used as directed. If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 square feet; 25 lbs. to 1000 square feet (20x50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Makes Grass Grow. Insures a New, Vigorous Growth.

Produces a lawn grass that is wonderfully luxuriant, and a rich green distinctly noticeable.

Ammoniated Lawn Lime is now in general use throughout the country, with results so satisfactory as to insure repeated orders from a single trial. It is guaranteed as represented.

Cattle Manure in Bags Shredded or Pulverized

Pure—dry—uniform and reliable. The best of all manures for the greenhouse. Florists all over the country are using it instead of rough manure.

Pulverized Sheep Manure

Absolutely the best Sheep Manure on the market. Pure manure and nothing else. The best fertilizer for carnations and for liquid top-dressing. Unequaled for all field use. Write for circulars and prices.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Easter trade in most instances was satisfactory. Flowers of all kinds were plentiful and brought good prices, and Easter lilies were enough to go around, good stock bringing from $3 to $5 per dozen. American Beauties came better than they have been and brought from $6 to $18 per dozen. Other roses, such as Killarney, White Killarney, Bride, Maid, My Maryland and Richmond, were received in large quantities and some good stock was to be seen. Good roses brought from $3 to $5 per dozen, and carnations were enough to go around at from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Bulbous stock was, as usual, plentiful, and some of it went begging, while sweet peas in all colors could be had in large quantities. The trade in corsages far surpassed last year, calling for quantities of sweet peas, valley, lilacs and orchids. Violets were mostly the Hudson river stock, and quantities of them arrived in bad shape.

Pot plants were unlimited in supply and the medium priced plants moved well, the higher priced arrangements being a drag. Easter lilies were probably in bigger demand than any other plants, bringing from 25 cents to 35 cents per bloom. Bulbous stock was plentiful, as were azaleas, spireas, ramblers, lilacs and numerous other plants.

The Flower Market reported the best Easter of late years. Cut flowers brought fair prices, but you could buy plants at your own price. The streets leading from the market were one continual stream of people carrying flowers all day. The market was overloaded with plants, and many loads of them were hauled back home at night.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association was held at the Elks' Club rooms, Wednesday evening, April 12, with an attendance of about sixty. This was the meeting at which Mr. Hill delivered the lecture on his European trip last year. He also showed about 100 stereopticon views of the landscape effects on the different estates in England. These views were highly pleasing to those present, many of whom had no idea of the amount of money spent by these estates in a year on their landscape gardening. It also showed our country to be many years behind them in that line. The meeting was followed by a lunch and was pronounced to be one of the most enjoyable held in late years. Among the out-of-town members present were: W. W. Coles, of Kokomo; E. G. Hill, George Gause,

WATERBURY, CONN.

An event of much interest in this city at present is the removal of the greenhouses of Alexander Dallas from Union street and Willow street to his new location at Mill Plain. The Union street greenhouses were established many years ago by James McWhinnie and were purchased by Mr. Dallas in 1877. About four years ago Mr. Dallas also bought the greenhouses of W. M. Cottle, on West Side Hill, and these are to remain as they are for the present.

One large greenhouse at Mill Plain, covering a half acre, is now finished and is being used for general purposes at present, though eventually carnations will be grown in it. New houses are to be put up during the summer as rapidly as possible, and it is hoped they will be in good running order by July 1, or at least in time for the fall planting. The area of the property used for greenhouse purposes, the old Lockhart farm, is about ten acres, and when all the greenhouses are erected that are included in the present plans, there will be about 150,000 square feet under glass. The swamp ground is to be drained. The pond and running brook upon the place, which can be used for both a water and ice supply, will be beautified with aquatic plants. Lawns and flower beds will be laid out, the banks terraced, and the whole place made attractive.

The Kilbourn farm, which adjoins the greenhouse property, contains about forty acres and will be utilized for the growing of hardy plants and for nursery stock of all kinds, which business is to be added to the present florist's establishment. The nursery business, however, will not be gone into extensively till the moving of the present buildings is well over and the business in good running order. Mr. Dallas' son, Walter, will be associated with his father in the new and enlarged business.

Your ad got us busy on Killarney; had to send back over $100.—Frey & Frey, Lincoln, Neb.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

A SEED store has been opened in the Merritt block, on Greenwich avenue, Stamford, Conn., by J. B. McArdle.

THE telegraph brings report of a severe cold wave in the Santa Clara valley of California the latter part of last week.

COUNTER trade is increasing rapidly and, with anything like favorable weather conditions, promises to break all records all over the country.

MAIL orders are falling off rapidly; the season can not show an increase for the older catalogue houses as a class, though many of the newer houses have a nice gain.

GEO. O. BORTON & Co., Bridgeport, Conn., who call theirs "Sunshine Seeds," are so well pleased with the results from their first annual catalogue, issued this year, that they plan a larger one for next season.

CERTAINLY, seeds were short this season, but events have borne out the venerable seedman who remarked that nowadays the sources of seed supply are so numerous and the demand for seeds is so broad that some way or other they fit together pretty well.

THE Crop Improvement Committee of the Council of North American Grain Exchanges is sending out a post-card that says on one side in big white letters on a black ground: "Test Your Seed Corn." On the other side it says: "We are informed that the seed corn is extremely poor this season. Every grain which fails to grow cuts your crop down at least twenty-five per cent to the hill."

N. N. SHERWOOD, of Hurst & Son, has been reelected president of the Nursery and Seed Trade Association, Ltd., London, England. The report and balance sheet submitted to the meeting showed the association to be in a good financial position, with a substantial balance at the bank, that during the last year, 1,021 status inquiries had been answered, and £6,060 15s 6d had been recovered for the members. Questions of legislation affecting the trade were discussed, and a sub-committee was appointed to deal with the shops bill, and the proposed seed bill.

LUPINE SEED DUTY FREE.

J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, have been sustained in a claim that lupine seed is to be admitted to this country duty free. The collector of customs assessed duty at 10 cents per pound. The protest of Thorburn & Co. was heard by Board No. 3 of the General Appraisers, for whom Judge Waite wrote the opinion, saying:

J., on Oct. 27, 1910, writes as follows: "I want to state that your three grades of poultry food—Chick Starter, Developing Food and 'Square Deal' Scratch or Poultry Food—stand without an equal today. They are perfect mixtures and sound in grain and a pleasure to handle."

under the paragraph where assessed before a duty of 10 cents a pound should be levied. It was held by the board under the act of 1897 that vetch, sainfoin, spurry, and other plants used for forage and similar purposes are included within the class of grasses the seeds of which are permitted free entry. See G. A. 6350 (T. D. 27306) and G. A. 6428 (T. D. 27578). These seeds, we think, come within that class, as stated in the report of the examiner, and should be passed free. The protest is therefore sustained."

CONVENTION FOR MARBLEHEAD.

It will be recalled that the executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association voted to hold the twenty-ninth annual convention at Milwaukee, but that the action afterward was rescinded because of the difficulty of getting adequate hotel accommodations during the usual week. Under date of April 11, President E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y., wrote as follows:

"It has been decided to hold the next annual convention at Marblehead, Mass. The convention will meet June 20 to 22. The hotel selected is the Rockmere, one of the best hotels on

SEVEN TOP TURNIP

Originally introduced by us from South Carolina in 1850 and annually grown for over sixty years under the zero winter temperature of Bloomsdale Farms, the Landreth's strain of Seven Top has obtained, by this northern culture, a hardiness not approached by southern-grown seed. All inferences would point that way, while thousands of experiments have conclusively proven it beyond a shadow of doubt; consequently, one pound of Landreth's Seven Top will in the dead of winter produce more greens than can be cut from three times the more delicate southern-grown Seven Top.

Write us how much you want and we will name you a price.

the famous north shore of Massachusetts. The hotel occupies a beautiful and commanding view of one of the finest harbors, as well as the most interesting on the Atlantic coast. On one side the deep waters and bold rocks of the coast, lined with beautiful summer homes, and on the other the old colonial fort, form a vivid and contrasting picture of the old and the new. Nearly every room at the Rockmere commands this beautiful view. The old town of Marblehead, with its ancient churches, hip-roofed mansions, with brass door-knockers, little, old-fashioned flower gardens and the winding, twisting streets, with its ancient and historical landmarks, makes it one of the most interesting places on the New England coast. Marblehead is only seventeen miles from Boston. Trains on the Boston & Maine railway leave every hour from the North Union station and tickets can be purchased direct to Marblehead and baggage checked through.

"It is thought by some of the officers of the association that this, the twenty-ninth annual meeting, will be the largest ever held. Extra efforts are being made for an unusually good program and there will be plenty of amusement, with special entertainment provided for the ladies."

WILD CELERY SEED DUTY FREE.

That seed of the wild celery is entitled to free entry recently was decided by the Board of United States General Appraisers in an opinion handed down by Mr. Waite, sustaining the protests of eight different importers. Collector Loeb, at New York, assessed duty on the goods at the rate of 10 cents per pound under paragraph 266 of the Payne tariff, as "seeds not specially provided for." The drug importers contended that the seed should be entered free under paragraph 559 of the act. General Appraiser Waite, in his opinion sustaining the protests, said:

"The seed in question, while similar in appearance, is distinguished from the ordinary garden celery seed by being smaller and of darker hue; it is also more aromatic and is distinguished structurally in that wild celery has twelve oil ducts and the garden variety has only six. We are satisfied from the evidence that this seed is not used in the same way that the ordinary celery seed is used; neither would the plant be suitable for use on the table as a green or vegetable. purposes. Under the rule laid down in the Cruikshank case (59 Fed. Rep. 446), that the term 'edible' should be used in its ordinary sense, this celery seed would not be considered edible. Seeds which may be used in small quantities for medicinal or seasoning purposes are not necessarily classifiable as edible seeds. The seed in question is an aromatic seed, and is 'not advanced in value or condition by any process of treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the drugs and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture.' We think it should be free of duty, as claimed, under paragraph 559, providing for seeds aromatic, not garden seeds, which are drugs. The protests are therefore sustained."

JAMES VICK'S SONS, Rochester, N. Y.

Fortunately, the weather was quite mild and deliveries were made in good shape. All kinds of rigs and conveyances were used for this purpose. Automobiles were in great demand, owing to the time saved in using this method.

Contrary to expectations, lilies were scarce. Some of the retailers were sold out by Saturday noon. The scarcity was said to be due to the poor weather we had for the last two weeks. The stock, however, was fine. Roses arrived in excellent shape and were well bought up. Richmonds, Brides and Maids were in great demand. In carnations, Enchantress led the way. Other varieties, however, brought their share of business. Violets, naturally, were of poor quality and, while quite a number were sold, people who came in to buy them were usually persuaded to take either sweet peas or valley, or both. More valley was sold this year than ever before. In flowering plants, azaleas were easily the best sellers. Some exceptionally fine plants were on the market, the best bringing as high as $10. The usual price, though, was from $2.50 to $5. Some fine specimens of rhododendrons were offered. One retailer had a large white which measured seven feet across the top. This sold for $35. Another dealer sold a large one for $20. Many lilacs were disposed of at good prices. Primulas and spiræas also had a large sale.

The need of a general market, such as is run in some of the larger cities in the States, was greatly felt here this year. Some of the retailers, anticipating a big rush in certain lines, bought up large quantities. In some cases they were disappointed, and, as a result, had a lot of stock on their hands Monday morning. Naturally, prices dropped after the holiday and this meant a loss. On the other hand, many of the trade ran out of one line or another and could not supply the demand.

There is considerable indignation among the trade over the fact that some of the drug stores that handle cut flowers are making sales on Sunday. Several florists were asked their opinion on the facts and, while some stated they did not care, being satisfied to work six days in seven, others were much against it and said something should be done. It is likely something will.

Various Notes.

Saturday afternoon, during all the rush, the awning in front of J. H. Dunlop's store was blown down and in its descent it smashed the big plate glass window in his store. It has been replaced and everything is satisfactory again.

Chas. Tidy has purchased a new six-cylinder Pierce-Arrow touring car, and used it for delivery purposes during the Easter rush.

Among the recent visitors in town were Mr. Cull, of Strathroy; A. J. Young, of Galt, and James Bell, of Milton.

J. H. Dunlop is able to be around again and on Saturday was down to the store for the first time in eight weeks. Mr. Dunlop had previously been threatened with appendicitis on a couple of occasions, but fought it off. This time he had it quite badly and was forced to undergo an operation.

Mrs. Ford, of College street, reports a fair business, but not up to previous years. Previously, however, she had a fine stand on the principal street, but was forced to move. While she is close to her old stand and secured all her old customers' business, a lot of the transient trade was greatly missed.

J. A. Neal, who recently purchased the business of McKerrigan, at Yonge and St. Albans streets, reports an excellent trade at both his stores.

IS THE WATER INJURIOUS?

Can you tell me whether water from a deep well is likely to hurt lettuce and geraniums? My lettuce and geraniums act as though they were stunted. My well is 101 feet deep and in the sand rock. The water is a little on the salty side, but only a little. I have lettuce averaging one-half pound per head right through, but it seems to take a long time to grow. The leaves seem to curl down at the tips somewhat, instead of growing upright. I grow Grand Rapids Forcing. Any information will be gladly accepted.

B. F.

There is not likely to be any injury from the water you are using; injury from such a cause is rare. It is more than likely that your plants were stunted by not being handled just right when small, or your soil may be heavy and sour. Either condition would make poor, slow growth. The soil should be clean, fresh and loose. The plants should be transplanted just as soon as ready and kept growing by careful attention at all times.

HEN MANURE FOR TOMATOES.

Can you tell me the most convenient and effective way to use hen manure for early tomatoes in the field? Some of it is hard, dry and lumpy, while some is still moist.

J. C. H.

Hen manure is powerful and, unless used carefully, will do more harm than good. If you can spread it out so that it will all dry out and then pass it through a half-inch screen, breaking up any lumps with a mallet or pounder, and after that mix it with four times the quantity of fine loam, turning the pile over several times to thoroughly mix it, you will have it in such a form that it can be spread easily without likelihood of its doing any harm. The manure should be applied thinly broadcast, through a manure spreader or by hand, and harrowed in. For your tomato crop it would prove excellent as a top-dressing, after the fruit is well set and swelling.

The Market.

Just before Easter business took quite a turn, and although the first of the week was slow, the sales for Easter delivery rapidly increased to the usual rush. Stock was in good condition and lilacs were plentiful enough to cover the demand, and together with ramblers, rhododendrons, azaleas, hyacinths and valley, about completed the list of potted stock.

Basket arrangements were in evidence on all sides in stunning effects. Cut flowers were plentiful and roses were just coming into full crop of fine quality.

Arrangements have been made for the delegates to meet in the Assembly hall of the Chamber of Commerce and also at the St. James hotel. The latter place will be the headquarters for the convention. Albert Bettens, the proprietor of the St. James, has made a special arrangement to handle the con-

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Writing just at Easter, it is too early to give an exact summary of events, but things are shaping themselves so that we can form a fair idea of business conditions. It is evident that there will be no surplus of Easter lilies, but there will probably be plenty of potted lilies. The prices on cut stems have advanced about fifty per cent during the last week. Usually these flowers cost the retailers from $2.50 to $4, according to quality, but this season finds the advance I have mentioned, owing to shortage of stock. Other lines of flowering plants are about as usual. Azaleas are not overplentiful, but there seem to be enough to fill orders. Cyclamens, hyacinths, spiræas, genistas, cinerarias and Primula obconica are in abundant supply at the usual prices. Carnations are still in heavy quantity and roses are even more plentiful, although the prices are being held up by the growers. We can look for a beautiful slump, however, in a few days.

Violets are practically over for the season and bulbous stock is rapidly following suit. With the exception of late flowered tulips, there is little to see along these lines. Other kinds of outside stock are getting daily more plentiful and sweet peas are cheap.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

NURSERYMEN in the southwest finished their season weeks before those in the New England states made a start this year.

INSPECTING IMPORTED STOCK.

In the state of Minnesota the inspection of nurseries is optional; it is done on request of the owner of any nursery or greenhouse who needs a certificate for shipments going into other states, or it is done whenever the State Entomologist has reason to believe the premises may not be free from insect pests. In the year 1910 fifty-six places in the trade were inspected.

As showing how the entomologist cooperates with the national government, F. L. Washburn says in his annual report:

"The amount of foreign stock, from France, Holland and Belgium, shipped into Minnesota is increasing each year. The amount already reaching us annually is surprising. In some instances seedlings of varieties common in Minnesota are imported, on the ground that it is cheaper to pay the European price, transportation charges and duty than to raise them here. For two years the State Entomologist of Minnesota, as in most other states, has been deputized by the Bureau of Entomology, at Washington, to examine all such stock. The day any European stock leaves New York, consigned to Minnesota, advice is mailed this office, giving date of shipment, road and consignee. We thus know what is expected, and are on the lookout for these shipments. If they come through in bond, to be cleared at the custom houses in St. Paul or Minneapolis, the federal officials at such offices notify us (and they have been very courteous and helpful in this particular) of the arrival of the goods; we authorize the delivery of such stock after the other federal laws have been complied with, and at the same time notify the consignee, nurseryman or florist, as the case may be, and they comply with our request by telling us when the goods are at their institutions ready for examination. As a rule, consignees are very obliging and helpful in the matter of examination, doing all in their power printed here, is to come before the present Congress. It provides 'for the introduction of foreign nursery stock by permit only, and authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to establish a quarantine against the importation and against transportation in inter-state commerce of diseased nursery stock, or nursery stock infested with injurious insects; and making an appropriation to carry the same into effect.'

"A few New York nurserymen are strongly opposing Sec. 8 of said bill, which reads as follows:

Sec. 8. That whenever it shall appear to the Secretary of Agriculture that any nursery stock or other article described in section three of this Act grown in an infested country, district, department, or locality outside of the United States, are being or are about to be imported into the United States, or the District of Columbia, and such nursery stock or other article is infested by any seriously injurious insect or disease which is liable to become established in the United States, he shall have authority to quarantine against such importations from said country, district, department, or locality, and prevent the same until such time as it may appear to him that any such insect or disease has been exterminated or is under adequate control, when he may withdraw the quarantine.

"The bill, with Sec. 8 retained, is being pushed by the Bureau of Entomology at Washington, and is supported in its original form by the unanimous vote of the American Association of Economic Entomologists.

[As the report goes to press we learn that the Simmons bill has been killed for this session, through the active opposition of a few New York state nurserymen, led by Mr. Pitkin. It is a noteworthy fact that the nurserymen of the country at large are in favor of the provisions of the Simmons bill; but in spite of this, the opposition of a few prominent importers, referred to above—an opposition representing the private interests of a few individuals—has been sufficient to delay action, a delay which we believe is only temporary.]

"From December 1, 1909, to December 1, 1910, we examined 376 cases of European plants imported into Minnesota; and of that number, 130 cases reached the state between July 1 and December 1, 1910, showing the heaviest shipments to be in the spring. These 130 cases contained 11,080 plants, represented by 9,200 azaleas, 200 hydrangeas, 75 rhododendrons, 662 palms, 570 syringas (lilacs), and enough other miscellaneous material to total the above figures.

"We receive many inquiries regarding our nursery inspection law. The following points answer these questions, and practically represent an abstract of the law.

"1. Inspection is not obligatory. Asked for by nurserymen in order to comply with the laws of states to which shipments are made.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade was heavy for Easter and about everything in the way of flowers was cleaned up. Carnations were in heavy crop and there was nothing left Saturday night to tell the tale. Roses were fine and in good supply, with hardly enough to go the rounds. Beauties were scarce and Richmonds took the place of them to a certain extent. Violets came in rather poor, but met with ready sale. Sweet peas were good sellers and were all cleaned up early, owing to the scarcity of violets and their poor quality.

Valley was in good demand and quite plentiful. There was an enormous amount of bulb stock handled and most of it was in good shape, but there will be little from now on, as most of it was brought in for Easter.

Pot plants sold well, and although azaleas were rather poor, there was plenty of other stock to take their place. Crimson Ramblers and Baby Ramblers were good sellers and there was a fine lot on the market—the finest seen for several years. There were also quite a few Pink Ramblers to be seen.

Rhododendrons proved good stock and were all cleaned up; spiræas were also fine and an enormous lot was sold, while bulb stock in pans came in for its share. There was little green on the market, no smilax to speak of, and plumosus strings had to be used instead.

The weather was bad here Friday, as it rained most of the day, but Saturday was pleasant until evening, when it rained for two or three hours. However, it cleared up early enough to make the finish a good one, and taking it as a whole it was the most satisfactory Easter we have had for several years.

Various Notes.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports heavy business for Easter.

Sherman Stephens came in for his share on Saturday and Sunday and everything was cleaned up.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. had a fine lot of ramblers, rhododendrons, etc., in addition to the general line of cut stock.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

It rained all day Friday, with an awful wind and rain storm Saturday night, but in spite of that it was about the biggest Easter business that this city ever saw. Everyone cleaned up, both in plants and cut flowers. It sounds like a joke to hear every year that trade was better than ever before, but there is no doubt that as long as the retailers continue to sell flowers at reasonable prices, as they did this year, the business will continue to grow and more flowers will be sold each year.

The arrangements of plants in baskets, seen in the shops, were really beautiful, especially some of the combination baskets; they are so well done that it is a wonder the cut flowers hold up their end as they do.

Various Notes.

The shows open to the public at Easter were: The Phipps Conservatories, Schenley park and North Side park, and the private conservatories of H. J. Heinz, H. C. Frick and A. R. Peacock. All had grand displays of flowers and were patronized by crowds, especially the park conservatories; their visitors ran into thousands. These shows mean much in the way of education and our private citizens deserve a great deal of credit for throwing their places open to the public.

There are a number reported on the sick list. Among them are Allen M. Langhans, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., and Arthur Hall, of the A. W. Smith Co.

Ben Elliott, of the John Bader Co., says The Review advertisements bring customers; he sold out cleaner than ever before—seven big houses of Easter stock emptied in one week. This is going some, but, from the activity being displayed by his large force, I would say the seven houses will be full of Memorial day stock before next Saturday. The palm and fern house also shows that trade was good.

W. A. Clarke, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., celebrated his thirty-fourth Easter in the retail and wholesale cut flower business. Hoo-Hoo.

Redford, Mich. — Four carnation houses, each 34x172, are being erected here by A. J. Stahelin. They are of the Garland iron-frame type.

The New Fern Nephrolepis Dreyerii

(SPORT OF BOSTON)

GROWN BY

G. DREYER, Elmhurst, Long Island, New York

THIS New Fern, when exhibited at the S. A. F. & O. H. Convention last August, received the following description: "Nephrolepis Dreyerii has many good points which will render it popular. It makes a quick growth, is compact, of good color, and stands considerable rough treatment, adapting itself to almost any condition. It is of the Scottii type, but not as stiff, the fronds drooping gracefully, giving the plant a very attractive appearance."

Price: 2 1/4-inch pots, per 100, $25.00; per 1000, $200.00.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Roses are plentiful and there is a good demand for the pink and white varieties. American Beauties went slowly at Easter and there were enough to meet all demands. There were great quantities of carnations, but not nearly enough to meet the demand. Even if the department stores had large quantities, this did not seem to affect the flower shops, as they sold out early in the afternoon Saturday. Cut lilies sold well at $3 per dozen. Sweet peas sold well. There was a good demand for violets, but the supply was short. Valley sold well. Snapdragons were in good supply, but sales were slow.

In potted plants, spiræas took the lead this year. The demand was heavy, but the supply at some stores was small. Lilies sold well at 25 cents per bloom. The supply was large to start with, but in the end there were not enough to go around. Plants with four and five blooms sold first, as that number seemed the right size. Cinerarias sold well—in fact, better than in any previous year. Dutch hyacinths were scarce, and the few to be had were soon taken. There was a good demand for daffodils, although the supply was short.

Various Notes.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports a splendid trade. The firm had more calls for large plants and made-up baskets this year than last year. The large supply of lilies sold well. All orders were well filled and on time.

The Humfeld-Orear Floral Co. reports an excellent business in every line. It was impossible to get every order delivered Saturday, although the force of help was large.

W. H. Sawvel reports that his lettuce crop is all sold and that his three houses of cucumbers are bearing finely. He is cutting about 200 dozen per week, and they are among the finest shaped cucumbers that come to this market. He is now planting roses in solid benches. His 32,000 carnations will soon be planted in the field. Large preparations are being made to put the entire place in flowers, to be sold strictly at wholesale. W. H. H.

Davenport, Ia.—The entire stock and fixtures of the Davenport Nursery Co. were recently sold to G. L. Lewis, of Evanston, Ill.

There's a Lively Palm Business Ahead for You—Are You Ready?

Palms

Don't let this queer weather deceive you into thinking that there won't be any spring. Spring is right at your front door—and summer is crowding close behind; along with it is coming a lively demand for things to help to make homes and verandas and lawns beautiful.

There's nothing ahead of Palms for this—as a lot of your customers know. Many others are learning, and the result is a fast-increasing demand, which we are prepared to meet. These things about Heacock's Palms are worth remembering:—

They're home grown—produced here in our own houses right from the seed. It takes time, patience, and skill, and greenhouse room to develop a six-foot Kentia, but we do it—we have scores of fine specimens that large, and many thousands of small sizes ranging down to those in two-inch pots. All are clean, healthy, vigorous, good looking—they commend themselves at first glance even to people who aren't as well posted in Palms as you are.

Our prices are no higher than you'd have to pay for inferior stock, but hundreds of our regular customers say our Palms are the best they can get. Come and see us, or write; better do one or the other quick, though, and get the early trade—which is the best trade, you know.

Heacock's

Our Choice Cattleyas Are in Demand

Orchids

This is the season of the year when the very best in flowers are needed. You cannot do better than to be prepared to meet the demands of your trade with the choicest Orchid blooms.

We make a specialty of Orchids and have an extra fine lot of Cattleyas in flower now. They are produced on clean, healthy stock. We've been cutting large quantities of Cattleyas all season, shipping them to New York and Chicago besides meeting the demands of the home trade.

The flowers are not "soft," but last their full time and bring good prices because they're large and fresh cut. Write us today for prices. It pays to lead with the best Cattleyas.

Artstone Flower Vases

These Artstone Flower Vases do not, like iron vases, become so hot in midsummer as to burn the plants. Artstone is indestructible from exposure to the elements, while iron, angular and grim, soon rusts, and marble gradually discolours and decays. To display flowers in unsightly wooden pails, tin tubs, or the like, is an incongruous spectacle, which, except in case of inability to procure suitable receptacles for them, betrays the utter absence of artistic taste. Flowers, like gems, require appropriate settings. The superb artistic beauty of these creations attracts universal admiration and lends a touch of quiet elegance, of distinction, of refinement and culture to the surroundings. They serve to enhance the beauty of the lawn, the porch, the hall or the garden wonderfully. Popular also for cemetery decoration.

Greenhouse Heating.

FEWER FLOWS, MORE RETURNS.

I have a Kroeschell No. 2 hot water boiler, with sufficient capacity to heat 7,500 square feet of glass. At present I am heating one house, 20x100 feet, with the 4-inch boiler tube system. I wish to build another house, 22x100, and am planning to extend the 4-inch pipe straight across and use 2-inch pipe, placing all the piping under the benches. I would place two 2-inch flows and two 2-inch returns under each side bench, and one 2-inch flow and one 2-inch return under each of the two center benches. I will grow carnations and sweet peas in the new house. Please inform me whether the 1,200 feet of 2-inch pipe would be sufficient, in this Indiana climate. C. A. R.

To heat the house 22x100 feet to a carnation temperature, it will be well to use three 2½-inch overhead mains and nine 2-inch returns. The twelve lines of 2-inch pipe should be able to supply the needed radiation, but the arrangement suggested, providing for a smaller number of large flow pipes and a larger number of returns, would be better.

GATE AND CHECK VALVES.

We have trouble with our heating system. We run low pressure steam and sometimes in warm spells we cut out certain houses. While we have two sets of check valves on the returns, near the boilers, and also have a check on each return in the houses near where they enter the main return, yet the hot water comes back through them all in some way and fills the whole system with hot water. Indeed, sometimes hot water blows out of the pet cocks for a while and then steam puffs out, it being so hot that you could not hold your hand over it. Can you tell me where the trouble is?

We are using sectional boilers now, but think of putting in a regular steam boiler and running high pressure steam. We have about 25,000 square feet of glass and want a surplus capacity for about 1,000 feet more. What size of boiler should be put in?

J. L. O. & C.

In the statement regarding the arrangement of the piping, the valves are spoken of as "check valves." While it is desirable that there be a check valve on the main return pipe, this should not be relied upon to keep the

No. 6 Kroeschell Boiler—11,000 G x 3000 C=60° at Zero

Your No. 6 boiler is taking care of 11,000 square feet of glass.

Used 3000 bushels of soft coal (slack).

Had no trouble keeping temperature at 60° in zero weather.

Fired ordinarily from six to eight hours.

Boiler has given entire satisfaction.

We fire at 10 o'clock p. m., and do not go to fire again until 6 a. m., even in the coldest weather (10° below zero). One very windy, cold Saturday night, through a misunderstanding, the fire was not looked after from 10 o'clock p. m. until 8 o'clock a. m. Sunday morning (ten hours), and the houses registered 42°.

Very well pleased with the boiler.

HOT WATER IN LARGE RANGES.

In the reply to K. G., page 82 of The Review for April 13, it is stated that "hot water heating is not generally used for large plants," and again that "in case hot water is used, as is sometimes the case, it is customary to provide for mechanical circulation by means of a pump."

The above we consider quite misleading. There are hundreds of what we should call large plants heated by hot water throughout the United States. During the last few years that method of heating has become more and more popular. The merits of hot water heating have become recognized to such an extent that any number of ranges have been changed from steam to hot water heat.

Since the question in this case seems to be mainly as to the use of hot water for large ranges, we would give you herewith the names of a few of our customers who are heating their large ranges with our hot water system, all of which are giving most excellent satisfaction:

Fred Stielow, Chicago, 56,000 square feet of glass.

N. Zweifel, Milwaukee, Wis., 62,000 square feet of glass.

Riverbank Greenhouses, Geneva, Ill., 40,000 square feet of glass.

Virginia Nurseries, Porcellville, Va., 50,000 square feet of glass.

Manke Bros., North Milwaukee, Wis., 38,000 square feet of glass.

Mueller & Schroeder, Milwaukee, Wis., 32,000 square feet of glass.

Jacob Hauck, Bloomfield, N. J., 36,000 square feet of glass.

All of the above ranges are being operated without the use of pumps.

Furthermore, would state that the demand for the heating of large ranges by hot water has increased to such an extent that we have been obliged to add to our list three larger sizes of boilers, our largest size, No. 18, being able to maintain the proper temperatures in a range of greenhouses consisting of 80,000 square feet of glass.

The cost of installation for hot water heating, according to the latest methods, is but little more than for steam, and the arrangement is such that every advantage of both steam and hot water may be obtained without the disadvantages of either.

La Porte, Ind.—The Kaber Co. had the advantage of an enlarged and improved show house for the Easter rush and did a banner business.

A Pointer on Fittings

There are just four things that go to make fittings fit for greenhouse heating.

First: The use of the right kind of tough gray iron—not junk, scrap heap brittle stuff.

Second: Cast them thick enough to stand the racket.

Third: Cast them accurately so they will be fittings that fit.

Fourth: "Know how."

There is about as much know how as iron in one of our dependable fittings. Sixty years ago we "knew how." Been getting more "know how" ever since. That's a guarantee for you that can't be matched. Send for prices. See that Hitchings gets your order.

GREENHOUSE HEATING

is a perplexing question to all florists EXCEPT those using

MOREHEAD STEAM TRAPS

¶ The installation of a Morehead Return Steam Trap in a Greenhouse is absolute evidence of progressiveness on the part of the florist.

¶ It is further evidence of good management, for the "Morehead" is an investment in both satisfaction and economy.

¶ The majority of florists are using Morehead Traps. If you are one of the exceptions, it will be to your interest to write us—we will make you a liberal trial offer proposition.

Gentlemen:—We received the pumping engine in good condition about two weeks ago, and now have the machine working and find it doing everything to perfection and giving satisfaction in all ways. We are so pleased with the machine, and we think we could not have obtained such a fine engine at such a low price anywhere else. We think we have made a fine investment in having a reliable water supply system.

We thank you for your excellent packing, as the machine was all right after such a long journey and also for your prompt service to us. We are yours very truly,

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

The weather at Easter was everything desirable and business was immense. On Thursday and Friday it rained hard, almost continuously, and the prospects for a fair Easter looked dubious, but it cleared on Friday night, and Saturday opened with sunshine, which continued over Sunday. Owing to the rain, people did not get out to do their buying till Saturday; then came the rush, and everybody was overworked.

Plants of all kinds were in demand. Lilies were plentiful and brought good prices. Roses and carnations were good and the demand better than the supply. Carnations sold at $1 per dozen and roses at $1 to $3. American Beauties sold at $7 for the best.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. did a big Easter business, and George Blackman said it was up to that of last year, giving a rough estimate. They had the largest cut of roses and carnations they ever had and yet they bought some to help fill the orders. Their stock of plants of all kinds was large and of good quality. They had extra help and at times could not wait on the people, so great was the rush. Their out-of-town trade was greater than ever before, with orders from a number of nearby states.

Julius Niednagel & Sons did their usual large business. They had a large cut of roses and carnations. They had several hundred lilies and sold all of them. Julius Niednagel is in California at present.

Henry Seymour sold out, and refused order after order which came in late.

Mrs. Elsperman says their trade was the best they ever had. They sold all their lilies. They had 125 spiræas and sold all of them; also about 1,000 hyacinths.

Nellie Goodge reports a fine trade. She had a nice cut of carnations, but was obliged to buy considerable quantities. She sold all lilies that were in bloom, and had a large call for other plants. She has been cutting snapdragons with about 6-foot stems and shipped the surplus to the Chicago market.

Louis Fritsch enjoyed a large business and could have sold much more stock if it had been on hand. It has been reported that he is about to sell out, but he says there is no truth in that. He expects to build another house this summer and will continue in business.

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Club Meeting.

At the April meeting of the Albany Florists' Club seven new members were proposed. It was decided to cooperate with the Albany Mothers' Club in the observance of Mothers' day, Sunday, May 14. Last year the florists of the city donated to the Mothers' Club white carnations, and it was decided to follow suit this year.

Frederick Goldring reported on his visit to the flower show in Boston. He also presented a resolution on the death of Thomas B. Snare, and a report upon the progress of a bill in the legislature to appropriate $50,000 for experimental greenhouses for floriculture.

Patrick Hyde resigned as chairman of the entertainment committee, and President F. A. Danker appointed Louis Schaefer in his place. Chairman Hyde, in resigning, was able to report a successful flower show and entertainment at the March meeting, and all bills in connection therewith paid. Chairman Schaefer reported that for May a smoker or entertainment will be provided, and an increase in the attendance is looked for.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

The Easter business of this year goes on record as the best in many years. The sales and orders on Friday were of great proportions, and on Saturday the stores and nurseries of all those florists that cater to the Easter trade were literally packed with buyers. We had beautiful weather, which helped considerably, because most of the shopping here is done on these two days. Some florists had sold out their Easter lilies by Saturday evening, and it can safely be said that nearly every store and nursery sold out their Easter stock by Sunday noon, which was a surprise for many.

Flowering plants, outside of lilies, were somewhat scarce and went in a rush, together with made-up baskets of different styles; so did the large quantities of shipped cut flowers. Thousands of valley were grown here and sold fast, especially those planted in pans.

The weather on Easter morning looked somewhat threatening, but soon it brightened up and, though it was not so warm and sunny as in other years, the store people were kept exceedingly busy until the afternoon hours. The displays in the different stores and show windows were elegant and attracted a constant crowd of admirers, many sales being due to that kind of advertisement. R. E.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

The prophecies made by Rochester florists with reference to the Easter trade were in almost every instance fulfilled. Despite the unpleasant weather on Saturday—rain, snow, mud and slush—the florists' stores were filled with buyers and the telephone bells kept up a constant jingling. The afternoon found stocks depleted, in some cases exhausted. Last year one could buy violets, daffodils, roses and carnations of the sidewalk dealers, but this time these merchants had only a few roses and carnations to offer. The wholesale houses were practically sold out before three o'clock.

Easter lilies, spiræas and azaleas had the call in plants, and almost every Rochester woman wore sweet peas or violets, the latter being by far the more popular.

Several of the large churches were elaborately decorated with Easter lilies, and these were sent on Monday to the homes of sick members and to the hospitals. In addition to these, hundreds of palms were rented for decorative purposes, and as practically all had to be delivered on Saturday afternoon and evening, the florists were certainly too tired to enjoy the Sunday services.

But it was a big week for sales, and undoubtedly proved to be a profitable week, for prices remained high enough to yield a good margin for both grower and retailer.

E. F. R.

OSHKOSH, WIS.

Florists are natural diplomats and when one enters politics he almost always is successful. Still, the accomplishment of Carl F. Fugleberg at the recent election is notable. Mr. Fugleberg is the senior partner of Fugleberg & Flister, proprietors of the South Side Flower Exchange. He was elected alderman in the third ward, where there never before has been a Republican representative in the city council. Also, Mr. Fugleberg is the youngest man ever elected to the city council in this town of 36,000 population; he is only 28 years old.

Springfield, O.—Schneider the Florist announced, just before Easter, that there was such a scarcity of potted plants here as might well be termed a famine.

MOTHERS' DAY

AND THE FLORISTS

THE LORD HELPS THOSE Who Help Themselves.

Easter has been observed since early times.

There is record of the celebration of Christmas in the year 180.

Memorial day has been an institution for forty-five years.

Mothers' day is three years old. It got a strong start and, if we are content to await the slow development of public opinion, may sometime approximate the importance of the three great flower days.

But why wait?

Why not advertise and force the growth, just as we do of our crops?

Let Everybody Help.

It is not often fortune favors the florists the way it has with Mothers' day—the second Sunday in May.

But the trade should not depend wholly on the fact that the sentiment which inspired Mothers' day has appealed to the great American people as nothing else has done in recent years—we should grasp our opportunity and do our utmost to acquaint the public with the purpose of this annual event: "To honor the best mother who ever lived—your own."

Mothers' day is only three years old, but last year it brought a lot of business to every florist who made effort to arouse interest—and to some who only sat idly waiting for others to work up the interest for them. So let's all do our share this year and push this new flower day into a leading place among the trade's special dates.

There are many ways it can be done—but none of these ways includes raising prices. Don't do that; reduce them, if anything.

The Story of Mothers' Day.

Mothers' day broke out sporadically all over the United States in 1908. It took florists by surprise, for none had heard of it before, and many wrote to The Review for information. But the inquiries then received have been as nothing compared to the questions and suggestions that came in following seasons, and especially this year, showing how the interest is growing.

That first year, when The Review undertook to trace the origin of Mothers' day and find what it all was about, it proved no easy task. The Federation of Women's Clubs, when appealed to at that time, disclaimed responsibility, but said, "It's a fine idea." Officials of the Congress of Mothers replied, "We have no record of Mothers' day, but the idea is good; we shall call attention to it at our next annual meeting." Finally, the search for the founder of the day led, through the city editor of a Chicago daily, to Miss Anna Jarvis, 2031 North Twelfth street, Philadelphia, who confessed to having conceived the idea in the desire to commemorate the anniversary of her mother's death. It was not only the thought of laying some flowers on mother's grave, but it occurred to her that it would be a beautiful tribute to all mothers, the living as well as the dead, if their children, on a given day, would unite in the simple wearing of white flowers. She wrote a letter about it to a Philadelphia newspaper and it was this that caused Mothers' day to break out in spots all over the country.

No Special Flower Needed.

Miss Jarvis suggested the white carnation as the Mothers' day flower par excellence. "Its whiteness stands for purity; its form, beauty; its fragrance,

Enlist the aid of the editors; they will help you push the work along.

Talk Mothers' day to your customers.

Then, too, you can go as far as you like with the Woman's Club, the churches, the Y. M. C. A. and the fraternal societies. The idea appeals to all classes.

Why not get the mayor of your city to issue a proclamation similar to the one issued for the first Mothers' day

Wear a Flower for Mother's Sake

To honor the best Mother who ever lived—your own. That is the purpose of Mothers' Day.

SUNDAY, MAY 14

love; its wide field of growth, charity; its lasting qualities, faithfulness—all a true mother's attributes," she wrote. But the way the sentiment appealed to the people was too strong for the supply of white carnations—there were not enough to go around—and The Review suggested that white flowers be worn for mothers gone before, bright flowers for mothers living. This does not meet with the approval of Miss Jarvis, who does not like to have her ideas tinkered with, but it is the only way that the development of Mothers' day can be continued. To limit its observance by the supply of white carnations would be the height of folly.

How Florists Can Help.

Every florist can, and should, help push along the Mothers' day observance. It can be done in many ways. As a beginning, take space in your by the mayor of Lincoln, Neb.? Here it is:

MOTHERS' DAY PROCLAMATION.
Office of the Mayor, City of Lincoln, Neb.
To the People of Lincoln:

The secretary of the Lincoln Young Men's Christian Association having suggested that Sunday, May 10, be observed by the people of this city as Mothers' day, every man to wear on that day a flower in honor of his mother, I have been requested to ask for general compliance with the suggestion.

Therefore, in pursuance of this request and as mayor of the city of Lincoln, Neb., I hereby recommend that by general consent, Sunday, May 10, 1908, be set apart as Mothers' day and that on that day every man and every boy in the city of Lincoln and every visitor within our gates, wear a flower in honor of his mother.

And I suggest that the day be made a special occasion for sending flowers to the invalids in Lincoln homes, to the sick in hospitals and to the orphans in public and denominational institutions.

It is eminently fitting that in this, as in other worthy movements, Lincoln take the lead. Let us hope that the first Mothers' day observed in this beautiful city will be so successful and inspiring that other cities will, in future years, follow the example.

Witness my hand as mayor of the city of Lincoln, Neb., this 6th day of May, A. D. 1908.

F. W. BROWN, Mayor.

You see, he did it at the suggestion of the Y. M. C. A. If you think your own "pull" isn't strong enough, get a leading minister to approach His Honor. Don't be bashful about it. The Lord helps those who help themselves. Besides, it's a good idea and they'll all take to it.

How It Worked Last Year.

In its issues of April 21 and 28, last year, The Review called attention to Mothers' day and pointed out the desirability of helping the idea along; also, some ways in which it could be done. Quite a few took hold and did their part with a will. Several afterward wrote The Review about it. It is interesting to note they all got good results. The story is told in the following article.

THESE TOOK THE HINT.

Working Up Mothers' Day.

Last year Mothers' day, always the second Sunday in the month, came May 6. In its issues of April 21 and 28 The Review urged its readers to work for the success of the day and suggested some of the things that could be done. The following are extracts from a few of the many letters received later in the month, telling how easily it came:

Kenosha, Wis.

I went to our mayor and he issued a proclamation for Mothers' day, in which he recommended the wearing of

A white flower for Mother's memory.
A bright flower for Mothers living.

I also went to nearly every pastor in town, and they all had something to say about Mothers' day. Now, in regard to business: Every florist in Kenosha stocked heavily, but by 2 p. m. everything was gone; we could have sold more. Colored carnations sold as well as white. C. G. Anderson.

Acting upon the suggestion of The Review, we took up the subject of Mothers' day. We first secured an editorial in a leading paper, which we promptly followed with an almost verbatim copy of the advertisement The Review suggested, of appropriate flowers for this day. The newspapers gave a full page describing the rise of the custom and honoring Miss Jarvis with pictures of her and her mother, and some of the decorations in our store. Even the newspaper cartoonists helped to swell the cry, and we are more than gratified to be able to say to you truthfully that we were entirely sold out both on Saturday and Sunday.

The custom certainly took splendidly, and Mothers' day is now on our regular annual holiday list. We often find and appropriate many useful suggestions in your paper and wish to compliment you on its efficiency. L. W. McCoy.

This is the second year we have tried to push it, and we feel well repaid for all effort on our part. Last year the people took kindly to the idea and the sale of flowers for the day exceeded our expectations; but this year it seemed more generally known, we advertised more, and the demand was greater than we anticipated. It should be as you suggest:

We sold our pinks for 5 cents apiece, not raising the price to customers, although we had to pay more at wholesale that day than usual. We feel that it is a day which will grow in popularity. G. C. & B. A. Stevens.

I read the Mothers' day articles in The Review and called the matter to the attention of our mayor and some of the leading ministers. The result was that the mayor issued a proclamation urging every citizen to observe the day and wear a flower—a flower, mind you, not a white carnation—and the newspapers gave it a good showing, stating that the florists had prepared for the extra demand and would not raise prices; also there was a Mothers' day mass meeting in one of the churches. Business was surprisingly good for Mothers' day. Carnations being exhausted, geraniums and other flowers were used. Committees from Sabbath schools came for miles for flowers. They took anything they could get—white or colored. One school took geraniums in pots to present to each member. Others made it a home-coming day, the family gathering around the mother, bringing her flowers, and then gathering around the table. I suggest that another year announcements be made earlier, and believe that more flowers can be sold Mothers' day than any other one day in the year. So let every florist become interested and thank The Review for pushing the day upon our attention.

Well, I want to thank you for pushing Mothers' day. At your suggestion in The Review in regard to advertising Mothers' day, I got busy and inserted an ad in our local paper, with the result that I sold 325 white carnations to one Sunday school, supplied the G. Just a word in relation to Mothers' day. We understand The Review has been the greatest factor in popularizing this most profitable day for florists. Locally we have worked on your suggestion, "white flowers for mother's memory and bright flowers for mothers living," and have succeeded wonderfully well.

Do Your Part Now.

Possibly the work of exploiting Mothers' day has grown beyond anything Miss Jarvis expected when she launched the idea in a circular in 1908. At any rate, the expense of postage, printing, clerical work and other things is sure to be large. The work, outside that done by the florists, has fallen on Miss Jarvis personally, and she has met the cost. She is not backed by an organization; her interest may slacken or change direction at any moment. Florists, who have so much to gain, should push the work along. Why not do something now?

eighty-eighth year and had a large family of sons, one of whom is a florist and a reader of The Review; but that need make no difference. Any other mother would be as pleased as this one was, and you can recommend the idea to your customers.

The wide white satin ribbon on the lilies was printed with the heading: "Mothers' Day, May 8, 1910. Greetings to Nancy Nysewander in her eighty-eighth year," and following the names of her sons and daughters there was the following, composed by one of them:

"No element in either national or domestic life is more important than the mothers of our country. Home virtues are the safeguard of our existence. Our mothers are their highest exemplification."

Mother, we shall meet there,
In that Home, sweet Home;
And each other greet where Sorrow is unknown.

Yes, we want to meet you,
Clasp again your hand;
We'll be there to greet you
In that glory land.

SWEET PEAS SPOTTING.

Can you tell me what the brown spots on the enclosed sweet pea blooms are? When the peas are bunched and stand in water over night they are covered with these spots the next morning, making them unsalable.

C. G. P.

If the flowers are picked when damp or warm and placed in water in a cold room, they are liable to become spotted.

Pick the flowers early in the morning and in the evening as much as possible. If bunched while cool, you should have no trouble from spotting. Of course, if the flowers touch the water, they are likely to become discolored, especially the white ones.

FRISCO'S NEWEST STORE.

The Flower Palace is the name given by Pelicano, Rossi & Co. to their new store in San Francisco. The location is 123 Kearney street, between Post and Sutter, in the best retail section of the downtown district. The illustration on this page will show that everything in the store is in keeping with the highest class of flower retailing, and it is said that since the opening, April 10, the number of visitors to the store has greatly exceeded anything that the proprietors anticipated as a result of their enterprise.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have been in the retail flower business in San Francisco for twenty years. After the great fire of 1906, theirs was the first flower store to reopen. Mr. Rossi is one of the most active figures in trade activities on the coast. He was manager of the recent extremely successful spring flower show at San Francisco.

NAME OF PLANT.

I should be pleased to know the name of the decorative plant with a leaf similar to the sketch enclosed. The leaves are as large as the caladium and stringers run from the stems of the plant into the ground. If there is a common name outside of the Latin, I would like to know it. The leaves are slit in quite a distance from the edge.

The sketch resembles the foliage of Farfugium grande, commonly named the Leopard plant, but if you forward a leaf for identification it will make it more certain.

GERMINATING ASPARAGUS SEED.

Will you please tell me what length of time is required to germinate seeds of Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri? I should also like to get directions for growing the seedlings.

S. E. P.

The length of time required to germinate asparagus seed varies somewhat according to the freshness of the seed, but, granted that the seed is fresh, the young plants will appear in three to four weeks when kept in a proper condition as to temperature and moisture. The seeds should be sown in flats of light soil, pressed down firmly. The seeds should be just covered with a thin layer of sand. Keep the soil moist and maintain a steady temperature of 65 degrees, and there should be no trouble in germinating these seeds. When large enough to handle, the seedlings should be potted off into 2½-inch pots and grown on in the same temperature.

How It Worked Last Year.

In its issues of April 21 and 28, last year, The Review called attention to Mothers' day and pointed out the desirability of helping the idea along; also, some ways in which it could be done. Quite a few took hold and did their part with a will. Several afterward wrote The Review about it. It is interesting to note they all got good results. The story is told in the following article.

THESE TOOK THE HINT.

Working Up Mothers' Day.

Last year Mothers' day, always the second Sunday in the month, came May 6. In its issues of April 21 and 28 The Review urged its readers to work for the success of the day and suggested some of the things that could be done. The following are extracts from a few of the many letters received later in the month, telling how easily it came:

HELPER FLOWERS.

To Develop the Slender, Airy Ones.

There is a host of slender petaled flowers, showery and airy, to which no one can deny a charming character, but which need the more gorgeous flowers to throw them into prominence, to say nothing of the softening tone which the frailer flowers lend to their more conspicuous sisters. Even though some of the slender ones have the richer and heavier color tones, they are so finely cut that they melt into thin air without the aid of a developer. If a whole collection of them were dumped together, they would never make a striking or even noticeable appearance, but when set against other flowers of the correct color and style a most beautiful effect is produced.

Some of these more delicate flowers may be recalled, as the honeysuckle, lobelia, grass flowers, freesia, gypsophila, mignonette, sweet alyssum, forget-me-not, garden heliotrope, cyprus vine, tree catkin, the various kinds of asparagus and smilax in bloom, and the madeira vine, besides a halfway list containing those neither especially dainty nor quite decided, such as the swainsona, genista, Clematis paniculata, achillea, the flowering begonias, etc.

Some Effective Contrasts.

Mignonette hungers for yellow. Try it with salmon pink or yellow snapdragons, Bridesmaid roses, daffodils, or phlox of the salmon pink persuasion.

Forget-me-nots are desirable with dull orange, copper-colored, pink and white flowers.

The common honeysuckle may be associated with scarlet carnations, Kaiserin roses, and nasturtiums in the orange and red tones.

Lobelia shows well against yellow calceolarias or white and yellow snapdragons.

The grasses in flower look well over against asters, mums, dahlias, gaillardias, coreopsis, clover, etc.

Freesias combine well with violets, yellow tulips, single daffodils, cattleyas and cypripediums.

Gypsophila lightens with a fairy touch masses of pink and violet sweet peas, marguerites, asters or hydrangeas.

Sweet alyssum is true to its name among white and violet peas, white carnations, marguerites or lilacs. Candy-tuft needs about the same class of developers.

Garden heliotrope makes a filmy background for funeral sprays of Richmond roses, violet and violet pink peas, violet pink snapdragons and stocks, lilacs, iris and asters.

Tree catkins, with daffodils, lilacs, Bride gladioli, irises and spiræas, are real indices of spring and new life.

The various kinds of asparagus and smilax, when in bloom, make ideal bridal and corsage showers; also casket fringes, interior decorative and cascade wreath showers, with roses, lilies, carnations, snapdragons, etc.

The Medium-fragile Sorts.

Then there are the "betwixt and between" kinds, such as swainsonas, genistas, Clematis paniculata and the achilleas, which need the dignity of a few larger flowers to settle them in favorite places. An entire shower of swainsona, hung over a few stalks of candidums or choice white roses, makes a fairy shower bouquet. Genista with cypripediums or yellow tulips is a charming armful for the bridesmaids. Clematis paniculata will drape a mantel or sideboard mirror, with a few choice lavender asters or calendulas.

A madeira vine in bloom, cut down to the root, will drape wherever drapery is needed and soften a dignified group of gladioli in the distance.

These are merely suggestions, which should lead to scores of better combinations, suited to the needs and the supply of each locality.

Many of these vines and cut flowers are soft and perishable and it will be found wise to use the whole plant and root in some hidden dish of water. Much depends upon the way they are handled, at the time of cutting and later. Not a minute should be lost in plunging the roots and stems well into water and keeping them there.

Pack for delivery with as little handling as possible. Frequently they can be hauled to their destination in the water and stored in a cool basement till the last minute.

BENSON'S BUBBLE.

The accompanying illustration shows the Buick automobile used by Lester F. Benson, Indianapolis, for delivery purposes. Referring to it, Mr. Benson says: "Operating between the greenhouses at 2210 Park avenue and the store at 334 Massachusetts avenue, and making deliveries from both places, we have found that the automobile does as much work as two delivery wagons, in addition to making better time than can be done with horses. The cost is not so great as was the case with horse delivery."

Mr. Benson's auto is finished in white, with gold trimmings. On each side is a representation of the globe, showing the western hemisphere with the inscription: "We give the earth with every plant." This is a feature of all Mr. Benson's advertising, appearing not only in his newspaper advertisements, but on his business card, letter-heads, envelopes and other printed matter.

GLADIOLUS BULB ROT.

Experiments at Cornell University.

About three years ago the department of plant pathology at Cornell University started some investigations on the bulb rots of gladiolus. This work was done by E. Wallace, a graduate student in the department who undertook the investigation as a thesis for his master's degree. Mr. Wallace continued these studies for about a year and a half and made good progress toward the solution of the cause of those various bulb rots. He isolated and studied three or four different fungi and proved that they were in each case the cause of different types of bulb rots. However, for the lack of funds we were not able to continue these investigations further, and while Mr. Wallace has quite clearly shown that there are at least three different kinds of bulb rots of the gladiolus in this country and that they are in each case caused by a different fungus, it has not been possible for us to make further studies on these parasites to determine just how they get into the bulbs, or to carry on experiments to determine some practical method of controlling the disease.

As plant pathologist for the Society of American Florists, the writer finds that $50 has been set aside by the society for his use in carrying on investigations. With the approval of President Asmus of the society, this sum is to be used toward paying a young man in the department to continue the investigations on gladiolus bulb rots so well begun by Mr. Wallace. This work is now under way and Mr. Fitzpatrick, who is doing the work, is anxious to obtain specimens of diseased gladiolus bulbs from growers who will be kind enough to contribute. We shall also be glad to visit any growers within reasonable distance, to look over the disease in the bulbs, select material for study and talk over the problem with them, if they are willing to pay the traveling expenses. There are no funds for this investigation beyond that contributed by the American Florists' Association.

Expenses of the Work.

Moreover, the writer feels that if gladiolus growers believe the investigation and solution of these bulb rot problems would be worth anything to them, they should be willing to bear at least a portion of the expenses for such investigations. The department of plant pathology is now making it a general practice to undertake no investigation of any plant disease unless the growers of the crop are sufficiently interested to cooperate financially in carrying on such investigations. The state has provided a good laboratory equipment and facilities for carrying on such investigations, together with competent men to oversee the work, but that such investigations may be properly and promptly carried on it is necessary to have one or more men devote their entire time to each problem, under the direction of the professor in the department of plant pathology. The salaries for these men, which are relatively small, range from $500 to $750 a year where the men are employed continuously throughout the year, and the necessary expenses for traveling range from $250 to $500 per year, all being met by growers or associations of growers. Some ten or twelve such cooperative arrangements are now in operation and no less than thirty different disease problems are now under investigation.

The work on the gladiolus bulb rots is now under way and can be carried along until autumn of this year on the funds in sight. A. E. Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., a well known gladiolus grower, has in the past contributed largely toward these investigations by paying the traveling expenses of Mr. Wallace in connection with the work and in contributing diseased and healthy bulbs for the investigations. He has again come forward this year and offered his further cooperation along these lines. Much credit is due Mr. Cowee for having made possible the work already done on these diseases. The enthusiastic support which he is giving in continuing this work this season is most gratifying, and we trust that every gladiolus grower will see his way clear also to assist in carrying out this work. You can all materially aid us by sending in diseased bulbs for examination. Address all material and correspondence to the undersigned, at the New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

ANNUALS.

It is not too late to sow many annuals, but after this date a mild hotbed is far preferable to flats in greenhouses. Use fine soil on the surface. Sow rather thinly and let the rows be four inches apart, except for such robust subjects as zinnias or annual sunflowers. Do not forget a good sized batch of asters of some of the main crop or late varieties, such as Victoria, Vick's Branching, Semple's and others. The Ostrich Plume section can also still be sown. Ten weeks' stocks, verbenas, dianthus, Drummond's phlox, balsams and many other annuals can still be sown with advantage; in fact, there is time a month later for some of these for late planting. Do not forget some of the cosmos, especially that grand variety Lady Lenox, and if you have forgotten any of the climbers you will be surprised to find out how fast they germinate and develop in a hotbed.

THE FREEPORT STORE.

The accompanying illustrations are reproduced from photographs made at the downtown establishment of the Freeport Floral Co., Freeport, Ill., just before Easter. The greenhouses of the establishment consist of about 35,000 square feet of glass, there being eight houses in the range. A large variety of stock is grown, not only to supply the downtown store, but also for the large wholesale business, especially in young stock. The store is 22x70 feet, located on the principal street of the city, and successful from the day of its recent opening. The illustrations show how thoroughly up-to-date it is in all its appointments and how large the Easter stock was. It is pleasant to record that everything was sold. Louis Bauseher is the secretary of the corporation and manager of its business.

The common honeysuckle may be associated with scarlet carnations, Kaiserin roses, and nasturtiums in the orange and red tones.

Lobelia shows well against yellow calceolarias or white and yellow snapdragons.

The grasses in flower look well over against asters, mums, dahlias, gaillardias, coreopsis, clover, etc.

Freesias combine well with violets, yellow tulips, single daffodils, cattleyas and cypripediums.

Gypsophila lightens with a fairy touch masses of pink and violet sweet peas, marguerites, asters or hydrangeas.

Sweet alyssum is true to its name among white and violet peas, white carnations, marguerites or lilies. Candy tuft needs about the same class of developers.

Garden heliotrope makes a filmy background for funeral sprays of Richmond roses, violet and violet pink peas, violet pink snapdragons and stocks, lilies, iris and asters.

Tree catkins, with daffodils, lilies, Bride gladioli, irises and spiraeas, are real indices of spring and new life.

The various kinds of asparagus and smilax, when in bloom, make ideal bridal and corsage showers; also casket fringes, interior decorative and cascade wreath showers, with roses, lilies, carnations, snapdragons, etc.

The Medium-fragile Sorts.

Then there are the "betwixt and between" kinds, such as swainsonas, genistas, Clematis paniculata and the achilleas, which need the dignity of a few larger flowers to settle them in favorite places. An entire shower of swainsona, hung over a few stalks of candidums or choice white roses, makes a fairy shower bouquet. Genista with cypripediums or yellow tulips is a charming armful for the bridesmaids. Clematis paniculata will drape a mantel or sideboard mirror, with a few choice lavender asters or calendulas.

A madeira vine in bloom, cut down to the root, will drape wherever drapery is needed and soften a dignified group of gladioli in the distance.

These are merely suggestions, which should lead to scores of better combinations, suited to the needs and the supply of each locality.

Many of these vines and cut flowers are soft and perishable and it will be found wise to use the whole plant and root in some hidden dish of water. Much depends upon the way they are handled, at the time of cutting and later. Not a minute should be lost in plunging the roots and stems well into water and keeping them there.

Pack for delivery with as little handling as possible. Frequently they can be hauled to their destination in the water and stored in a cool basement till the last minute.

BENSON'S BUBBLE.

The accompanying illustration shows the Buick automobile used by Lester F. Benson, Indianapolis, for delivery purposes. Referring to it, Mr. Benson says: "Operating between the greenhouses at 2210 Park avenue and the store at 334 Massachusetts avenue, and making deliveries from both places, we have found that the automobile does as much work as two delivery wagons, in addition to making better time than can be done with horses. The cost is not so great as was the case with horse delivery."

Mr. Benson's auto is finished in white, with gold trimmings. On each side is a representation of the globe, showing the western hemisphere with the inscription: "We give the earth with every plant." This is a feature of all Mr. Benson's advertising, appearing not only in his newspaper advertisements, but on his business card, letter-heads, envelopes and other printed matter.

GLADIOLUS BULB ROT.

Experiments at Cornell University.

About three years ago the department of plant pathology at Cornell University started some investigations on the bulb rots of gladiolus. This work was done by E. Wallace, a graduate student in the department who undertook the investigation as a thesis for his master's degree. Mr. Wallace continued these studies for about a year and a half and made good progress toward the solution of the cause of those various bulb rots. He isolated and studied three or four different fungi and proved that they were in each case the cause of different types of bulb rots. However, for the lack of funds we were not able to continue these investigations further, and while Mr. Wallace has quite clearly shown that there are at least three different kinds of bulb rots of the gladiolus in this country and that they are in each case caused by a different fungus, it has not been possible for us to make further studies on these parasites to determine just how they get into the bulbs, or to carry on experiments to determine some practical method of controlling the disease.

As plant pathologist for the Society of American Florists, the writer finds that $50 has been set aside by the society for his use in carrying on investigations. With the approval of President Asmus of the society, this sum is to be used toward paying a young man in the department to continue the investigations on gladiolus bulb rots so well begun by Mr. Wallace. This work is now under way and Mr. Fitzpatrick, who is doing the work, is anxious to obtain specimens of diseased gladiolus bulbs from growers who will be kind enough to contribute. We shall also be glad to visit any growers within reasonable distance, to look over the disease in the bulbs, select material for study and talk over the problem with them, if they are willing to pay the traveling expenses. There are no funds for this investigation beyond that contributed by the American Florists' Association.

Expenses of the Work.

Moreover, the writer feels that if gladiolus growers believe the investigation and solution of these bulb rot problems would be worth anything to them, they should be willing to bear at least a portion of the expenses for such investigations. The department of plant pathology is now making it a general practice to undertake no investigation of any plant disease unless the growers of the crop are sufficiently interested to cooperate financially in carrying on such investigations. The state has provided a good laboratory equipment and facilities for carrying on such investigations, together with competent men to oversee the work, but that such investigations may be properly and promptly carried on it is necessary to have one or more men devote their entire time to each problem, under the direction of the professor in the department of plant pathology. The salaries for these men, which are relatively small, range from $500 to $750 a year where the men are employed continuously throughout the year, and the necessary expenses for traveling range from $250 to $500 per year, all being met by growers or associations of growers. Some ten or twelve such cooperative arrangements are now in operation and no less than thirty different disease problems are now under investigation.

The work on the gladiolus bulb rots is now under way and can be carried along until autumn of this year on the funds in sight. A. E. Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., a well known gladiolus grower, has in the past contributed largely toward these investigations by paying the traveling expenses of Mr. Wallace in connection with the work and in contributing diseased and healthy bulbs for the investigations. He has again come forward this year and offered his further cooperation along these lines. Much credit is due Mr. Cowee for having made possible the work already done on these diseases. The enthusiastic support which he is giving in continuing this work this season is most gratifying, and we trust that every gladiolus grower will see his way clear also to assist in carrying out this work. You can all materially aid us by sending in diseased bulbs for examination. Address all material and correspondence to the undersigned, at the New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

ANNUALS.

It is not too late to sow many annuals, but after this date a mild hotbed is far preferable to flats in greenhouses. Use fine soil on the surface. Sow rather thinly and let the rows be four inches apart, except for such robust subjects as zinnias or annual sunflowers. Do not forget a good sized batch of asters of some of the main crop or late varieties, such as Victoria, Vick's Branching, Semple's and others. The Ostrich Plume section can also still be sown. Ten weeks' stocks, verbenas, dianthus, Drummond's phlox, balsams and many other annuals can still be sown with advantage; in fact, there is time a month later for some of these for late planting. Do not forget some of the cosmos, especially that grand variety Lady Lenox, and if you have forgotten any of the climbers you will be surprised to find out how fast they germinate and develop in a hotbed.

THE FREEPORT STORE.

The accompanying illustrations are reproduced from photographs made at the downtown establishment of the Freeport Floral Co., Freeport, Ill., just before Easter. The greenhouses of the establishment consist of about 35,000 square feet of glass, there being eight houses in the range. A large variety of stock is grown, not only to supply the downtown store, but also for the large wholesale business, especially in young stock. The store is 22x70 feet, located on the principal street of the city, and successful from the day of its recent opening. The illustrations show how thoroughly up-to-date it is in all its appointments and how large the Easter stock was. It is pleasant to record that everything was sold. Louis Bauscher is the secretary of the corporation and manager of its business.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Charles Limmer has filed a petition in bankruptcy. His liabilities are $6,337 and his assets $6,900, including $4,500 in real estate mortgages.

ROSES IN FLORIDA.

I am sending by mail some Bride rose plants and some soil. Can you give me any idea as to why these plants are troubled with root knot? The roses were planted last May in solid beds. The soil was the same as the sample and was fourteen inches deep. Plenty of manure was mixed with it, as the soil is poor in this country and this was the best I could get here. Does the soil need lime, bone meal, or blood and bone, or what does it need to give it more body? I was thinking of digging up the plants, cutting them back at the root and top, planting them all in one bed and then planting all the other beds with new plants. I do not wish to renew the soil, as it is expensive and has only been inside one year, but I thought of working the bed well and letting the soil rest for a month or five weeks before planting any new plants in it. I should like to know what is the best material to mix with it. Can you tell me what roses to plant in Florida, where the days are warm and the nights are damp and cool? I am in the central part of the state, forty or fifty miles from the sea. The roses are own-root stock.

One house is 25x40 feet and nine feet six inches to the ridge, with ventilation on each side. The side bed is four feet from the glass and the middle bed seven and one-half feet. There is a large ventilator on the ridge. The house runs north and south. One thing that puzzles me is this: On the south end is a concrete wall, rising sixteen inches above the level of the rose bed. The space above is glass. The four beds at that end are nice and green and have grown roses two and one-half feet high. The space where the roses do well extends only six or seven feet north; the rest of each bed looks yellow, except the side bed, which looks a little better. This house is on a street corner, where there is an electric light, which makes the south end of the house clear as day. Has this anything to do with the quality of the stock grown? The house was not heated at all during the winter and the roses were outside until the beginning of November, when I built the house on the concrete wall. No mildew has bothered the roses, except where they have been growing so thriftily in the south end.

J. H.

In a house of the small dimensions you have, it will be difficult to grow good roses, especially in so warm a climate as yours. The soil forwarded, while not ideal for roses, is much better than many florists can obtain, and there is no reason why it should not grow them satisfactorily. You would secure better results if half the depth of soil were used. The drainage below this should, of course, be good. Cow manure is the best for roses. If you can obtain this of good quality at a moderate price, it is much to be preferred to blood, bone or any chemicals. If cow manure is not procurable, use well rotted horse manure. Instead of lifting field-grown plants and planting them in the beds, it would be better to secure young stock in 3-inch or 4-inch pots, preferably grafted stock, and plant in May or June.

Bride is not now grown to any considerable extent under glass for summer flowering. My Maryland, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, President Carnot and Prince de Bulgarie are particularly good. For winter blooming, Killarney and White Killarney are among the best. There are now dark pink, light pink and scarlet sports of this most popular of all indoor roses.

There would seem to be no need to renew the soil, but it would be your best policy to use less depth of it, planting young grafted stock from pots and not saving over any of the old plants. By using blue litmus paper you can easily see whether the soil needs any lime, but be cautious in the use of bone and chemicals generally, as they often do a great deal of harm. Liquid cow manure is the best fertilizer for roses.

C. W.

SMILAX.

It is yet rather early to plant beds of smilax, but this will act as a gentle reminder that the little plants should not be neglected. If they are in 2-inch pots and getting their roots crowded, give them a shift into 3-inch. As each crop of strings is cut, it is a good plan to let the roots get tolerably dry for a while. If watered in soaking quantities after the growth has been cut away, the roots will sometimes rot. Wait until the new growths are starting away. Then give a mulch of manure and water well. Smilax has been outclassed to some extent by the several varieties of asparagus, but those who have grown it this season have found an extra good demand for it.

SEEDLING GERANIUMS.

I am shipping you today, by express, two blooms of my seedling geraniums, No. 1 and No. 2. Please tell me what shades they are. Both are good, robust growers and good bloomers. They are good bedders and bloom more brilliantly outdoors than in the greenhouse, the flowers lasting nearly a month. They also have fine foliage, both branching freely, with the flowers well above the foliage. No. 1 shows almost as well in artificial light as in sunlight. Do you think they are of any value? J. M.

The flowers show some good features, though blooms of geraniums at this time of the year do not always indicate the possibilities of the plants later in the season, when better conditions bring out the color and develop the size of the blooms.

No. 1 is a soft, light pink; the petals are edged with a lighter shade and veined with carmine—a pleasing color.

No. 2 is a clear pink of delicate shade; the base of the upper petal is blotched with white and it has a large truss, strong stem and heavy foliage. These indicate strong growth and this is likely to prove a good bedding sort, but this can only be determined by growth in the open and by comparison with other varieties under like conditions.

WINTER-FLOWERING GERANIUMS.

In the rush of other work, winter-flowering geraniums are liable to be neglected, and if allowed to become pot-bound it is difficult to make good plants of them. When the roots get much matted, loosen them with a pointed stick when repotting. If the plants are now in 3-inch pots, they are of ample size and will develop into fine 6-inch pot specimens before winter. These geraniums are better grown under glass all the time. When stood outdoors, if the pots get soddened by drenching rains, such as we frequently get in summer, the foliage often suffers and bacteria develop, which indoor culture prevents. Pinch the tops out of the plants when they are six to seven inches high, in order to make them bushy, and keep all flowers removed. In potting, avoid a light soil. You do not want any leaf-mold, but a good stiff loam, and instead of adding rotted manure, add a little from a spent mushroom bed and some fine bone. Pot firmly, in order to make the plants produce short jointed growths. Loose potting in soil containing much nitrogen will cause a soft, rank growth, which we do not want.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

CUTTINGS FAIL TO ROOT.

A number of times I have thought of writing to inquire about matters that I was anxious to know about, but it seems strange to me that when the next week's Review came it had just the information I was looking for. But there is one question that I wish to ask. I have had some trouble in rooting cuttings. In rooting carnations I think I did well, as I got as many as ninety per cent, but with roses and chrysanthemums I have had a great deal of trouble. It seems, indeed, that my best mums go back on me; they damp off before they form any roots. This may be caused by too much water, but they wither if I do not sprinkle them. I have the bench covered with thin white muslin for shade. Please let me know what is the cause of my trouble.

J. G. K.

It is possible that J. G. K.'s chrysanthemums have been grown in a warm house and are too soft to have a high percentage of them root. If the stock plants have been growing in a cool, airy house, with a night temperature of 45 degrees, there seems to be no reason why they should fail to root.

If the propagating house is kept too close, so that the cuttings do not dry off after watering, they will often damp, but I would assume from J. G. K.'s letter that they are growing in an ordinary bench, shaded from the sun by muslin. When cuttings are put in the sand, they must be kept from wilting if possible, and at this season of the year frequent spraying is necessary, as well as shading from the sun, and the air should not be permitted to blow directly across the plants from the open ventilators. If the cuttings have such a position and such treatment, and are free from rubbish left by previous propagations, I see no reason why J. G. K. cannot root his chrysanthemums satisfactorily.

Chas. H. Totty.

WHEN TO TAKE THE BUDS.

On the Chadwick and Golden Glow, which buds would it be advisable to take—the first or second crown or the terminal buds—for good results? I am located in northwestern Oregon.

J. J. S.

These two chrysanthemums differ widely, both in their season of flowering and in general characteristics. Golden Glow is the earliest yellow variety we have, while Chadwick is one of the latest.

I have always argued that the terms "first and second crown," in handling chrysanthemum stock, are misleading, for the simple reason that a grower who plants his stock in April would get two or more crown buds before one could be retained that would produce a satisfactory flower, while another grower, handling the same variety and planting in June, might be able to secure the first crown bud and handle it in quite a satisfactory manner.

Golden Glow buds can be taken in almost any season and the flower will develop. If J. J. S. wishes flowers in August and his plants were sufficiently advanced to throw a bud in June, that bud will develop, but there is no call in our market, in New York, for chrysanthemums until the last part of September, and buds secured from the middle of July to the middle of August would give a flower early enough, I imagine, to be a profitable proposition in almost any market.

Chadwick taken on any bud during July and August is worthless, as the buds will not develop. If a bud can be secured about the middle of September on this variety, it will give a thoroughly satisfactory flower late in November. If planted late, and the late bud taken, Chadwick can be kept for Christmas or later, but it is a question whether there is any money in growing stock to meet so late a date, as people generally seem to be tired of them after Thanksgiving. Chas. H. Totty.

DAHLIAS.

If dahlias in pots are wanted, the roots should be started now. An overwhelming proportion of the stock sold is, however, in the form of dry divided tubers, some dormant and others started. There is no special advantage in early starting, unless cuttings for propagating are wanted. Just as good results will be had from planting out divided portions of tubers as from strong pot grown plants, and not only is it needless to start dahlias early for retailing, but when you are growing them outdoors for cutting, the end of May is quite early enough to plant, and we have seen splendid blocks planted even a month later than that.

Ferns

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Nephrolepis.

After Easter some of the carnations are hardly worth carrying any longer and a side bench will make an ideal place in which to plant out the young nephrolepis. The varieties of this popular fern are becoming something bewildering, but still they come. In spite, however, of all the newer introductions, N. exaltata Bostoniensis is still the leader and more of this sort are grown, probably, than any other two combined. It is the fern par excellence for the dwelling-house, and anyone who can grow a fern at all succeeds with this one. Whitmani and elegantissima come next in order of popularity, but all the other ferns have some special points of merit which will find them purchasers. The average country florist, however, cannot afford to grow more than one or two kinds and the old Boston and Whitmani, or the Boston and the improved elegantissima, will satisfactorily fill the bill.

Nephrolepis are not fastidious as to soil, and succeed even better in loam than in the lighter compost of leaf-mold and peat that is sometimes recommended. If the carnation soil is stiff, give it a dressing of coarse sand and well-decayed manure before turning it over. A little shade can be given on the glass, while cheesecloth can be suspended from the roof the length of the bench. This will give the necessary shade and keep out an excess of air. As the plants begin to grow, scatter a thin mulch of spent hotbed manure or any other old manure on the surface. It is surprising how the young ferns enjoy this mulch and send their roots into it.

Cibotium Schiedei.

Cibotium Schiedei is a fern worthy of more attention from small growers. At exhibitions it invariably attracts attention by its graceful sweep, and if it can be given an elevated position on a stand, so that it can show its individuality, and if its fronds can receive full, free play, it cannot fail to grow into a handsome plant. This variety is quite robust and succeeds well in fairly large pots in a mixture of loam and sand, with a little well rotted manure. No fern, or, for that matter, any other foliage plant, is more graceful and desirable for hall or room decorations when it can be given a position fairly well raised, so that the fronds will not be brushed against.

RAMSBURG'S NEW ANTIRRHINUM.

The National Flower Show at Boston was so enormous in its extent that many good things shown there failed to attract the attention they would have received in a less extensive exhibition. But one of the novelties that caught the eye of everyone was the Silver Pink snapdragon shown by G. S. Ramsburg, Somersworth, N. H. Speaking of it, nure and this has been forked in about them; they should render a good account of themselves. They can be still further improved by a top-dressing of nitrate of soda or dried blood when they are making their growth. Take care not to scatter the nitrate of soda on the foliage. Do not feed too heavily. The assumption that because a little is good, a larger quantity will prove even better, is utterly wrong. A fair quantity will prove a good, but the heavier dose is liable to act as a poison.

Mr. Ramsburg said: "This is a great snapdragon, having originated here and having circulated as a stray sheep in my part of New England for four years. We took it up three years ago and have tried many experiments with it, until we have a strong plant with closely set head, running ten inches up, with flowers only a half inch apart." The accompanying illustration shows a section of a bench at Mr. Ramsburg's, photographed just before Easter. He has this season devoted to it a bench 4x60 feet and cut 1,200 spikes for Easter. The illustration shows a yardstick in the center, indicating the height of the plants.

Canterbury Bells.

As pot plants Canterbury bells are beautiful. Some of the earlier ones flowered for Easter, but it is later in the season, near Memorial day, when they are to be had of really grand quality. Pot plants are away ahead of outdoor grown plants in every way. They must be securely staked, and to insure fine specimens, no pots less than eight and ten inches in diameter should be used. For Memorial day trade they are not half appreciated. Any enterprising grower, who would winter a lot of plants in a coldframe and bench them in a house kept at 50 degrees at night seven or eight weeks before Easter, would get a grand lot of flowers.

This reminds one that the present is a good time to sow a batch of seed in order to get lusty plants for next fall. Sow the seeds thinly and, as they are small, cover lightly. A coldframe is the ideal place for them. Keep shaded until the seeds germinate. Then air freely and gradually harden them. If set out in nursery rows a foot between the plants and kept well cultivated all summer, they will make heavy plants by October, which is a suitable month in which to lift and pot all needed for indoor flowering. The popular colors are pink and white. A smaller proportion of lavender will sell, especially at Memorial day. The singles and hose-in-hose or calycanthema varieties are much more desirable than the doubles. The flowers of the latter are so heavy that they will not hold up as the singles do.

Fuchsias.

While hardly to be classed as bedding plants, fuchsias will flower in fairly satisfactory manner all summer if planted in partial shade. They will not succeed here as in the great London parks, but are graceful and, dotted

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Hardy Perennials.

Any winter mulch will by now have been removed from hardy perennials and many of them will have made considerable growth. It will have been noticed that a heavy covering of straw or leaves does more harm than good to many plants. Bulbous plants send their tops into the mulch and are badly broken in its removal. Foxgloves simply rot away when heavily covered and about all the herbaceous plants making an early growth are seriously hurt by a thick mulch, especially when, as often happens, the ground below the mulch is soft. If it is hard frozen the damage will be much less. Loosen up the surface soil with the cultivator, hoe or fork. This, besides helping the plants, serves to kill many little weed seedlings just starting.

While autumn is the best time for transplanting the bulk of perennials, the work can also be done in spring, and where plants in pots are to be had, planting may be done at almost any time. Any varieties of somewhat doubtful hardiness, such as Japanese anemones, incarnilleas, rehmannias, tritomas (kniphofias), digitalis and pompon chrysanthemums, should now go out at once. In some latitudes these are all hardy; in others they are not. Sweet williams, rockets, Canterbury bells, Coreopsis grandiflora and other varieties which are biennials, or usually treated as such, should also go out, as well as double daisies, aubrietias, myosotis, violas, pansies and other low-growing spring-flowering subjects. These latter make useful borderings and are also fine for carpeting bulb beds.

Keep the shoots of eremuri protected by some evergreen boughs until late spring frosts have gone, as they are easily injured. If cuttings of perennial phlox have not yet been taken, it is not too late to root a good batch in a cool propagating house, or even coldframe. These root in a few weeks and during cool, moist weather can be planted out direct from the sand. They make one large head of flowers in late summer when the older clumps are on the wane. Pentstemons are better treated as annuals. These should now be of sufficient strength to plant out.

They do not mind a little frost. Cuttings taken in late autumn also make excellent plants. Keep young growths on lilies covered with a light mulch. The late spring frosts scorch them and cause what many believe to be a disease. L. auratum, tigrinum, speciosum and Henryi, to say nothing of other varieties, are easily injured in this way, and even the hardy L. candidum is better not exposed to biting, frosty winds once its flower spikes are pushing.

Where a batch of seeds of such subjects as delphiniums, aquilegias, Shasta daisies, lupines and other varieties were sown under glass in February and have been pricked off in flats, these will now be all right to set out in nursery rows, and any fall seedlings wintered in coldframes should also be set out. Many of these will flower nicely this season and all will make strong stock for planting in permanent beds in the fall. They are just the class of plants wanted for your customers who want a few perennials, and it is noticed that the number growing these hardy plants increases every year.

Peonies are now starting to grow. If they had a winter mulch of rotted ma-here and there, so as to rise above some lower growing plants succeeding under similar conditions, they are quite satisfactory. They are also useful in piazza or window boxes, when not too much exposed to the sun's rays. Plants in 3-inch pots should be shifted into 4-inch if they are getting potbound. These will make a popular selling size for May and June sales. Where there is a call for summer-flowering plants in pots, and at all summer resorts there is such a call, fuchsias prove extremely useful. Old plants kept over are, of course, the best if something sizable is wanted, but the young stock potted into 4-inch pots and later shifted into 6-inch pots will make pretty plants if they have one or two pinchings and are well looked after. By judicious pinching or removal of the flowers, the plants can easily be had in flower at any particular time.

Asters.

The earliest plants of Queen of the Market and Early Dawn have been in benches for some time and are now growing nicely. They want plenty of ventilation and the surface soil should be kept carefully loosened. Plants in flats should go out in nursery rows in the field as soon as weather will permit. In the meantime give them a coldframe and remove the sashes, except to ward off soaking rains and frosts. The ground in which they are to be planted should have been well manured, plowed deeply and well harrowed before the plants go out. It is no use setting asters in poor soil. If you want fine flowers, carried on long stems, they must have good soil to grow in.

While asters can be sown as late as the middle of June, the present is a good time to start a large batch of such vigorous sorts as Vick's Branching or American Branching, Semple's Giant Comet and other popular varieties. The seed can be sown outdoors, or, better still, in shallow drills in a coldframe. The outdoor sowing will be all right in the warmer states, but in more northerly latitudes a glass covering is often desirable until nearly the end of May.

Pasadena, Cal.—The spring flower show of the Pasadena Gardeners' Association was opened at the amphitheater of the Hotel Maryland, April 13. The exhibition covered an acre of ground.

THE SAN FRANCISCO SHOW.

The spring show at San Francisco, March 30 to April 2, was fully reported in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review for April 13, but reference is again made to it, as the trade at large will be interested in noting the extent and the effective staging of the exhibition as shown in the accompanying illustrations. The new Fairmount hotel afforded appropriate surroundings and the skill of Angelo J. Rossi, retail florist, who was manager, was apparent in the arrangements; a retailer always has an eye to the artistic.

This was one of the most successful shows ever given on the coast, both from a financial and artistic standpoint. The general public took a tremendous interest, as the heavy attendance showed, and practically all the growers in San Francisco and vicinity aided, both by their exhibits and attendance. The weather was all that could be desired and everything was just right. The display of seasonable flowers was the finest ever seen in San Francisco, and too much credit can not be given to those who had the affair in charge. Although it was too early for much of an assortment of outside stock, with the exception of bulbs, these, with a large variety of greenhouse flowers and flowering plants, filled the large hall.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. had, in addition to the group shown in the illustration, another of palms and evergreens in tubs, which took up a large portion of the hall.

E. W. McLellan & Co. received first for collection of roses grown under glass, also for narcissi, Lilium multiflorum, Iris Hispanica, freesias, sweet peas, lilacs, fruit blossoms and Crimson Ramblers. The principal part of their exhibit, but not all, is shown in the illustration of the two groups at the head of this page.

The retailers participated strongly in this show and profited largely by it. For the most original floral design, a large hat, Stein & Levin received first award, and the second prize went to Podesta & Baldocchi. The Misses Hannon received first for a basket of cut flowers, with A. E. Warlow, Miss C. F. Williams and the Hackel Floral Co. following in rotation. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. were awarded a special for a large and comprehensive assortment of Easter suggestions.

nure and this has been forked in about them, they should render a good account of themselves. They can be still further improved by a top-dressing of nitrate of soda or dried blood when they are making their growth. Take care not to scatter the nitrate of soda on the foliage. Do not feed too heavily. The assumption that because a little is good, a larger quantity will prove even better, is utterly wrong. A fair quantity will prove a good, but the heavier dose is liable to act as a poison.

Canterbury Bells.

As pot plants Canterbury bells are beautiful. Some of the earlier ones flowered for Easter, but it is later in the season, near Memorial day, when they are to be had of really grand quality. Pot plants are away ahead of outdoor grown plants in every way. They must be securely staked, and to insure fine specimens, no pots less than eight and ten inches in diameter should be used. For Memorial day trade they are not half appreciated. Any enterprising grower, who would winter a lot of plants in a coldframe and bench them in a house kept at 50 degrees at night seven or eight weeks before Easter, would get a grand lot of flowers.

This reminds one that the present is a good time to sow a batch of seed in order to get lusty plants for next fall. Sow the seeds thinly and, as they are small, cover lightly. A coldframe is the ideal place for them. Keep shaded until the seeds germinate. Then air freely and gradually harden them. If set out in nursery rows a foot between the plants and kept well cultivated all summer, they will make heavy plants by October, which is a suitable month in which to lift and pot all needed for indoor flowering. The popular colors are pink and white. A smaller proportion of lavender will sell, especially at Memorial day. The singles and those in hose or calycanthema varieties are much more desirable than the doubles. The flowers of the latter are so heavy that they will not hold up as the singles do.

Fuchsias.

While hardly to be classed as bedding plants, fuchsias will flower in fairly satisfactory manner all summer if planted in partial shade. They will not succeed here as in the great London parks, but are graceful and, dotted

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Hardy Perennials.

Any winter mulch will by now have been removed from hardy perennials and many of them will have made considerable growth. It will have been noticed that a heavy covering of straw or leaves does more harm than good to many plants. Bulbous plants send their tops into the mulch and are badly broken in its removal. Foxgloves simply rot away when heavily covered and about all the herbaceous plants making an early growth are seriously hurt by a thick mulch, especially when, as often happens, the ground below the mulch is soft. If it is hard frozen the damage will be much less. Loosen up the surface soil with the cultivator, hoe or fork. This, besides helping the plants, serves to kill many little weed seedlings just starting.

While autumn is the best time for transplanting the bulk of perennials, the work can also be done in spring, and where plants in pots are to be had, planting may be done at almost any time. Any varieties of somewhat doubtful hardiness, such as Japanese anemones, incarvilleas, rehmannias, tritomas (kniphofias), digitalis and pompon chrysanthemums, should now go out at once. In some latitudes these are all hardy; in others they are not. Sweet williams, rockets, Canterbury bells, Coreopsis grandiflora and other varieties which are biennials, or usually treated as such, should also go out, as well as double daisies, aubrietias, myosotis, violas, pansies and other low-growing spring flowering subjects. These latter make useful borderings and are also fine for carpeting bulb beds.

Keep the shoots of clematis protected by some evergreen boughs until late spring frosts have gone, as they are easily injured. If cuttings of perennial phlox have not yet been taken, it is not too late to root a good batch in a cool propagating house, or even coldframe. These root in a few weeks and during cool, moist weather can be planted out direct from the sand. They make one large head of flowers in late summer when the older clumps are on the wane. Pentstemons are better treated as annuals. These should now be of sufficient strength to plant out.

They do not mind a little frost. Cuttings taken in late autumn also make excellent plants. Keep young growths on lilies covered with a light mulch. The late spring frosts scorch them and cause what many believe to be a disease. L. auratum, tigrinum, speciosum and Henryi, to say nothing of other varieties, are easily injured in this way, and even the hardy L. candidum is better not exposed to biting, frosty winds once its flower spikes are pushing.

Where a batch of seeds of such subjects as delphiniums, aquilegias, Shasta daisies, lupines and other varieties were sown under glass in February and have been pricked off in flats, these will now be all right to set out in nursery rows, and any fall seedlings wintered in coldframes should also be set out. Many of these will flower nicely this season and all will make strong stock for planting in permanent beds in the fall. They are just the class of plants wanted for your customers who want a few perennials, and it is noticed that the number growing these hardy plants increases every year.

Peonies are now starting to grow. If they had a winter mulch of rotted ma-here and there, so as to rise above some lower growing plants succeeding under similar conditions, they are quite satisfactory. They are also useful in piazza or window boxes, when not too much exposed to the sun's rays. Plants in 3-inch pots should be shifted into 4-inch if they are getting potbound. These will make a popular selling size for May and June sales. Where there is a call for summer-flowering plants in pots, and at all summer resorts there is such a call, fuchsias prove extremely useful. Old plants kept over are, of course, the best if something sizable is wanted, but the young stock potted into 4-inch pots and later shifted into 6-inch pots will make pretty plants if they have one or two pinchings and are well looked after. By judicious pinching or removal of the flowers, the plants can easily be had in flower at any particular time.

Asters.

The earliest plants of Queen of the Market and Early Dawn have been in benches for some time and are now growing nicely. They want plenty of ventilation and the surface soil should be kept carefully loosened. Plants in flats should go out in nursery rows in the field as soon as weather will permit. In the meantime give them a coldframe and remove the sashes, except to ward off soaking rains and frosts. The ground in which they are to be planted should have been well manured, plowed deeply and well harrowed before the plants go out. It is no use setting asters in poor soil. If you want fine flowers, carried on long stems, they must have good soil to grow in.

While asters can be sown as late as the middle of June, the present is a good time to start a large batch of such vigorous sorts as Vick's Branching or American Branching, Semple's Giant Comet and other popular varieties. The seed can be sown outdoors, or, better still, in shallow drills in a coldframe. The outdoor sowing will be all right in the warmer states, but in more northerly latitudes a glass covering is often desirable until nearly the end of May.

Pasadena, Cal. The spring flower show of the Pasadena Gardeners' Association was opened at the amphitheater of the Hotel Maryland, April 13. The exhibition covered an acre of ground.

THE SAN FRANCISCO SHOW.

The spring show at San Francisco, March 30 to April 2, was fully reported in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review for April 13, but reference is again made to it, as the trade at large will be interested in noting the extent and the effective staging of the exhibition as shown in the accompanying illustrations. The new Fairmount hotel afforded appropriate surroundings and the skill of Angelo J. Rossi, retail florist, who was manager, was apparent in the arrangements; a retailer always has an eye to the artistic.

This was one of the most successful shows ever given on the coast, both from a financial and artistic standpoint. The general public took a tremendous interest, as the heavy attendance showed, and practically all the growers in San Francisco and vicinity aided, both by their exhibits and attendance. The weather was all that could be desired and everything was just right. The display of seasonable flowers was the finest ever seen in San Francisco, and too much credit can not be given to those who had the affair in charge. Although it was too early for much of an assortment of outside stock, with the exception of bulbs, these, with a large variety of greenhouse flowers and flowering plants, filled the large hall.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. had, in addition to the group shown in the illustration, another of palms and evergreens in tubs, which took up a large portion of the hall.

E. W. McLellan & Co. received first for collection of roses grown under glass, also for narcissi, Lilium multiflorum, Iris Hispanica, freesias, sweet peas, lilacs, fruit blossoms and Crimson Ramblers. The principal part of their exhibit, but not all, is shown in the illustration of the two groups at the head of this page.

The retailers participated strongly in this show and profited largely by it. For the most original floral design, a large hat, Stein & Levin received first award, and the second prize went to Podesta & Baldocchi. The Misses Hannon received first for a basket of cut flowers, with A. E. Warlow, Miss C. F. Williams and the Hackel Floral Co. following in rotation. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. were awarded a special for a large and comprehensive assortment of Easter suggestions.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

"The biggest Easter ever"—that's about the size of it here, and local florists are well satisfied. In the first part of the week the weather man gave us the worst of it, and prospects looked blue for us. He relented somewhat on Friday and gave us an installment of ideal spring weather, which brought out the flower buyers galore, and everybody was on the jump until Easter afternoon.

Never before has such a glorious array of blooming plants been seen here for the occasion. Rhododendrons in the various shades; lilac, both white and lavender; azaleas at their best and an extra fine lot of hydrangeas were perhaps the leaders, closely followed by astilbes and the ever popular Easter lily, which was mostly used for the church decorations. Quantities of valley, forget-me-nots and pansies, in pans and baskets and other suitable receptacles, were disposed of readily. Some Dorothy Perkins and Tausendschon roses were to be seen and they sold well. The Baby Rambler was also to be seen, but was a poor seller; the stock of this was not any too good, which may have helped to hold back the sale. Various other plants, such as geraniums, ageratums and heliotropes, were made up in pans, and seemed to be the filling in for the cheaper class of trade.

Bulbous stock was scarce at the stores, but the boys around the cemeteries were there with a good supply and they cleaned up entirely. Everything that was salable was disposed of, as the ideal weather brought out big crowds to the cemeteries, and some of the florists who cater to this trade were sold out at 3 p. m. on Easter Sunday.

It was mostly a plant Easter, but cut flowers were not far behind. Cut lilies, as usual, had a good call and were not quite as scarce as was predicted a few weeks ago. They sold at $3 and $4 per dozen. American Beauties were readily disposed of at from $6 to $18 per dozen; the supply was a little short. Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Jardine and Richmond were the best sellers in their class. Carnations cleaned up well; the supply was rather short. Orchids, gardenias and valley had a big call for corsages. Quantities of sweet peas were used up.

Business since the big event has been rushing, and stock is cleaning up well each day.

Various Notes.

The greenhouse men are busy getting their carnations into the fields and are taking advantage of every bright day. The florists around the cemeteries are busy planting ivy on the graves and setting out pansy and rose beds.

The auto seems to be "the one best bet" for the delivery of Easter stock, and several local florists hired machines.

C. L. Brunson, of Paducah, Ky., was in town last week. He has charge of the flower display at the state fair, and was here on that business.

The next monthly meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists will be held at J. B. Stuessy's East End Floral Bazaar, on Market street. K. R.

Joliet, Ill.—A. C. Rott had a large decoration at the Union club for the Easter party and got a fine notice in the society columns of the local dailies.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There has been a far better business the week following Easter than has been the case in this vicinity in many years, although the prices were far below the scale previous to Holy Week. From now on the attention of the growers will be devoted to the preparations for new stock in the field, rebenching and other similar work, while the retailers are overhauling and preparing for the Memorial day trade and the June graduations. From all sides the verdict is the same; namely, that this year's Easter business exceeded any previous year in the history of the city.

Society Meetings.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held at the rooms of the association, 98 Westminster street, Monday evening, April 17, with a good attendance. President Robert Johnston occupied the chair. An interesting discussion on the recent Boston show followed the transaction of business, and some instructive reports were received from several of the members who attended. The paper of the evening was read by James Hockey, of Pawtucket, on "Cyclamen," and was afterwards freely discussed.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society at the public library lecture room Wednesday evening, April 19, Edward A. Farrar, of South Lincoln, Mass., spoke on grape growing, and Prof. G. E. Adams gave a history of grape culture. Four names were added to the list of members.

A paper on "The Sweet Pea and Its History" was read at the regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society and generally discussed. John W. Cox, representing Veitch & Co., of London, England, was present and read a paper on "Plant History and Mythology."

Various Notes.

William Crompton, of East Greenwich, furnished the Easter decorations for three churches in his town.

Oren Smith, of Pawtucket, had sixteen funeral pieces one day recently and reports being especially busy the last few months.

Miss Anna Urquhart, bookkeeper, and her sister, Miss Christina Urquhart, clerk, for Gibson Bros., Newport, are enjoying a vacation among relatives in New York.

S. W. Smith, representing Thomas W. Emerson & Co., of Boston, was a visitor in this city last week.

Ralph Armstrong, manager for Wadley & Smythe, of Newport, who recently underwent an operation, has returned to active business again, fully recovered.

John W. Gibson, of Gibson Bros., of Newport, is suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism.

The plan for a new street on the east side of Providence is of more than passing interest to W. E. Barrett & Co., from the fact that the project contemplates the removal of the building on Canal street which that firm has occupied for more than two decades.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, presented the operatives of the East Providence telephone exchange with potted Easter lilies at Easter.

James McLeish has been appointed by Mayor P. J. Boyle, of Newport, as a member of the park commission of that city.

A. Chorard, of Pawtucket, furnished the Easter decorations for the Polish church at Central Falls, using more than 3,000 roses and 500 lilies. Potted wisterias, ferns and bulbous stock were also used.

The annual fruit, flower and plant exhibition of the Newport Horticultural Society will be held June 22 and 23.

BOSTON.

The Market.

For a few days after Easter cut flower trade was exceptionally good, nearly everything cleaning up well, in marked contrast to the preceding week, which was one of the poorest of the year in cut flowers. Weddings and funerals of quite a number of prominent people used up large quantities of flowers, but this demand has now to some extent ceased and conditions are much less favorable. Carnations are still in oversupply and prices not what they should be. The quality is exceptionally good. Quite a few Fair Maids are now arriving, but Pink Delight and Enchantress are still excellent. Roses are in good supply and inclined to be druggery. Prices are down so that the street fakers are able to handle a good many. Richmond is now of fine quality and the Beauty crop is good. There is still a good call for Mrs. Aaron Ward and the Killarneys.

Violets are on their last legs. There are still some few singles, but most of the arrivals are doubles. Sweet peas are selling as well as anything on the market. They are seen in large quantities and of grand quality. Countess Spencer nets the fanciest prices. Bulbous flowers hold out well and the cold weather just suits the specialists in these flowers. Narcissi and tulips are averaging as much as carnations in price, if fancies are excepted. Large-flowered gladioli are not selling well, but Peach Blossom moves much better. Liliun longiflorum and L. candidum and callas are abundant and lower. Cattleya Mossiae is now relieving the temporary scarcity of cattleyas. Valley is abundant, but not selling so well. Marguerites, primroses and bachelor's buttons are all good sellers. Green stock is in good demand.

Pot plant trade remains fairly good. All the specialists in these report an exceptionally fine Easter trade. Quite a few geraniums, pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots and other bedding plants are now to be seen and, but for the unprecedentedly cold April weather, frosts almost nightly and frequent snow storms, business in them would be more active.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting held April 25, which had been postponed for one week, attracted an attendance of 150, which is good for such a busy season. The reports of Thomas Pegler and Peter Fisher on entertainment of the S. A. F. National Show visitors was of a satisfactory nature, showing all bills paid and a balance of nearly $500 on hand. Many congratulatory letters had been received for courtesies extended. The report was received with enthusiastic applause and it was voted to place $600 in a permanent entertainment fund for future similar occasions. A letter from John Young, secretary of the New York Florists' Club, was read, thanking the club for the entertainment of its members at the late show.

The lecturer of the evening was B. Hammond Tracy, of Cedar Acres Farms, Wenham, Mass., on "The Gladiolus and Its Culture." Mr. Tracy gave an interesting and eminently practical talk, covering the whole field of gladiolus culture. An excellent discussion followed the lecture. The membership list again received a big addition, no less than twelve names being added. Exhibits were unusually attractive, including: Lilium candidum from W. N. Craig, Choisya ternata from W. R. Thornhill, Prunus Davidiana from J. Van Leeuwen, fine Campbell and Princess of Wales violets from H. F. Woods, double callas from David Weir, and gladioli from Peter Fisher. E. H. Wilson, just back from China, gave a short talk. Refreshments were served as usual.

Various Notes.

Richmond roses of extra fine quality were reported by Thomas Pegler as coming from H. W. Field, of Northampton. Bon Silene, White Killarney, Bridesmaid and Killarney, all well grown, come from the same grower.

W. A. Riggs, of Auburndale, who has had the market practically to himself on the large-flowered gladioli, also had the first flowers of Peach Blossom, April 21.

Herman Waldecker, of Braintree, is in the market with a fine lot of pink lupines, which sell well. His Spanish irises are also first-class in quality.

Lemoine Bros., of South Framingham, are shipping to the Boston Flower Exchange good antirrhinums and pink lupines, and among carnations their Pink Delights are conspicuous.

Inquiries among carnation specialists elicit the information that sales of rooted cuttings have this season been heavier than ever and about everyone has had to refuse numbers of late orders.

Edward Ahern, of Wellesley, is a specialist in English primroses, of which he has large daily arrivals at the Boston Co-operative Market.

The best Lilium candidum I have seen this season, the true broad-petaled type, are being handled by J. M. Cohen for W. S. Phelps, of Marlboro, whose snapdragons are also of grand quality.

Sales of glass indicate more building near Boston this season than in a number of years.

J. F. Flood, of Woburn, is marketing well flowered fibrous begonias and rhododendrons.

A. G. Lake, of Wellesley, is having good success with his carnations this season. Fair Maid he does remarkably well. Asters are a great specialty of Mr. Lake's later in the season.

F. R. Pierson was a visitor in town last week. He is well pleased with the outcome of the National Flower Show.

W. A. Hastings and E. Allan Peirce April 21 put it all over Fred Becker and A. M. Davenport at bowling. The quartette heartily enjoyed an excellent supper supplied by the losers. It is not unlikely that Boston will have a bowling team at Baltimore. It is quite a few years since the Hub had a bowling team at any convention.

S. J. Goddard, among his other specialties, is now cutting some good Dendrobium Jamesianum. This dendrobe has large white flowers similar to those of D. Formosum giganteum.

Osgood Bros., of Everett, are one of the local pansy specialists whose flowers are of an excellent strain and quality. Their Fair Maid carnations are now coming good. These are handled by E. J. Rogean, at the Boston Flower Exchange.

Evergreens have suffered severely during the winter in this section. Many rhododendrons are killed and others badly scorched. Hemlock spruces, especially young stock, are quite brown, as are many white pines and other varieties. Dryness at the root when the ground froze up and the succession of cutting winds in March are mainly responsible for the damage.

Julius H. Zinn is showing a nice batch of Anthurium Scherzerianum, commonly called the flamingo plant, in his window, also an excellent assortment of ericas, including the waxy type.

Penn's last week had an extra busy time with wedding and funeral orders.

Counter trade continues heavy at the seed stores. The season has been an erratic and not altogether satisfactory one, even though the volume of business has been large. W. N. Craig.

W. R. Finlay has opened a new flower store at 175 Federal street, the nearest flower store to the Terminal station. He has been twenty years in the trade.

YONKERS, N. Y.

A meeting of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held Friday, April 21, and as usual proved interesting. H. Scott assumed his presidential duties and received a hearty welcome. Three new members, Messrs. Rennison, Grey and Wood, were elected. Discussion centered principally on vegetables, both early and late, many interesting points being made clear. The society's regular social session will be observed Friday, May 5, and Messrs. Milliot, Cochran and Blanche were appointed to make arrangements. H. M. B.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Holton & Hunkel Co. say that their experience has been the general one with Beauties this season: After an extremely light cut ever since the big Christmas crops, the latter part of April has brought about the largest and finest crop they ever have cut.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Charles Limmer has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $5,128 and assets of about $6,000, including mortgaged real estate. Among the creditors are Brant Bros., $76; Frank McGowan, $137, Utica, and the Wanoka Greenhouses, at Barneveld, $522.

East Lansdowne, Pa.—Harry A. Leech is erecting a range of strictly up-to-date greenhouses on the land adjoining his property on Baltimore avenue. He has been in the florists' trade for a good many years and will have ready use for all the stock he can grow in the new houses.

Elmira, N. Y.—The United States Cut Flower Co. is building an addition which will contain 40,000 square feet of glass. The size of the range, which already comprises thirty-six houses, will thus be increased about twenty per cent. Aside from these building operations, the firm has been exceedingly busy.

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held a well attended and enthusiastic meeting at Kolb's German Tavern, April 20. President Richard Eichling opened the meeting, with Secretary C. R. Panter at his desk.

The feature of the evening was a paper read by P. A. Chopin, one of the older members of the society, on "Store Management of the Retail Florist in New Orleans." The lecturer has a thorough knowledge of the management of a modern flower store and the art of catering to the demands of some of the most critical buyers in the city. He gave some interesting and valuable information in regard to handling cut flowers, designs, etc., laying particular stress on the prompt and careful delivery of all orders. He deplored the fact that, although some good roses and carnations are grown in the south, an enormous amount of money is sent every year from this city to the north for cut flowers. He advocated the establishment of a large plant in the city for wholesale purposes only, thus enabling the local florists to buy a great part of their necessary stock at home and thereby get it fresher and at lower prices than when shipped from other places. He mentioned that during the last season he used almost entirely southern-grown roses, which gave better satisfaction all around than the northern-grown, but stated that the supply is not equal to the demand. In his concluding remarks, which were impressive and valuable, he stated that when orders are filled and delivered, the debtors should immediately receive a statement and the outstanding accounts should be collected as soon as possible, instead of delaying and thereby making the customers indifferent.

At the end of his paper Mr. Chopin was greeted with warm applause, and a general discussion followed.

The many reports on the Easter trade were highly satisfactory and it was pointed out that the home-grown Easter lilies were of a much better quality than those shipped from other states.

Frank Quinette and John Reekes were elected members of the society.

Harry Papworth, president of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., exhibited a large vase of beautiful Golden Glow chrysanthemums, cut from plants grown in 5-inch pots. These were the first chrysanthemums ever shown here in bloom at this time of the year, and the exhibitor was on all sides congratulated on his success.

P. Betz brought a bunch of well grown, long-stemmed mixed sweet peas, which were pronounced the best seen here lately.

W. B. Cleves, with A. T. Boddington, New York city, was a guest and gave an interesting talk on the different nurseries visited on his way here. He intends to make New Orleans his home indefinitely.

Various Notes.

J. A. Newsham returned from a visit to the National Flower Show at Boston, which he attended from beginning to end. He spoke of it most highly, both in regard to the exhibits and the artistic arrangement; at the same time his booking for orchid shipments was quite satisfactory. R. E.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

WITH this issue The Review reaches the venerable age of 700 weeks.

ONE of the most hopeful signs of the times is the growing tendency of the retail florists to use advertising space in their local papers.

THE whole country has been heavily stocked with cut flowers since Easter, most of the wholesale markets being decidedly overstocked.

E. H. WILSON, widely known as a plant explorer, has returned from his second trip to China for Harvard Botanic Garden, his journey being cut short by the accident with which he met early on the trip.

RIGHT away after Easter wholesale cut flower dealers began receiving inquiries and orders for Mothers' day—not alone for white carnations, but for other colors, for the trade realizes only a fraction of the demand can be supplied if white alone is pushed.

It appears that the Mothers' day articles in this week's issue of The Review should have appeared last issue, for every delivery of mail this week has brought inquiries about "When is Mothers' day?" and within the last day or two the inquiries have been coming by telegraph.

THE WEATHER FORECAST.

The weather bureau in the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., will furnish free of charge to any shipper of perishable stock a daily sheet of weather forecast, with a case for filing them in. These reports give forecasts for the next twenty-four hours—the maximum and minimum thermometer and the thermometer during the last twenty-four hours at some 140 stations throughout the country, and other information of value to long distance shippers. These reports are furnished daily.

OBITUARY.

Edward A. Moseley.

Edward A. Moseley, best known to the country in general as secretary of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the originator of much labor legislation, but intimately known to many florists as a horticultural enthusiast and a life member of the Society of American Florists, died at his home in Washington, D. C., April 18, after a long illness. The immediate cause of death was heart failure, superinduced by acute kidney disease. Funeral services were held at Washington, April 20, and the body was taken to Newburyport, Mass., where he was born sixty-five years ago, for burial.

As an intimate friend and personal adviser of presidents, cabinet officers, representatives, senators and other public officials during the last quarter of a century, Mr. Moseley accomplished notable results, particularly along humanitarian and philanthropic lines. He was recognized as an authority upon all measures designed to insure the safety of railway employees and travelers, and was instrumental in securing the enactment of laws requiring the use by railways of safety devices. In recognition of these services he received the thanks of the legislature of Massachusetts and of practically all the great railway labor organizations.

Mr. Moseley was a thirty-second degree Mason, former president of the American-Irish Historical Society, member of the Society of the Cincinnati, Society of Colonial Wars, Sons of the Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution, American Economic Association, American Academy of Social and Political Science, American Geographical Society, American Institute of Civics, and was secretary of the National Association of Railroad Commissioners.

D. D. Beebe.

Dickerman D. Beebe, for many years employed by S. J. Reuter & Son at Westerly, R. I., died April 17. He had been ill since last September. Many beautiful decorations were sent to his funeral by local florists.

Ernest Schacht.

Ernest Schacht, who was employed by Anton Schultheis at College Point, N. Y., died at the Flushing hospital April 17, at the age of 35 years. He was born in Northeim, Hanover, Germany, and had no relatives living in this country.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Chicago is, indeed, a great market, but its capacities nevertheless are not equal to the profitable marketing of the enormous quantity of flowers now being received. Practically everyone connected with the trade in Chicago agrees that the production since Easter has been the heaviest ever known here, and the quantities of each day's receipts have been far above the possibilities of any legitimate sale; while the regular channels are moving large quantities of stock, it is necessary to dispose of the bulk of the arrivals by means of job lot sales at low figures. It is pulling the growers' averages down to a point lower than anything heretofore recorded this year, and below the values which prevailed at this date last season.

It is a great deal easier to comment on the items that are scarce, or in good demand, than to catalogue the ones that are in oversupply. At the opening of the present week valley was the principal scarcity, but the shortage is likely to be relieved before the end of the week, as it often has been noted that the principal demand for this article is in the early days of the week. The opening of the week also found red carnations in active demand, although there were uncounted thousands of white, and especially of Enchantress, for which no acceptable offer could be had. Smilax also was on the short side and prices asked ranged from $2 to $3 per dozen. Aside from these items the best selling flower on the list was the sweet pea. The popularity of the sweet pea seems due to a combination of several causes. In the first place, the peas now coming in are exceptionally fine; they are a far different article from the sweet pea of only a few years ago. Also, the practical departure of the

THOSE WHO WANT FANCY BEAUTIES

WILL FIND THEM HERE IN QUANTITY.

Our cut of Beauties has so increased that we are now able to fill orders of any size without notice. Send a wire and we ship the Beauties by next train, any length in any quantity. These are the very finest quality; splendid color, every petal perfect, big heads—in fact, Beauties that are as near right as one ever sees them.

We are anxious for every first-class store to try them.

KILLARNEYS

These also are Extra Fine.

Both Killarney and White Killarney are in heavy crop with us and the quality is right up to the top notch—we never saw better roses than these. Any length stem can be supplied. Splendid stock in the shorter grades—but buyers should not forget that the longest buds are on the longest stems. Considering quality and the prices here quoted, we think this stock offers the most for the money we ever have known in the rose line.

CARNATIONS

We hear it said on all sides that carnations are deteriorating rapidly, that they are not so good as they were a short time ago. We want to say that the quality of our Carnations is ahead of anything this market ever has seen so late in spring; the stock is right up to midwinter grade. The crop is at its heaviest and we can supply the very finest stock in lots of 5,000 to 10,000 as promptly as smaller orders are filled.

SWEET PEAS

THE "BUTTERFLIES" ARE BEGINNING TO ARRIVE.

For years we have been headquarters for Sweet Peas, but we never have had at this date such fine stock as now. All the fancy colors as well as white and pink. We are shipping these Peas, fresh picked, in great quantities and they never fail to give buyers the best of satisfaction.

Iris

Spanish Iris in all colors; fine for corsages, table work and many other uses.

Place orders with us for home-grown Orchids and Gardenias.

Snaps

Fancy long Snapdragon in all colors, but specially fine is the fancy pink, just the Killarney shade.

Valley

Fine Valley is something you need every day in the year. We always have it.

Lilies

Remember, we have fine Easter Lilies in quantity, not only at Easter, but every day in the year.

violet has resulted in peas being used extensively for corsage work. A good run of wedding work also makes a special demand for peas, as these are largely used for wedding bunches. Cattleyas also are one of the items on which there is no oversupply.

Beauties have arrived in large quantities and with most of the growers the quality is extremely fine. Prices are unusually low, considering that the stock is of such high grade. The supply is not only equal to the demand, but a little bit ahead of it. There are so many long, fancy Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond that the values of the special grades are low. At the same time, a large part of the rose receipts are short-stemmed and slow sale. It is impossible to clean up. Those who have large runs of funeral work are not losing any money.

Except for red carnations, the market is glutted. Last week there was a fair clean-up Friday night for the special Saturday sales, but the next day's receipts again overstocked the market and the condition has prevailed ever since. It is the general complaint that the quality has gone down grade rapidly in the last week.

Some of the wholesalers say they already count the days to the end of the glut of Easter lilies, but others have not yet been able to see daylight. It is doubtful if lilies ever have sold so low in Chicago as in the last week, though it should be said that the worst of the prices one hears told of have been made on stock that had been held so long that it really was scarcely usable. Callas are simply immovable. Bulbous stock is rapidly passing and violets are nearly gone. Large quantities of Spanish iris are received and are selling better than when yellow flowers were so abundant. The market is well supplied with fancy antirrhinum.

The green goods market is quiet, except for the flurry in smilax.

Flower Growers' Market.

With the end of the present week the Flower Growers' Co. will cease to be an active factor in the distribution of cut flowers, but the charter will not be surrendered. While not doing business, the corporation will have an office with Sinner Bros., who are removing to 82 and 86 East Randolph street. John Sinner is secretary. The Flower Growers' Co. was organized in 1902 and opened its market at the corner of Randolph street and Wabash avenue January 6, 1903. The corporation was operated with the prime object of affording a place for its stockholders to sell their own stock, but during the time that Percy Jones was manager a dividend was paid equal to the amount originally paid in on the stock, so that there really is no investment and the money now in the treasury is profit.

Of those now occupying space in the market, the Batavia Greenhouse Co. is removing to the store at 30 East Randolph street recently vacated by J. A. Budlong; D. E. Freres and Hertha V. Tonner are removing to Room 222 on the second floor of the Atlas block and connecting with the new store of the Chicago Carnation Co., while Sinner Bros., M. C. Gunterberg, A. E. Hunt & Co., Hunt Bros., S. Wiffin and H. C. Blewitt are removing to 82, 84 and 86

East Randolph street, where they will occupy the south half of the floor recently leased by J. A. Budlong. Percy Jones has taken the lease on the entire floor occupied these last eight years by the Flower Growers' Market, and also has bought the ice-box and most of the tabling, which gives rise to the belief that the part of the big room not required for the Jones business still will be used for flower market purposes, though Henry Van Gelder, manager for Percy Jones, states that he is not ready to make any announcement. The Market.

On all sides there was gratification over the Easter results. Few complaints were made by either the growers or the dealers. Both plant and cut flower trade thrived equally well.

In the retail stores a few plants were left unsold, but they amount to but little as compared with the number sold, and no one is disposed to grumble. The varieties were, as a rule, the same as we have seen in former years, and the demand did not vary materially as to choice from that of last season. Azaleas sold especially well in the smaller sizes. In hydrangeas a decided revival was noticed, and both large and small ones were in demand. The demand for violets was insatiable. Hyacinths and tulips seemed to sell extra well. Large pans of these and of daffodils had a remarkably good sale. Tulips were exceedingly poor this season, as many came blind; some growers had thousands that never showed bud.

Thursday and Friday were cold and cloudy, with rain on Friday and till 9 o'clock on Saturday morning, when it cleared off and everything was hustle and bustle.

For the reason that there was a great and pressing demand for cut lilies, which could only be partly supplied, thousands were sold in pots, but were exceedingly dwarf. Carnations were of excellent quality and cut a big figure, and there were more of these sold this year than ever before. The supply was large and the quality of every shipment could hardly have been better. ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market during the week following Easter was in a condition of over-supply. Every wholesale house was loaded down with all kinds of stock and, judging from the buying done by the retailers, trade was not heavy. The bulk of the sales was in white stock, so there must have been plenty of funeral designs to work up.

The uptown store men have about completed repairing the damage caused by the hail storm and their show houses are again filled with blooming and decorative plants. The downtown florists say they have had a splendid week in transient trade. Sweet peas are carried in great lots. The wholesalers say that the demand was quite good on carnations, sweet peas and roses, but, as all of them were loaded down with these, the sales were far from clean.

In lilies, Harrisii, candidums and auratum are most plentiful. Callas are almost a glut. Valley, tulips and snapdragons are of fine quality. All greens are plentiful and sell well.

Various Notes.

Monday, May 1, the St. Louis Retail Florists' Association will hold its monthly meeting in Knights of Columbus hall at 8 p. m. President Sanders says there are a few important questions to be disposed of and he wants a full attendance.

A. Miller, representing the Skidelsky & Irwin Co., Philadelphia, spent part of last week with the trade on his way home from a successful southern trip.

James J. Karins, of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, spent his Easter in St. Louis in company with his friend, Frank A. Weber. Mr. Weber is surely "It" when it comes to entertaining.

have read "Tulip exhibition free at Shaw's Garden," caused a great deal of trouble to Superintendent H. C. Irish when women flocked out with baskets to get free tulips. A great deal of explaining had to be done before the ladies contented themselves by viewing the display of tulips, which was surely a grand sight.

Fred H. Weber says he received 1,500 cut lilies from Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, for his Easter business, and they came in good condition and of the best quality. His Easter business was the best he has yet had.

E. W. Guy, A. S. Halstead, A. Fehr, G. W. Grossart and Henry Emunds, of Belleville, all say their Easter trade was fully up to expectations, and they had to call on the St. Louis market for extra supplies of stock.

The east side florists all had a splendid Easter trade. Both plants and cut stock sold well.

William C. Young, head of C. Young & Sons Co.'s greenhouse plant, says the firm's loss from the recent hail storm will exceed $25,000. Of their 90,000 feet of glass, 90 per cent was broken by the hail. The loss of plants was large.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, who is a director in the Florists' Hail Association, came over last week to take a look at the damage done to the houses of the local and suburban florists by the hail. Mr. Ammann himself lost 500 square feet by the same storm. The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. bought all the glass for its consignors at Kirkwood. Mr. Smith says all Kirkwood florists are busy this week repairing the damage done by hail, wind and rain.

The trustees of the Florists' Club, Messrs. Guy, Bentzen and Ostertag, accompanied by Chas. Schoenle and G. B. Windler, will meet with the club's officers some day this week at Smith's wholesale store and perfect arrangements for the celebration of the club's twenty-fifth anniversary. A full report of this meeting will be made at the club meeting, May 11.

The fine weather all last week gave the plantmen at Union Market a great deal of business. The St. Louis Seed Co. and Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., close to the market, say they were obliged to put on extra help before Easter and have kept them all busy. Hardy shrubs are better this year than ever before.

Mrs. Buechel, of the Riessen Floral Co., says Easter plant business was heavy. Their business last week was also heavy, with a large demand for good sized funeral designs. Edward Buechel was hurt by a fall last week and is just about able to be about with the aid of crutches.

The orchard owners of Missouri had a meeting at Columbia, Mo., and there decided that the Ben Davis apple will have to go to make room for better varieties. The orchardists of the state are top-grafting the Ben Davis with Grimes' Golden, Jonathan and King David. In this state there are 30,000,000 apple trees and seventy-five per cent of them are of the Ben Davis variety. The Coburn method is being used in grafting.

Fire broke out Saturday afternoon, April 22, in the National Clock & Electric Mfg. Co.'s plant at 2207 Pine street, causing damage to the amount of $25,000. President Bolin, of the

Each year from May 1 to May 20 we book orders for Peonies for Decoration Day delivery at the guaranteed price of $5.00 per 100.

This is for first-class stock, pink and white, mixed—and in the last days of May this stock for the last two years has sold at from $8.00 to $10.00 per 100, or about twice what was paid by those who ordered early.

A good many people have asked us why we take these advance orders at the low price.

The answer is: Because we handle such an immense quantity of Peonies for Decoration Day that it would be utterly impossible to move the quantity if no advance orders were taken; because an assured outlet for many thousands of dozens has given us a firm and usually rising market just before the holiday. Advance orders guarantee to us the success of our busiest week in the year.

Advance orders booked with us guarantee, also, several things to our customers. First, they are assured their supply. Second, they are guaranteed as to price. If the price makes our customers a saving, we are glad of it and welcome all, but it is of equal importance to a Retailer to be sure of his supply and cost. Then he can sell with confidence.

Remember, May 20 is the last day for booking advance orders at the guaranteed price.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There has been a heavy increase in the shipments of cut flowers coming into the market. Business is good for the end of April, but the load of flowers is greater than the market can bear. Prices have broken badly in places and are lower on all but a few varieties, while the poorer grades beg.

Two points stand out strongly: The abundance of Beauties and the scarcity of valley. Beauties have fallen to $3 per dozen, a price that buys the best. The production has trebled within the last week. The buyers, so long accustomed to their scarcity, cannot yet use them at the tempting prices of today, though they are the cheapest roses offered, value considered. Valley, on the other hand, is scarce. Brisk demand consumed an excellent stock that would have been thought too large a few years ago. Extra shipments were required April 22, leaving the market bare at the opening of business April 24. The stock has been fine, a fact that stimulates the usual wedding demand.

The rose growers are on crop to a man, to judge from the receipts. A good part of the cut is sold at moderate figures; the balance, open, short, cull, is sold when ingenuity suggests a way, at figures that are only tolerated when compared with the alternative loss.

Carnations are not so abundant as roses, but there are more than enough of them to meet all demands, actual and created. Unlike roses, the white are in greater favor than the pink. Easter lilies, the left-overs and behind-hands, are a sore trial to grower and wholesaler. Those wanted are few compared with those here. It will take orders and it will take time to straighten out the Easter lily market.

Sweet peas in all grades meet with what would be considered a good demand, except when compared with the activity of a week ago. Prices have moderated. Cattleyas remain scarce and high. Violets are still obtainable. Gardenias seem neglected. Pansies and good yellow daisies find favor, but nobody is anxious for white daisies. Narcissus poeticus, the last of the daffs from the sunny south, is here. Northern grown Emperor and Bicolor have reappeared. White lilac is in demand. Snapdragon is increasing; good colors are preferred by the buyers—they will not take poor colors or poor stock. Asparagus plumosus sprays are wanted. More smilax could be used.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

At last the springtime has arrived. Winter lingered until April 23. Saturday was a cold and rainy end to the worst after-Easter week the New York market has ever known. There was no possibility of moving the stock arriving.

The warm weather of the beginning of this week continues the large shipments of every kind of stock with the exception of valley and orchids. These alone hold at the prices of Easter. Of roses the supply is enormous and only the Brunners and the new varieties command any price worthy of record. Only the best of the Beauties brought any price, and 15 cents was top, with the surplus of the top grade falling at times to 10 cents and even lower. The trouble with the whole market is that the supply is far in excess of the demand, and there seems to be no prospect of immediate relief. All other roses, especially Killarneys and Maids, have been selling since Easter at about any offer sufficient to cover the cost of expressage and commissions. The accumulations were beyond all former experience and, while no reasonable offer of the buyers was refused, the problem hardest to solve was how to induce any offer, so slow was the demand.

There are more carnations, too, than the market can digest, and $20 per thousand included the finest stock in the market, while great quantities of the surplus fell to $10 and even at times to $5 per thousand. Lilies, including callas, were top at 5 cents, and there seems to be no end to them. Many were offering them April 22 at $25 per thousand. A good deal of the arrivals are short-stemmed, but perfect heads. The Bermuda stock was no factor in affecting prices. Most of it was damaged and unsalable at any price.

There is a big call for valley; weddings are numerous since Lent ended, and there is not enough to go around. The asking price all the week was 4 cents for good stock, and so remains. Orchids, too, are holding strong at 75 cents for selects, with the best of the cattleyas at the even dollar. The specialists in these and valley are the only optimists. Good gardenias have fallen to $1 a dozen, and the street salesmen are disposing of the surplus, much of which is of inferior quality.

Smilax is scarce for the first time this season, and good stock has sold readily at $2 a dozen. All other green goods have stiffened in price. Stocks, daisies, hyacinths and daffodils are all abundant. Grand sweet peas are accumulating and prices are low, except for the long-stemmed and new varieties. The less said of violets the better. The street men were selling them April 22 at 10 cents a bunch. This week will probably end the violet shipments for the season. The continued cold of April was a blessing in disguise to many of the smaller growers up the Hudson.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Weather conditions about Pittsburg have not been such as would help the retail business, and Saturday, April 22, was one of the worst days we have experienced. It was dark as night until about noon and rained all day. However, all things considered, the trade held up quite well. There has been considerable funeral work and quite a few weddings, but the decorations were not extensive.

The wholesalers are getting about as much stock as they can dispose of. Sweet peas are coming in poor, and there are more lilies than are needed. Violets still arrive in fair condition and there are quantities of American Beauties, peas, roses and carnations. Sales do not clean up stock, but nevertheless are considered satisfactory.

Schenley Park Show.

The flower show at Schenley park will close this week, and it is safe to say that 100,000 is a low estimate of the number who visited the show in the two weeks it has been open. Superintendent George Burke and his foreman, John Jones, deserve a great deal of

One large group, 30x100 feet, of Cineraria stellata and hybrida was a sight not to be forgotten, as the collection of varieties was fine. Extra fine groups of amaryllis in variety, calceolaria, primula, wistaria and Spiraea Japonica filled another house.

A large house of azaleas and genistas are still fine at this writing. One large group of Begonia Verschaffeltii made a mass of color and filled the house with the peculiar odor of that flower. The house of hybrid roses, which seemed low. These are fine sorts, especially for show purposes.

A collection of orchids in bloom never failed to attract, and the large palm house had been touched up and replanted in part and never before looked so well.

These shows are a great education, as is evidenced by the number who visit them, and they certainly help the retailers.

Various Notes.

Usually carnations are out in the field in this section by this time, but there have been none planted so far this year.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

ARNOLD RINGIER, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is on the Pacific coast.

FREE seeds for Canada are one step nearer. The lower house of Congress has passed the reciprocity measure.

THE weather has been too cool and wet for heavy counter trade, but last week the rush began in good earnest.

WM. REHM, formerly a retail florist at New Orleans, is now American traveler for L. Daehnfeldt, seed grower at Odense, Denmark.

THIS will go on record as one of the most peculiar seasons the seed trade has had; calculations have been upset time after time.

REPORTS from Lansing, Mich., record the filing there of incorporation papers for the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, Ill., and Portland, Mich.; capital stock, $150,000.

CARLOS JENSEN, manager of the export department for L. Daehnfeldt, Odense, Denmark, was at Salt Lake City April 22 on his way to Portland and other points on the Pacific coast.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has just issued Farmers' Bulletin No. 433, "Cabbage," by L. C. Corbett, that contains a strong recommendation for the use of the best seed that can be bought.

THE wholesale seedsmen are having their own troubles with the fill-in orders that are coming in, usually marked "Rush." A good many items are on the sold out lists of wholesalers as well as retailers.

IN the Holland bulb districts March was an exceptionally cool month, so that the forward season was set back and almost normal conditions introduced. The hyacinths were out for Easter, but only some of the early tulips. The end of April finds the bulb fields just coming into their glory.

THERE was a largely attended hearing at Albany, April 19, on the Gregg pure seed bill, No. 834, published in full in The Review for April 13. The trade throughout the state was well represented. A united protest was filed against the bill, backed by specific objection to the several inimical features, and the matter now is in the hands of the Committee on Agriculture.

J., on Oct. 27, 1910, writes as follows: "I want to state that your three grades of poultry food—Chick Starter, Developing Food and 'Square Deal' Scratch or Poultry Food—stand without an equal today. They are perfect mixtures and sound in grain and a pleasure to handle."

part, being accompanied with snowstorms and heavy floods, but hardly covered the ground with us the whole winter.

"It is many years ago since we had such a mild and dry winter season. All biennial roots and plants are in fine condition and give a good outlook upon an average crop. But at time of writing this we have a severe frost, which will do much harm to the young cauliflower plants, just brought in the field some days ago and not yet acclimatized to resist such an unexpected frost. It is, however, not to say now what influence it will have on the general crop. Cabbage is doing well up to this moment and the acreage of it is rather extensive.

"Most of the biennial and perennial flowers give a fair appearance, though we have not a large acreage of them.

"Beets, sprouts, kale, turnip and swedes are looking well and seem to be not damaged by the latest frost."

SELECTION FOR STOCK.

The Danish government has given official encouragement to seed growers with a view to improving the strains of stock seed. L. Daehnfeldt, of Odense, recently prepared, at the request of the University of Washington, an account of the methods of selection now in vogue, from which the following is quoted:

"After having planted or sowed an area of many acres with plants or roots from a recognized first-class stock, 150 of those in every respect most perfect plants or roots are selected. These plants must be kept carefully through the winter, planted out next spring with a good distance, and marked each with a number.

"In the course of the summer they will carry seed, and as soon as this is ripe it must be reaped separately from every plant and provided with the respective number. The selected 150 specimens are then planted in the coming year to see if the progeny of the good ancestors have inherited their good qualities. Here it often is found that with an excellent individual the progeny is bad, and it is therefore evident that the inheritable capability is of the greatest importance.

"The seed of the 150 families is then sown out next spring in one or two rows of each, and beside each other. The soil must be entirely homogeneous and the distance between the rows and the plants must be the same all over the parcel, so as to guard against any of the trials having an advantage over the others. The growth of all these trials must be watched closely during

Originally introduced by us from South Carolina in 1850 and annually grown for over sixty years under the zero winter temperature of Bloomsdale Farms, the Landreth's strain of Seven Top has obtained, by this northern culture, a hardiness not approached by southern-grown seed. All inferences would point that way, while thousands of experiments have conclusively proven it beyond a shadow of doubt; consequently, one pound of Landreth's Seven Top will in the dead of winter produce more greens than can be cut from three times the more delicate southern-grown Seven Top.

In the autumn the cabbage, roots, or those other plants which are cultivated for this purpose, are taken up and placed in rows on the field and then every number is described in the register and character is given for the different qualities, for example: form, greatness, top, root, firmness, color, height, health, etc., etc., and at last all the specimens of each number are counted, gathered in heaps and weighed, always each number separately.

"The different root sorts must still bear a close examination in a special laboratory in order to substantiate which number is in possession of the highest percentage of nutritive value. This value is multiplied with the number's increase in bulk and the worth of the roots is subsequently defined in weight of dry matter per acre. As regards the cabbage, the heads must be divided by cutting to decide firmness and color; in celeries the whiteness of the flesh is of the greatest importance, and in every sort there are a lot of little things which must be counted, and many good qualities which it is of great consequence to unite in one specimen.

In the 1911 Farm Annual, W. Atlee Burpee & Co. say of Copenhagen Market cabbage:

"This superb new cabbage created quite a sensation at Fordhook Farms during the past season. One visitor, who came from Illinois especially to visit our trial grounds, said he could easily sell forty pounds of the seed at $10 per pound to his neighboring market gardeners. It is undoubtedly without a rival, as the finest large, round-headed early cabbage in cultivation. The type is thoroughly fixed, the heads maturing all at the same time (this being a great consideration to market gardeners, entailing less labor in harvesting the crop and allowing the ground to be cleared at the first cutting). The heads average about ten pounds each in weight, are very solid, with small core, and of fine quality. It matures as early as Charleston Wakefield and will give a much heavier yield per acre

WESTERLY, R. I.

The Market.

There has been a great deal of sickness here this winter, and partly for that reason the local florists have been kept exceedingly busy. They report having a first-class Easter.

Various Notes.

Dickerman D. Beebe, for many years employed by S. J. Reuter & Son, died at his home April 17. He had been in poor health since last September. Many beautiful floral pieces were sent by the local florists.

S. J. Reuter & Son are shipping daily large quantities of roses to their Boston store.

Conrad Schultz reports a fine Easter trade. He is shipping daily to New York city.

The Westerly Burial Co. has removed from 46 Main street to 40 Main street. Mr. Noyes, the manager, says business was much better than expected. He sells flowers for S. J. Reuter & Son.

The window in the St. Claire ice cream parlor, used by Conrad Schultz as a branch store, looked exceedingly attractive during the Easter week.

Mrs. E. S. Bavier, of Meriden, has been the guest of her parents.

Victor Scholboe, for the last few years employed by S. J. Reuter & Son, has erected a small greenhouse on Beach street and has started to grow lily of Sometimes we receive unsolicited testimonials pertaining to Horseshoe Brand bulbs, of which the following letter from Messrs. Hall & Robinson, Montreal, Canada, is an example:

Dear Sirs:—Just at this time of the year, when Easter lilies hold command, we think is the time to criticise or exploit the quality of the bulbs supplied the florists by the respective dealers. So we just want to tell you that we are delighted with the quality of bulbs supplied by your firm—Giganteum especially. Our entire stock will average 7½ blooms per plant and the plants average 2 ft. high. They are the best lot of lilies we ever had at Easter time since we have been in business. Hoping you will be able to maintain this high standard, we are,

Yours truly,

Hall & Robinson,

(Per G. A. Robinson.)

April 10th, 1911.

Besides the above letter, we have many other extracts. You will find by inquiring throughout the country that there is no other brand which will average as high a standard of merit as the Horseshoe Brand. When you want good bulbs, please write us.

All the Finest Fancy

LONG DISTANCE SHIPMENTS ARE OUR SPECIALTY—RANDALL'S FLORISTS

Of course, we shall be glad to hear from any Florist now buying Cut Flowers in Chicago who isn't quite satisfied with the service we have served the Trade, we think the present volume of our business proves it, and we are pleased to be put to every test. But we are sure because they don't have their own supply and haven't realized how quickly they can get what they want from Chicago—by wire from Chicago who could add largely to their profits by sending us a wire whenever orders are offered and they haven't got the stock of Roses, Carnations, or novelties such as are not obtainable in smaller markets. Inquiries are invited.

BEAUTIES We are now getting the largest cut of Beauties of the season and the quality is as fine as the crop is large. Can supply any length in quantity. Beauties have been so scarce the last three months that you will find your customers hungry for them. Push Beauties and call on us to furnish the stock. Prices are low, especially low for such fine flowers, and you can do a great deal now to work up your trade on Beauties. Don't let the chance slip. We always can supply you.

KILLARNEYS There are no roses like the Killarneys, white and pink, and the quality is just now it's even larger and finer than usual. Long, perfect buds on long lengths of stem; splendid color, clean foliage, strong stems. We are shipping these regularly to retail stores as far away as Spokane—and that is as convincing a test of quality as any we know of short of ordering some to see for yourself. Prices now are low.

NOW BOOKING ORDERS FOR MOTHERS' DAY, MAY 14, AND DECORATION DAY

SWEET PEAS These fancy, long-stemmed Peas of ours are about the most popular flowers now in the market—they're so fine and so fragrant they sell like the proverbial hot-cakes in all the retail stores. Nothing better liked for corsage bouquets, for table centerpieces or other fine work. We still have the Winter-blooming varieties in their best condition and are handling increasing quantities of the Butterfly varieties. All colors. These ship well. Order some today. You'll want more of them.

FANCY GREENS For corsage work, wedding bunches, etc., you need the fancy greens, such as Adiantum Croweanum, Farleyense and Mexican Ivy. We have these always on hand, of best quality. Also plenty of Asparagus and Sprengeri bunches, Smilax and Asparagus strings and a big supply of Fancy Ferns, the best in the country today.

VALLEY There is in this country no better Valley than that we always can supply. Telegraph and we ship on next train—any quantity.

ORCHIDS You can get fancy Cattleyas here. Our sources of supply are so numerous we can furnish these in quantity at times when they are not to be had elsewhere.

White Orchids or any special variety, if in season, can be supplied on a few days' notice.

LILIES You will need Lilies for the spring wedding decorations—nothing else so showy. We can furnish any quantity at any time.

Glad to quote prices on any special orders you may want to know about—quality or quantity—we can supply anything and everything.

Evergreen Brand Fertilizer for Retail Sales

Every Retailer has frequent calls for a fertilizer for house plants, and few have been able to get the profit offered them by these calls. Here is the way to do it.

We have satisfied ourselves by careful test that Evergreen Brand is the best fertilizer on the market. It is a combination of harmless, sanitary, odorless and effective plant foods that does the work so well the first sale is sure to make other sales. We have made arrangements to handle this as shown above, in small retail packages of one-half pound each, that we sell in boxes of 25 packages at $4.00, to be retailed at 25c per package, leaving you a profit of 56% on each can, or $2.25 profit on the first box. The box itself will help sell this fertilizer, as it is very prettily decorated and "Plant Food" is labeled on it in two places, and the effect of two plants before and after the use of Evergreen is demonstrated very prettily.

Evergreen Brand also is put up in 100-lb. drums for cut flower growers, at $16.00 per drum.

If you are a Retailer, please fill in and return the coupon below and we will send you one trial box of 25, and we know you will not regret it.

PACIFIC COAST.

AN illustration of San Francisco's newest and therefore most up-to-date flower store appears on page 9 of this issue. It was opened April 10 by Pelicano, Rossi & Co.

THE spring show of the California State Floral Society and the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, held March 30 to April 2 and fully reported in The Review for April 13, was one of the most successful exhibitions ever held in San Francisco. It was staged in Fairmount hotel, one of the handsomest of modern hostleries. The illustrations on page 15 will serve to give some idea of the arrangement and environment of the show, which was under the management of Angelo J. Rossi, the well known retail florist.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business is back to normal, following the Easter rush, and the florists are happy. There was plenty of stock for everybody and lilies were in chief demand, of course. What few were left made only a normal daily stock.

Prices were slightly below former years, but the increase in sales more than made up the difference and, taken as a whole, there was a gain of about twenty per cent over a year ago. Rhododendrons, ramblers and hydrangeas were a valuable asset and realized top prices. Violets were scarce, with only the doubles obtainable. Roses, including My Maryland, Carnots and Maids, were of first quality. Lilacs shipped from California did not prove a success; in fact, each shipment was figured a considerable loss.

Outside shrubbery and rose bushes are putting out foliage rapidly, and

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There seem to be several opinions among growers and retailers as to whether or not the Easter trade was equal to that of one year ago. It is maintained by some that the aggregate was fully up to the standard, but the individual sales were for much smaller amounts. Quite a few wholesalers are under the impression that it will figure out slightly better than that of last season. It is probable that both these conditions are right in their respective locations, and also that the volume of general business was about on a level with that of 1910. There was a great scarcity of cut lilies and too many of them in pots. Much of the stock was of poor quality and brought poor prices, while anything that was extra good was eagerly bought.

Carnations, with the possible exception of whites, were in great quantity and sold at only a slight advance above the prices of last month. Roses were not as plentiful as they have been, but the stores were not compelled to pay any fancy prices for them either. Tu-

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. Van Kleef, Jr., representing W. Van Kleef & Sons, Boskoop, Holland.

THE Valdesian Nurseries, Bostic, N. C., reports in early April the heaviest rains in years, which have interfered with the handling of a heavy season's work.

PETERSON NURSERY, Chicago, reports an exceptionally heavy spring rush. Early in April it became necessary to decline further orders for spring work. The landscape department has been especially busy.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has just issued Farmers' Bulletin No. 453, entitled "Danger of General Spread of the Gypsy and Brown-tail Moths Through Imported Nursery Stock," by C. L. Marlatt, assistant chief of the Bureau of Entomology. Nurserymen will not approve of waving the red flag, because they do not think circumstances make it either necessary or desirable, but in the bulletin there is much which will interest every nurseryman.

EXPORTS OF APPLES.

Nurserymen who have feared the bursting of the boom in apple orchard planting will be interested in the following figures, showing the exports of apples in the last two seasons:

	—Exports, barrels—
	This season.	Last season.
Port of New York.....	326,219	398,944
Port of Boston.....	440,926	263,626
Port of Portland.....	72,807	248,020
Port of Montreal.....	169,940	587,287
Ports of Halifax and Annapolis.....	204,254	676,424
Port of St. John.....	5,055	45,356
Boxes of Far Western.....	1,070,500	463,362

The exporter who compiled the fruit figures adds:

"The early spring and late frost destroyed large portions of the crop east of the Rockies and in many parts of Colorado. New York kept her supplies up to the average, through drawing large lots from the Virginias, where they have gone into extensive planting during the past decade. Growers in Massachusetts and Connecticut are taking more pains with their orchards, until today the quality is equal to some of the best in New York state.

"Attention is called to the falling off from Montreal, Halifax and St.

John of over 800,000 barrels. Last year's warm March, followed by bad weather in May, accounts for this. Otherwise Nova Scotia alone, with her increasing acreage, expected 1,000,000 barrels. This year things are reversed. They still have cold weather and their season is fully four weeks later than last. It is said their trees are looking well, and, having had light crops last year, Canadian ports are expected to ship this year 2,000,000 barrels, or 700,000 more than two years ago.

"Further attention is called to the remarkable increase in far western boxes, the largest exports in any previous season being 520,000 boxes. This industry started in 1885. The total growth this year has been reckoned about 15,000,000. Each box when sent to New York pays the railway 50 cents freight. At the present time everything west looks well for good crops. Colorado, that only had 2,500 carloads last season, has already come out with the statement that they expect 10,000 this season. This would mean 8,000 carloads of apples (6,000,000 boxes). The immense tracts laid out in Idaho, Utah, Oregon and Washington during the last ten years, which are now coming into bearing, look like 28,000,000 to 30,000,000 boxes next season, and it remains to be seen if these quantities will be able to stand the present railway charge.

"All barrels of apples have sold at good prices, but boxes have sold at lower prices than they have in their history, particularly those grown under irrigation. Some of these have arrived in Europe in bad condition, proving that fruit grown under irrigation has poor carrying quality—too much water in the fruit—and as the American government is expending some $25,000,000 on irrigation, this season's lessons may be of some value. We are continually being asked about fruit growing in the west by parties who have read glowing descriptions of the real estate dealers. We trust they will be able to draw their own conclusions from this report."

TORONTO.

The Market.

Fine weather has brought stock on rapidly and the demand in all lines is being well supplied. After the cold, dull days we have been having, it seems like the middle of summer now. All stock coming in shows splendid condition, and such stock is readily sold. Beauties are coming in a little more plentifully and bring good prices. Sweet peas are abundant and the quality is better than it has been all season. Valley is excellent, also carnations.

Various Notes.

John Chambers, late park commissioner, has been appointed head gardener at Central Prison at a salary of $1,500 per annum. This position was formerly held by Wm. Houston, who died last autumn.

J. H. Dunlop is in New York.

State dinners at the government house are using up the supply of flowers grown there. This has been a busy season.

NEW BEDFORD.

The Market.

Trade was good last week. Flowers are quite plentiful. Carnations retail at 60 cents and 75 cents per dozen; roses at $1.50 per dozen. What is left of the violets retail at $1 per hundred blooms; sweet peas at $1 and $2 per hundred blooms; snapdragons at 75 cents per dozen; daffodils and tulips at 50 cents per dozen; double Murillo at 75 cents per dozen; callas at $2 per dozen. Pansies are selling at 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen roots. Funeral work has been good, using up lots of stock.

The weather last week was winter-like, a snow storm coming on Thursday, April 20. We are now having cloudy weather. It is too cold and raw for much garden work to be done as yet. The street faker is now a steady thing, with lots of carnations and roses at cheap prices. All the department stores are selling ferns, roses and other flowering shrubs at extremely low prices.

Easter, 1911, compared with Easter, 1910, was fully as good, if not better. Prices were good, both for cut flowers and plants. The best trade was in plants, such as primroses, azaleas and pots of tulips in all colors. Daffodils and hyacinths sold well, at 50 cents and up. Some nice ramblers in pots and hydrangeas also sold well. Lilies were good and cleaned out well at 25 cents per bud and flower. The cut flower trade was quite satisfactory. Carnations retailed at 75 cents and $1 per dozen; roses at $2 per dozen. Violets were none too plentiful at $1.50 per hundred blooms. Sweet peas brought $1 and $2 per hundred blooms; cut bulb stock, 50 cents per dozen; Murillo tulips, 75 cents per dozen.

Various Notes.

R. H. Woodhouse had a grand crop of single violets for Easter. He picked a great many thousands of them, which were gobbled up quickly. W. L.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Last week seemed to be a week for recreation and getting straightened around after the Easter rush. Business had receded considerably, making the trade of Easter week and last week quite a contrast. Warm weather predominated during the entire week and brought out many of the tardy Easter lily buds, so that there is still a generous supply of lilies on the market, while the demand for them is rather spasmodic. April showers, mingled in with the warm weather, were instrumental in coaxing the fruit trees into bloom. Unless the weather should grow much colder, it is quite evident that the fruit crop will be heavy this year.

Carnations are scarce, and the growers, instead of pushing them, are rather holding them back, in order to have a good supply on Decoration day. Roses are still in their glory, and couldn't be finer. Some of our local growers are trying the Spanish iris, for which they find a good demand. The market is good on valley, as there are several weddings in the near future. A few straggling hyacinths, that were evidently too slow for the Easter rush, sold well last week, most of them being used as cut flowers. Funeral orders and a few weddings keep the florist in business, as most of the people seemingly spent all their surplus cash for Easter. In many instances it appeared that the milliners did as good a flower business for Easter as the florists.

Various Notes.

Word has been received from W. C. Hood, who is with his son in South Pasadena, Cal., that he has been laid up for the last two months with a crippled hand, which was smashed by a large boulder while he was building a rockery on a private estate.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Since Easter, trade has been fair only. Stock is quite plentiful and of good quality, and outdoor narcissi are to be had in large quantities. Easter lilies were pretty well cleaned up for Easter and are not more than enough to go around. Valley and lilacs are also scarce, while violets are not of the best quality. Beauties and roses of all kinds are good stock.

Various Notes.

The Smith & Young Co. will soon open a downtown store for the benefit of its wholesale trade. This firm believes it can give its customers better service with such a store. The idea is to carry a complete line of florists' supplies, also to handle the entire output of its greenhouses through this store. Arrangements have been made with a number of local, as well as several well known outside growers, to consign their stock to the new store. Herman Junge is to be in charge.

Walter Hanson, formerly with E. A. Nelson, but of late with Poehlmann Bros. Co., spent a few days in the city last week. After a two weeks' vacation, Mr. Hanson is to take a position with the Chicago Carnation Co.

Sidney Smith says he is going out of the chicken business and is going to devote all his time to raising fancy carnations.

Mr. Koontz, with the McGregor Bros. Co., of Springfield, O., spent a day calling on the trade last week.

A. Wiegand & Sons got in a large shipment of palms from Belgium recently. H. L. W.

BROCKTON, MASS.

"Trade was exceptionally good here at Easter," reports W. W. Hathaway. Indeed, his Easter trade was the best he ever had, and this in spite of the fact that many dry goods stores and markets were handling both plants and cut flowers. Lilies easily led all other pot plants in popularity. The quality of these was fine, but most of them were a little too dwarf. Azaleas, ramblers, bulbous pans and other plants all sold well. In cut flowers carnations, narcissi and roses sold best; other varieties moved slowly. Churches this year decorated more than usual, thus helping business. Since Easter, trade has been exceptionally good.

RED SPIDER ON CUCUMBERS.

My cucumber plants, which are about two feet high, are badly infested with red spider. What can I do to get rid of the pests?
J. M. B.

Spray with the hose daily, using a fine spray with a strong pressure, under each leaf. This will knock them off. You can not get rid of them by fumigating.
H. G.

Milford, Conn.—Louis L. Barton, of this place, has purchased twenty-three acres of land at Elmwood, Conn., and expects to start building a range of greenhouses there this spring.

Middletown, N. Y.—It is reported that some miscreant recently forced an entrance into the greenhouse of F. H. Rau, on the Bennett farm, near Springside, from which Mr. Rau had moved April 1, and with a bellows scattered a mixture of saltpeter and some poisonous substance over more than 35,000 young tomato, pepper and egg plants, killing them all. Mr. Rau now lives on the Reeves farm, between the Bennett farm and this city.

The New Fern Nephrolepis Dreyerii. (Sport of Boston.)

The New Fern Nephrolepis Dreyerii

(SPORT OF BOSTON)

GROWN BY

G. DREYER, Elmhurst, Long Island, New York

THIS New Fern, when exhibited at the S. A. F. & O. H. Convention last August, received the following description: "Nephrolepis Dreyerii has many good points which will render it popular. It makes a quick growth, is compact, of good color, and stands considerable rough treatment, adapting itself to almost any condition. It is of the Scottii type, but not as stiff, the fronds drooping gracefully, giving the plant a very attractive appearance."

Price: 2 1/4-inch pots, per 100, $25.00; per 1000, $200.00.

Everybody has asked for a carnation that would live out in the garden during the winter. We have pleasure in offering this new plant, as it will fill the bill. It is absolutely hardy, standing even the Canadian winters in the yard. It blooms all summer long, never a day that you cannot cut blossoms. By potting up in the fall you can have flowers in the house all winter. The color is a rich crimson, the fragrance is delicious. We know of no plant that the florists can offer to their patrons that will give as much satisfaction as this hardy carnation, Crimson King. $1.25 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000. 25 plants sold at 100 rates; 250 plants at 1000 rates. SAN FRANCISCO.

lips and daffodils are somewhat scarcer and valley moves well. Freesias and hyacinths are getting toward the end of their time.

There was a good clean-up of all kinds of potted stock and everything with a blossom found ready sale. Azaleas are just a bit past the prime, and good rhododendrons took their place nicely. Ferns and palms, while not as popular as flowering stock, found many buyers.

Since Easter trade has been dull and, with the exception of funeral work, there is nothing worth mentioning.

Various Notes.

Wm. Forrest, formerly of this city, is at present with the Elmhurst Floral Co., of Oakland.

Chas. A. Colmore has taken charge of the Trumbull Seed Co. in place of J. W. Barker, who recently left their employ.

Columbus, O.—Joseph J. Hellenthal reports that Easter trade was "better than ever." Though the market in the first part of the week was flooded with stock of all kinds, good stock became scarce at the last. There was a heavy demand for potted plants.

Nature's Best Fertilizer is Sheep Manure

Sheep's Head Brand furnishes the valuable organic matter and humus necessary to grow crops. It improves the mechanical conditions of the soil.

Makes compact clay more open and porous, makes light, sandy soils more retentive of moisture, keeps soluble plant foods within reach of rootlets of growing vegetation.

Farmers, orchardists, florists, truck and market gardeners should send for our book "Fertile Facts" to learn how properly and most effectively to fertilize the soil.

Greenhouse Heating.

ONE of the evidences of the wide reading given the Heating Department of The Review is the receipt of a heating query from a florist in Denmark.

BOILER ON GROUND LEVEL.

We have a greenhouse 32x100 feet. The sides are of 10-inch double-flue tile and are four and one-half feet high. There is a double roof. We wish to extend the house seventy-five feet and place the boiler between the two houses. What size of common flue boiler would be the most economical to use? How many runs of 1-inch or 1¼-inch pipe will be required to heat the house to 65 degrees in zero weather?

Would it be practicable to have the floor of the boiler room on a level with the greenhouse floor? We have a return trap to force the water into the boiler. Could we set the trap at the side, on a level with the boiler, and have it work satisfactorily with less steam? We are located in northeastern Ohio. M. G. C.

To heat the house described to 65 degrees in zero weather, it will be advisable to use two 2-inch flow pipes and fifteen 1¼-inch returns. The boiler can be placed on a level with the floor of the greenhouse, provided arrangements can be made to return the water, and the trap can also be at the same level under the same conditions, but the pressure required will be even higher than when the boiler and trap are below the level of the floor. Most of the traps would work with five pounds of pressure and some with even less.

While a twenty-five horse-power boiler would heat the houses described, if further additions are to be made they should be provided for by putting in a somewhat larger boiler at this time.

IN MARYLAND CLIMATE.

I have been a subscriber to your paper for a number of years, and now that I am building a new greenhouse I write to ask your opinion in regard to heating same. This house will be 30x85 feet, height of side walls five feet, with two feet of glass and two and one-half feet of concrete. The height from the ground to ridge pole is fourteen feet three inches, and the glass used will be 16x24, double, exposed on all sides, no sheds adjoining. I have in use a Furman sectional hot water boiler. I wish

Awarded the Certificate of Merit

at the National Flower Show, Boston, Mass.; and also received the universal approval of all the visitors who examined its merits, the expression of the majority being

"THAT IS THE BOILER I HAVE BEEN LOOKING FOR"

The points of merit that appealed to the judges and the critical visitors were that the fire-box is entirely surrounded by water, there being no brick work to require constant repair; every part of the boiler is easily accessible for cleaning and oiling, which is the most important feature to be considered in purchasing a boiler that is idle during the summer months; all the castings, doors, grates, etc., are made double extra heavy.

☐ Made in 23 sizes for steam and hot water.

☐ In use during the past five years by well-known florists in all parts of the country.

☐ Have shown a saving in coal consumption of from 25 to 40 per cent over other types of boilers.

☐ All parts of the boiler subject to wear are made standard.

☐ The grates are of the shaking and dumping type, with openings for egg, pea or soft coal.

☐ Tested at the factory to 150 pounds pressure.

What the Users Say

Kroeschell Boiler Saves 35 Tons Coal

"I bought a No. 7 boiler in 1901. It takes care of 10,500 sq. ft. of glass and could take care of 5000 more. Must state that I am in business for 25 years and have attended to many boilers, but I must say for your Boiler that it has given better satisfaction than any other, being easier to fire up, and it is easier to keep the temperature with your boiler in our houses than it is with any other. I used 35 tons of coal less than I did with boilers I had before. I can keep the temperature to 75 or 80 degrees during the severest weather, if it is necessary to do so."

to have your advice as to the best location for the hot water pipes, also the size of flow pipes and size and number of returns to heat the house to about 45 or 50 degrees in zero weather. I would prefer to have all the heating pipes on the side walls if practical. I would also prefer, instead of one 4-inch flow to supply each coil, to have two coils with a 2-inch flow pipe on each side wall. My reason for this is that we do not often have zero weather, and in moderate weather we could run one coil and in cold weather run both coils. The side benches will be raised above the pipes and all other benches will be ground benches raised about eighteen inches.

are all satisfied with the results it has given, and many duplicate orders is the proof. This Valve will maintain a steady pressure on the low side, no matter how the initial pressure fluctuates. a temperature of 50 degrees will require about 900 feet of radiating surface. To supply this, three 2½-inch mains can be used. One of these can be carried on each of the purlin posts. The center flow can be used to feed two coils of three pipes each, running from either side of the door at the end of the house farthest from the heater, around to the door at the other end of the house. The other flows can feed two other coils of three pipes each, which will extend along the side walls only.

That there may be no misunderstanding, it may be well to explain that, when completed, there will be three flow-pipes running the length of the house and six 2-inch returns upon each of the side walls, with three of the pipes upon each wall extending around to the doors at the ends of the houses. Arranged in this way, it will be possible to shut off the flow through the pipes on the outer rows of posts, thus reducing the amount of radiation one-half.

While it would not be quite as efficient, in case it is preferred to use 2-inch pipes as flows, it can be arranged by placing two flow pipes on the center row of posts and using one of these to feed each of the coils which pass along the ends of the houses. The other arrangements would be as explained above.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.

Easter trade was something out of the ordinary. The season was forward. Roses of fine quality were in bloom in nearly every garden in the city and other flowers were abundant. Yet the demand for pot plants and cut flowers was something unprecedented. Lilies, of which there were an abundance for this city, were gobbled up clean at 25 cents per flower and bud. All other stock, both plants and cut flowers, sold at equally good prices, so that everybody was thoroughly satisfied. Paterson, as usual, had a large part of the business, the store force having to work from early Friday morning until late Saturday evening without cessation. Trade before Easter and since has been exceptionally good. Heretofore Easter has not been considered one of the big days, but during the last two years it has increased wonderfully, until now it is pushing the usual holiday trade close for first place. H. L. Von Trott reports trade good and prospects bright.

Considerable complaint is made against some northern firms shipping goods here, not only of delayed shipments but of loose and indifferent packing. There is no excuse for shipping stock 1,000 miles in pasteboard boxes, with no outside protection and tied loosely with a string.

Decoration day here does not amount to anything to speak of, though we have two, the Confederate, which is most generally observed, and the Union, which is little observed. Outside flowers are used almost exclusively.

A Direct-Geared Pumping Engine

This cut shows how, in the Standard Pumping Engine, the power is conveyed from the engine to the pump by machine cut gearing. The small gear on the engine fly-wheel drives the reduction shaft, which has another small gear driving the pump crank.

By this direct-connection, no power is lost in transmission, as is the case with outfits having the engine and pump placed some distance apart, and the connection made by means of pulleys, belts and hangers. This economizes fuel, and makes for higher pressure.

The engine makes ten revolutions to one of the pump, making it capable of working against constant high pressure. This makes possible the 90 pounds per square inch pressure for which the Standard Pumping Engine is noted.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

The weather conditions in the week preceding Easter were hard on both cut flowers and plants. The whole week was of regular March type—wet, snowy, windy and cold. Saturday was the coldest day of the week and quite disagreeable. All plants were well wrapped and there was little complaint heard about injured plants.

The retail end of the business was all that could be desired. Plants took the lead, and of these there were plenty; in fact, while the retailers did a satisfactory business, the glut of lilies and Easter plants of nearly every description was the largest since the panic. In cut flowers, Beauties were scarce and violets were practically off the market, but all the rest of the flowers were plentiful and sold well.

It was essentially a retailers' Easter; the growers were caught with large crops of lilies and Easter stock, with little of the usual out-of-town demand, and, as if that were not enough, the Chicago plant market was overloaded with stock and no outlet lay in that direction. Bulbs were abundant last fall and were offered at low prices, tempting many to buy more than usual, with the result of an overstocked market. The leading department stores were in their glory with this cheap plant market at Easter, and they retailed lilies with four to six buds at from 30 cents to 45 cents each, while the florists had to charge 15 cents per bud for short plants and 20 cents for tall ones. Hyacinths went for 5 cents or 10 cents apiece less than regular wholesale prices. The shipping trade was not as good as last year; the retail trade was, if anything, better.

A new feature in this market was the persistent call for sweet peas, and they sold well. Lilies, of course, were the most popular flowers, with carnations and sweet peas next, then roses and the miscellaneous assortment of bulb stock.

Azaleas and hydrangeas were in good demand. Some fine lilac and rhododendron plants and Azalea mollis found ready sale at the stores. One exceedingly scarce article on the market is smilax; it can not be had for love or money.

The Market.

The market for the last three weeks has proven satisfactory to retailer, grower and wholesaler. The Easter business becomes heavier and heavier each year. The large use of corsage bouquets calls for an especial increase in the regular stock of valley and orchids, mostly cattleyas. These flowers have been shown in large quantities in the windows of many of our leading florists.

Sweet peas and violets are still in demand and are picked up about as fast as they are unpacked. The demand during the last week, however, seemed to incline toward carnations.

Various Notes.

The school children of this city were supplied with trees, to be taken home and planted. The trees were a gift from the Malley Co., proprietors of the largest department store in the city.

J. N. Champion & Co. report the Easter season one of the best in years.

The florists of this city are now looking forward hopefully to the Decoration day business, the June weddings and the Yale University commencements.

Otto Glueck, of Marion, was a visitor in town last week. B.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The florists of this city were not disappointed at Easter. Two days of rain the early part of the week caused some to worry, but from Friday on the weather was ideal. Everyone's facilities for selling and delivery were taxed to the limit, and Sunday noon found stock well cleaned up.

Business last week was good, Easter Monday being an exceptionally busy day with many florists. Aside from carnations, stock remains well sold out. Violets are becoming poor and will soon be only a memory. Sweet peas are in large supply, but the demand is fully equal to it. Spanish iris has made its appearance.

Various Notes.

B. Schroeter's force is busy moving to temporary quarters at 90 Broadway.

Automobiles played a most important part in Easter deliveries, some of the large retailers using this method entirely. H. S.

MERIDEN, CONN.

The Market.

During the last few weeks we have been convinced that Meriden is rapidly growing as a flower city. The increase in business in the last year has been remarkable and I have never before seen here so great a volume of business as has been transacted here this spring. It has not been confined to any one dealer, but has been distributed among all dealers. We have undoubtedly had the busiest Easter that has occurred here in years. Besides, there has been an unusual amount of funeral work.

Various Notes.

The Blatchley Co.'s window displays were remarkably tasteful during Easter. Mr. Blatchley reports a fine season. He is having sales of small table ferns this week.

J. A. Greenbacker, of Cook avenue, is still doing business at the old stand. He reports an immense Easter trade.

R. W. Barrow got his full share of Easter trade.

The Colonial Club of Meriden gave the people a rare treat in the Nordica concert, and many beautiful gifts and flowers were presented to her, including some large bunches of American Beauties and a bunch of violets that contained 1,000 blossoms. The concert proved a big success, especially for the florists.

Many weddings have taken place during the last week. B.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.

The Market.

There is an unusual amount of sickness here at present. Pneumonia seems to have become an epidemic and there has been a great demand for flowers for the sick. The florists here all report business fine for Easter. Bulbous stock seemed to take the lead in the Easter trade.

Various Notes.

William Fischer, of Milldale, who recently had the misfortune, while working on his new greenhouses, to fall and break some of his ribs, did not seem to recover as he should, so last week he was taken to the Meriden hospital, where an operation was performed. He is getting along nicely.

Olson & Lunden report having had a fine Easter trade.

Otto Glueck, of Marion, who has leased and runs the Bavier plant, is shipping some fine carnations and sweet peas to New Haven and Hartford. He reports an excellent Easter trade.

Mr. Curtis, who has greenhouses at Milldale, has been busy planting vegetable plants outdoors.

C. W. Blatchley, whose greenhouses are situated at Milldale, was kept busy conveying his supplies to his store in Meriden. B.

Wagner Plant Boxes are the best and cheapest in the market for Palms, Boxwood, Bay Trees, etc. They are attractive in design, strong and durable, suitable for either indoor or outdoor use. Made of cypress, which gives them a lasting quality. We manufacture various styles and sizes. Write for prices. WAGNER PARK CONSERVATORIES, Sidney, Ohio

A Parallel Proposition

A house 200 feet long on private grounds looks too commercial, but two 100-foot houses built parallel fashion like these, and you have an attractive, compact proposition. However, it is just as you say—"the way a house is planned depends pretty much on where it is to be located," and for what it is to be used.

Now that you mention the question of locations, we want you to have our catalogue—and see some of the different stunts we have accomplished in locating. Many of them were tough nuts to crack and the catalogue tells how we cracked them. Want the catalogue?

Get This Fact Firmly Fixed in Your Mind

That the man who puts up our Iron Frame House is putting his money into a Century Laster. It is like taking out a life insurance policy against repairs.

Josh Billings used to say he "loved the rooster; first, because of its crow; second, because of the spurs he had to back up this crow."

We do some crowing—but we have the house to back it up. And the price is right.

Write us—that's the thing to do.

MOTHERS' DAY PREPARATIONS

THE TRADE GETS READY.

Ordering Plenty of Stock.

Since last week's issue of The Review reached the trade, wholesale florists all over the country have had a steadily increasing number of inquiries and orders for special supplies for Mothers' day. It is apparent that the retail florists everywhere are preparing for a greatly increased demand, excellent as was the business for Mothers' day last year.

It is right and proper that retailers should assure themselves of adequate supplies for this, the same as for other special flower days. But one thing should not be overlooked: Mothers' day is not an old and well established flower day, like Easter or Decoration day; Mothers' day is in its infancy, so to speak, and the public, proverbially short-minded, may forget "to honor the best mother who ever lived—your own," unless reminded of it.

Don't Take Chances.

He is either a venturesome or a short-minded retailer who stocks up heavily for Mothers' day and does nothing to bring the day to public notice.

The Mothers' day advertising done last year will bear fruit again next week, but don't trust to that. Employ whatever form of advertising you have found best suited to your local needs, but by all means do something to bring Mothers' day to the attention of your customers.

The best way to boost Mothers' day is to advertise it in the daily papers. A lot of mayors and governors have issued proclamations, but a good many of them have neglected to mention the wearing of flowers, or their use in Mothers' day decorations. That is up to the florists. If your ingenuity is equal to a special Mothers' day window decoration, put it on, and at least get some nicely lettered display cards for both store and window.

Push All Kinds of Flowers.

The momentum gained in the last couple of years and the fresh impetus given by the Mothers' day proclamations insure a demand for more white carnations than it will be possible to supply. Mothers' day is not an occasion which will stand high prices; indeed, the greatest danger lies in too great an increase in values. Therefore it is necessary for everyone to do his part toward turning the demand, not away from white carnations, but to include other colors and other flowers. We do not want a Mothers' day circumscribed by the limited possibilities of supplying white carnations. To have its full value to the trade the use of every flower must be appropriate to Mothers' day. Of course it is easier to work along the lines of least resistance and sell everyone white carnations as long as they last, but after that we either have to shut up shop or sell the people something else. Might as well begin at the beginning and push colored stock; sell it wherever you can, but give them white when they will not take anything else.

White flowers for Mother's memory.
Bright flowers for Mothers living.

Let that phrase appear in all your Mothers' day publicity. Those who tried it last year found that it worked finely. See the letters on page 8 of last week's Review. Here is what a Wisconsin florist says, and his experience is typical of all:

"I went to our mayor and he issued a proclamation for Mothers' day, in which he recommended the wearing of

A white flower for Mother's memory.
A bright flower for Mothers living.

"I also went to nearly every pastor in town, and they all had something to say about Mothers' day. Now, in regard to business: Every florist in town stocked heavily, but by 2 p. m. everything was gone; we could have sold more. Colored carnations sold as well as white."

MOTHERS' DAY SALES.

Mothers' day thus far principally has called for flowers for boutonnieres. But last year—

Churches were decorated.

Sunday schools gave a flower to each child who attended.

Street car companies gave a flower to every conductor and motorman.

G. A. R. posts and other organizations attended church in a body, each person wearing a flower.

Bouquets were sent to mother.

Homes were decorated.

Wreaths and small flat crosses were sent to the cemeteries.

The Mothers' day business can be worked up along a dozen different profitable lines.

DISBUDDING PEONIES.

Kindly let me know if it will pay to disbud peonies. I have some with four and five buds on a plant. Should I let them bloom as they are? C. M. T.

It certainly pays to disbud peonies. Remove all except the large central bud. This should be done as soon as possible after the buds show themselves. You can somewhat prolong the flowering season by taking out the central bud and leaving one or more of the side buds. These will not produce quite as large blooms as the central bud, but frequently late flowers are more valuable than the earlier ones.

The peony is like any other flower; the better it is grown the better it sells.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

AN IRIS STUDY.

Unique and Welcome Flowers.

Since its season is short, the iris is welcome and useful in many designs. Its colors, especially the lavenders, and its irregularity and oddity of shape, distinguish it from all other flowers. Like others of its type, it is usually better "alone with its glory" and its foliage; yet, if a flower can be found which resembles it closely, a delightful combination may be presented.

Let us consider what stock might be available—for use with the early varieties of iris, for instance—and make our choice. There would be callas, Easter lilies, candidums, lilacs, carnations, roses, snapdragons, stocks, hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, fruit blossoms, tree catkins, violets, peas, freesias, pansies, Bride gladioli, etc.

Of the flowers in that list, which shall be chosen as the best to combine with the iris and how shall our choice be determined? Here is a formula that will help, not only in this case, but in any proposed combination of flowers: First—Flowers to be combined in equally important positions in a design—using this word in its widest application, that of any arrangement of flowers—should be of about the same size, form, and length of stem. Second—They should be of harmonious colors. Third—They should be of the same general order of plants; for example, endogens, or the non-branching, parallel veined plants, as grasses and most bulbs.

Fit Companions for the Iris.

Applying this test to any combination which it is proposed to make, we shall see how it will work with the iris and the other flowers in the foregoing list. The calla—About the same size, form and length of stem? Yes. Harmonious color? Yes. Same general order of plants? Yes. Then we have found this a good combination. Easter lilies and candidums also answer the formula favorably.

Here come lilacs next. About same size? No. Form? No. Length of stem? Yes. Harmonious in color? Yes. Same general class? No. The noes have it; not the best of combinations, but not particularly objectionable. Roses and carnations will be found in about the same class.

Hyacinths—About the same size? Yes. Form? No. Length of stem? No. Harmonious in color? Yes. Same general class? Yes. Proceeding down the list, we find that tulips, daffodils, freesias and Bride gladioli all show a favorable test of the formula, the last mentioned being the best of all, especially with the lavender or yellow iris; purple iris and candidums would be a close second. Orchids show a good combination percentage, especially in funeral sprays; gardenias, a fair percentage.

Where and How to Use the Iris.

By their length of stem and grandee style the various irises are especially well adapted for tall decorative effects in large places, but should not be cramped into short table decorations or under a low ceiling.

Like nearly all flowers, the iris in spray work should not be allowed to lie hard and flat. Either tie the stems tightly enough to pry the flowers into a swinging position, or support them under the lower stems with a thick pad of green, to raise the flowers up. Avoid showing a too thick mat of green under the tip end of the spray. Manage, by wiring or the means just suggested, to keep the flowers free from any support. By placing them in a half recumbent position, more expression is given to the individual flowers and to the finished design than can be attained in any flat, all-headed-one-way collection. One pleasant change was once suggested by a customer, who bought a number of choice roses and greens. The roses he scattered loosely over the top of a casket, with enough green to support them. Nothing else was put on the casket whatever.

But to our principal subject. Ignoring for once the usual ferns, asparagus and other greens used in spray work, trade. Two cars similar to the one illustrated herewith are now in constant operation, together with a 3-wheeled affair used for quick trips with special orders. Mr. Palmer says that he has not been able to find any great degree of economy in the operation of these high class cars as a substitute for wagons, any more than he has found it possible to reduce rents by moving into better stores on busier streets; he considers that his gain is the same gain that is made by having a fine store in the best location in town.

AUTOMOBILE DELIVERY.

Selecting a Car.

When a customer is confronted with a whole house of Boston ferns, she finds it difficult to decide just which one she should buy, as they all look about alike, at least to the inexperienced. So it is with automobiles—at least with commercial automobiles; they all look about alike, except in size and color, to one not familiar with their mechanism.

Many florists, therefore, after deciding to invest in an auto, find it quite a problem to decide just what kind of car to purchase, and I trust that the following observations, based on a year's experience and a deep interest in the subject, may assist the novice in selecting a delivery car which will prove a paying proposition.

Its Carrying Capacity.

Before going into other details, it is necessary to consider what will be required of the car. A heavy draft horse gives good service in slow, heavy pulling, but would not last long for

The Motive Power.

The vital part of the auto is, of course, the engine or motor. A 2-cylinder, opposed motor appeals to the writer. Such a motor is quite powerful, consumes a minimum of gasoline, requires less knowledge on the part of the chauffeur or owner and will give less trouble than a 4-cylinder motor, as there is just one-half the wiring, as well as fewer spark-plugs, valves, etc.

If your car is to be driven by different members of your force, or if you do not intend putting it into the hands of a really good, practical man, by all means get a car having planetary transmission. In this the gears are always in mesh and careless handling can do but little damage to the transmission.

Chain-driven cars, while more noisy than shaft-driven cars and not so easily kept clean, are nevertheless the best for commercial use. When heavy roads are encountered, the giving of the shaft causes much loss of power; the slack of the chains also saves the motor to a large degree.

The Brakes.

Another important feature is the brakes. The car should be equipped with two distinct sets of brakes. The brake bands should be accessible and the rods should be easily adjusted. From time to time the brakes will need adjusting, so that, when they are properly applied, the car may be gradually brought to a stop. Brakes that grip the wheels tightly at the least application, causing the wheels to slide, will triple the expense for tires.

The radiator should not be attached rigidly to the chassis, or the constant vibration will soon cause it to leak.

In order to be entirely practical for florists' use, the auto should be so constructed that it can be throttled down to four or five miles per hour on a street that is poorly paved. This is quite essential. On the other hand, the car should be good for from eighteen to twenty miles per hour on a good street, for in the speed of an auto really lies the secret of its being cheaper than horses for the florist, if properly handled.

The Tires.

The style of tires is usually optional, but my advice would be to choose pneumatic tires for a car that is to be used for general delivery. The only advantage in the use of solid tires is the total elimination of tire trouble, but this advantage is more than offset by the easy riding qualities of the pneumatic tires. These greatly reduce the vibration, and thus they not only lessen the liability of damage to our wares, but are much easier on the motor.

As to the matter of lights, the electric lights are the most practical for a commercial auto. They are not as powerful as gas lamps, but are satisfactory for city use.

Electric Cars.

In my articles on the subject of automobiles I have not once referred to electric cars. The present cost of these is so high as to be almost prohibitive. Among the merits of the electric machines are their simplicity of operation and the absence of carbureter and spark-plug troubles, but they have not the speed of gasoline cars and can be

PALMER AND THE AUTO.

W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, were not only among the first to use automobiles for delivery purposes, but they are now among the largest users in this rapid, light delivery, and so it is with an auto. If you want a vehicle to be used mainly for carrying large loads of decorating plants, then I would advise buying a chassis with a capacity of about one ton, and a good, large, specially built body. On the other hand, if the vehicle is to be used daily for general delivery, a car of one-half the aforementioned carrying capacity should be purchased.

recharged only at certain points, while gasoline can be secured anywhere.

All the foregoing considerations and some others are important when contemplating the purchase of a delivery car, but bear this in mind: An honest, practical, careful man can get good results from any fairly well constructed auto, while a shiftless, reckless driver will make the best auto that ever was built so costly to operate that, even if we sold carnations at $5 per dozen, we would still find it hard to meet our bills for repairs, and perhaps damage suits.

THE VACANT CHAIR.

Everyone now recognizes the value of the modern sweet pea as a corsage flower and for such high class work as wedding bouquets. That it also has its place in design work is shown by the accompanying illustration, which is reproduced from a photograph of a vacant chair made by Charles L. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn. The principal flowers used are sweet peas and the quantity required will be evident when it is stated that the design was five feet high and a full-sized armchair in every way. The design was made with the usual wire frame, whereas some other large vacant chairs recently illustrated have been made on an ordinary willow porch chair, which had been covered with moss, the same as the wire frame is stuffed.

THE DAHLIA.

Its Recent Popularity.

I think everybody will agree with me when I say that the dahlia has become quite a factor in the cut flower trade. The recent interest taken in the dahlia for cut flower purposes, and its adaptability as a flowering plant for amateurs, make information regarding its culture at this time desirable.

The increasing popularity of this plant is largely due to the advent of new forms and the wonderful increase in the demand for flowers. The dahlia comes at a season when the summer rush is over and prior to the appearance of glass-grown flowers. It thrives well in almost any soil, requires no glass treatment and covers a wide range of forms and colors. Standard varieties are cheap and are easily kept during the dormant season.

Development in a Decade.

The dahlia's development has nearly all taken place within the last decade, which is an extremely short time compared with the record of the greenhouse-grown stock. It was removed, in its wild form, from Mexico to Europe about 1790, but it was not until about twenty years later that any double forms were seen. From this time on development was exceedingly rapid. Both the large flowering and pompon classes were of the globular form, being as round as a sphere.

These globular forms filled the lists until about 1875. At this time a merchant from Holland offered a new form of dahlia, the parent of the now popular class called cactus. This first new form, with its long, twisted petals, had a peculiar reddish hue, associated with the cactus; hence the name of this class. From it we are getting many varieties. The advent of the cactus form, with its grace and beauty, makes it valuable for decorative purposes. With the improvement in keeping qualities and a more general knowledge of its usefulness as a cut flower, the dahlia is bound to become increasingly popular.

Methods of Propagation.

There are three methods of propagation—by seed, cuttings and root division. Seeds germinate quickly in moderate heat and the young plants are easily handled. Seeds sown in March, and transplanted out of flats into the open after danger of frost, can be depended on to bloom in September in endless quantities.

Through many inquiries I have found that propagation by root division is the most common. The eyes will begin to show at the base of the old stock, as a rule, during the first part of April. By dividing these eyes with a knife, the varieties may be largely multiplied. If glass room can be spared, the clumps may be set in earth in full light toward the end of February; they soon spring into growth. The young shoots can be taken off and rooted in sand in the same way as any other soft-wooded plants. As far as I can find out, there is no difference between the plants made by cuttings and those made by divisions.

The dahlia does well in any fertile soil, but it shows a preference for a rich, moist, sandy loam. It should be planted toward the end of May. It requires warmth to start it into growth; consequently there is no advantage in planting it out early. Midsummer is not a desirable time to bring dahlias into bloom. The first part of September is early enough to bring in the first blooms, and this can be done easily by planting out in the first part of May.

Planting and Cultivation.

Now as to planting. Dahlias should be planted at least two feet apart in the row, and, if there are several rows, set the rows at least five feet apart. This is necessary because the plants are so brittle, that even a light touch will often cause large branches to break down. The planting depth should be from four to six inches below the soil surface. Frequent and light cultivation is essential to its growth. When tubers are planted, it is a good idea to reduce the shoots to two or three to a hill. When the plants get their second pair of leaves it is a good practice to pinch out the leaders, and the laterals can be treated in the same way after receiving the second pair of leaves. This tends to make the plants branch out and become bushy, lessening the necessity for staking.

The only requirement that a dahlia

IMPRESSIONS

OF AMERICA

By a British Visitor.

In my three weeks' trip in the United States many impressions were recorded, some transient, some permanent. I hesitate to put some in writing or even to give them a place in my memory, as erroneous impressions are easily formed when all the circumstances are not apparent. Time did not permit me to substantiate all; therefore on some subjects I have still an open mind.

On one subject, however, I have no doubts; to me it was most wonderful; namely, the unbounded, genial hospitality of the American florists. Who we were and what we had accomplished to merit such cordiality baffled the wits of my fellow travelers and myself. Of the magnificent welcome accorded all around I have a permanent impression recorded.

Right Hand of Fellowship.

Upon our arrival in New York we were grasped by the right hand of good fellowship, and that same right hand kept its hold all the way from New York to Chicago, Chicago to Boston, and Boston back to New York. It never tired; there was no "let go" in it. Philadelphia passed it on to Baltimore, Baltimore to Washington, and so on all the way around. And, thanks to that right hand of good fellowship extended by American florists, we had a great and glorious, interesting and instructive time.

R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., met us at New York. Why does he write "Jr." after his name? He carries the secret of perpetual youth in his person; no need to label himself "Jr." I have been his pilot more than once in European countries, and whither I went he was bound to follow or get lost in a strange country. He gave me "quid pro quo" in Maryland and Washington.

New York.

J. B. Nugent, Jr., took us in hand and worked like a Trojan, taking us here, there and everywhere, in and out the florists' stores, with a running comment of ready wit all the time, creating upon our minds most favorable first impressions of New York.

The New York florists' banquet was an inspiring sight, strengthening our favorable impressions of New York florists. We had now seen them at work and at play. They know how to do both. To me it was a grand treat to see, in the flesh, P. O'Mara, F. R. Pierson, H. A. Bunyard, C. H. Totty and others whose pictures I had "many a time and oft" admired, as they adorned the pages of The Review.

Philadelphia.

In Philadelphia, W. Atlee Burpee was geniality personified. Every word, look and action was eloquent of his welcome to the Quaker City, and his right-hand men, Howard M. Earl and G. W. Kerr, took their cue from their chief. Happy? Impossible to be otherwise when W. Atlee Burpee has the reins in hand.

J. Otto Thilow, of Dreer's, struck me as a born organizer, a keen business man and a genial soul withal. My confreres were heard to say, "Smart men in the seed trade of Philadelphia," and no one can dispute it.

Baltimore.

The Baltimore florists—sorry I cannot name them all—were a merry bunch. They gave us Maryland hospitality in right good style at White Marsh and in the Monumental City, also. Toastmaster G. H. Morris was a host in himself. It was a real pleasure to listen to his introductions. He knew his fellow florists and how to draw out the best that was in them. He even drew a maiden speech from one of the Britishers, a flower pot manufacturer, who discoursed on clay. The toastmaster kept everything in tune and the after-dinner speeches were not eclipsed at any point on our trip.

Washington.

In Washington it was our plan to see the Botanic Gardens, the capitol, the library and other buildings, then "fold our tents—and silently steal away," but the indefatigable R. Vincent, Jr., would have none of it. He got W. F. Gude on the 'phone, and—Hey! Presto! Automobile trip! Chamber of Commerce lunch and Florists' Club banquet were on our program before we had time to wink.

A treat it was, indeed, to be personally conducted over the Botanic Gardens by the grand old gardener, W. R. Smith; to marvel at his store of knowledge of plants, old and new; to listen to his ready wit and caustic humor, and to note the fire sparkle in his eye as he drew himself up to his full height in an attitude of "ring out the false, ring in the true," when a person or action came under his denunciation.

Fortunate, indeed, are the Washington florists to have such fine men as the brothers Gude in their ranks. W.

F. Gude, as president, would adorn any society. As toastmaster at the banquet in our honor, he was the soul of wit. From time to time, as he rose to speak, I gazed admiringly at his well poised head and manly form, and as his measured sentences, full of subtle humor, fell from his lips, I thought over and over again, "What a fine acquisition a few men like Gude in our florists' trade at home would be! They would raise the tone of the business all around in many towns."

Richmond, Ind.

Many Americans visit Europe annually. We do not always know what they are at home. They tell such tall stories of millions of dollars, hundreds of acres of this and thousands of feet of that, that we discount all they say. Some people call it "swank." E. G. Hill comes over here, but there is no "swank"; he goes in and out among us modestly and unassumingly all the time and at Richmond he is just the same. We were in his home, surrounded by members of his family, and right away he made us "at home" also. In his nurseries he had not raised in our minds anticipations of great things, but great things were there all the same.

Chicago.

We arrived before 7 a. m., but even at this hour Chicago florists rose to the occasion and met us at the depot. Messrs. Kohlbrand, Vaughan, Winter-son, Bruns, Henderson, West, Kanst and others all did their parts well and gave a grand reception. George Asmus and others, absent in Boston, were missed, but John P. Degnan—few of us knew his surname, he was known as John—proved an excellent deputy. John and his confreres left no stone unturned to interest and entertain us, and what we didn't see of Chicago is no fault of theirs. Sorry I could not personally visit the Poehlmann range, but it made a great impression on the minds of my confreres.

Boston.

George Asmus missed us in Chicago, but he was one of the first to shake hands in Boston, along with F. R. Pierson and Chester Campbell, who acted as our escort to the exhibition, and from the portals of the entrance hall we noted the British flag flying in honor of our visit. Regarding these gentlemen and Messrs. Roland, Sim, Farquhar, Peter Fisher, Robert Craig, S. J. Goddard and many others, I can only say they were all jolly good fellows. From sundry paragraphs in The Review I have seen Boston's hospitality associated with beans. I saw few beans, but Boston knows right well how to entertain the strangers within her gates. All too soon I said farewell to "the abodes of art, of luxury and taste."

New York Again.

Arthur T. Boddington, calm, collected, and H. A. Bunyard, demonstrative, made things hum for us on our last day in New York. Mr. Boddington received the rudiments of horticulture in England and took peculiar pleasure in entertaining us, presiding with tact and grace.

H. A. Bunyard is equally at home discoursing on cannas or cocktails, presiding at a banquet or mixing a salad, fixing a thousand-dollar order or a penny packet of sweet peas. The largest order he ever took was on a Friday, the thirteenth day of the month; it brought him no ill luck; he cannot answer for the man to whom he sold the goods.

The Boddington lunch over, we packed our trunks and boarded the Mauretania. But the hand of good fellowship is not yet gone. J. C. Scott, Elmsford, N. Y., comes on board, the last to say "good-bye," and the Mauretania sails away. Is all over now? No, not yet; another surprise! On entering my cabin I find a large box from William Sim, Cliftondale, and a letter from S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass. William Sim provided glorious sweet peas and antirrhinums for the adornment of our table from New York to Liverpool—the envy of our fellow voyagers. S. J. Goddard's envelope contained an American flag and a request to me to bring it back personally, concluding, "You will always be welcome under our flag." Mr. Goddard's sentiments were the sentiments expressed in words and actions all along the line, while our hand was within the grasp of the hand of good fellowship of the American florists, and certain I am of this: The sentiments are permanently recorded. J. S. Brunton.

A DES MOINES STORE.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made in the cut flower department in the downtown store of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines. The cut flower business is run under the name of the Iowa Floral Co. and is growing with the same rapidity that characterizes the retail flower business in all the cities in the great grain states.

MANSFIELD'S FIRST STORE.

With the development of the flower business, those who operate greenhouses in the cities of moderate size are finding it profitable to open retail stores in the business center; with flowers an article of every-day necessity to a constantly increasing number of people, the trade cannot be satisfactorily served from an establishment located as greenhouses usually are, in the outskirts.

In this issue there is an illustration showing the first retail store opened at Mansfield, O. The date of the opening was March 6 and the manager, Lee E. Berno, says that 4,500 souvenirs had been provided for the visitors, the supply running short before the closing hour arrived. The Berno Floral Co. is well known in the trade through Ohio, doing considerable wholesale business, as well as operating the retail end. The concern has something over 35,000 feet of glass on Foster street, Mansfield, and has fitted up the new downtown store in first-class shape. Business since the opening day has fully warranted the venture.

MORE ABOUT PRIMULA OBCONICA

I noted with interest the up-to-date article on page 12 of The Review for April 20, regarding Primula obconica. The writer says he was first introduced to the plant in England in 1888. I handled it first in 1890, while serving as an apprentice in a commercial place in the southern part of Sweden. As the plant was new and no one seemed to know much about it, it was kept in too low a temperature during winter and threw up a couple of small flowers once in a while.

I changed positions in the fall of the following year, going to a private place as first assistant gardener, having full charge of the greenhouses. In the cold graperies some hundreds of primulas were standing on shelves, among them a large number of obconica. The plants were full of buds and were fed weekly with strong liquid manure. As the plants did not seem to make any headway where they were, I placed them in the palm house, in a higher temperature, setting them on pots near the glass on the west side of the house. In about ten or twelve days the plants were covered with blooms, and I have never seen finer plants of the old variety of obconica.

I raised them from seed the following year and was equally successful in flowering them in the winter, keeping them at a low temperature during late fall and feeding them heavily with liquid manure while they were making their buds. Then I brought them into a warm house near the glass and forced them into bloom. They seemed to require rich soil. I used a soil containing one-third old, well-rotted horse manure, with plenty of sand, for the first potting. I flowered the plants in 4-inch pots. They seemed to grow best in coldframes during the summer, a deep frame with the high end turned to the sun and ventilation on both ends of the sashes being the best.

IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA

By a British Visitor.

In my three weeks' trip in the United States many impressions were recorded, some transient, some permanent. I hesitate to put some in writing or even to give them a place in my memory, as erroneous impressions are easily formed when all the circumstances are not apparent. Time did not permit me to substantiate all; therefore on some subjects I have still an open mind.

On one subject, however, I have no doubts; to me it was most wonderful; namely, the unbounded, genial hospitality of the American florists. Who we were and what we had accomplished to merit such cordiality baffled the wits of my fellow travelers and myself. Of the magnificent welcome accorded all around I have a permanent impression recorded.

Right Hand of Fellowship.

Upon our arrival in New York we were grasped by the right hand of good fellowship, and that same right hand kept its hold all the way from New York to Chicago, Chicago to Boston, and Boston back to New York. It never tired; there was no "let go" in it. Philadelphia passed it on to Baltimore, Baltimore to Washington, and so on all the way around. And, thanks to that right hand of good fellowship extended by American florists, we had a great and glorious, interesting and instructive time.

R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., met us at New York. Why does he write "Jr." after his name? He carries the secret of perpetual youth in his person; no need to label himself "Jr." I have been his pilot more than once in European countries, and whither I went he was bound to follow or get lost in a strange country. He gave me "quid pro quo" in Maryland and Washington.

New York.

J. B. Nugent, Jr., took us in hand and worked like a Trojan, taking us here, there and everywhere, in and out the florists' stores, with a running comment or ready wit all the time, creating upon our minds most favorable first impressions of New York.

The New York florists' banquet was an inspiring sight, strengthening our favorable impressions of New York florists. We had now seen them at work and at play. They know how to do both. To me it was a grand treat to see, in the flesh, P. O'Mara, F. R. Pierson, H. A. Bunyard, C. H. Tottv and others whose pictures I had "many a time and oft" admired, as they adorned the pages of The Review.

Philadelphia.

In Philadelphia, W. Atlee Burpee was geniality personified. Every word, look and action was eloquent of his welcome to the Quaker City, and his right-hand men, Howard M. Earl and G. W. Kerr, took their cue from their chief. Happy? Impossible to be other wise when W. Atlee Burpee has the reins in hand.

J. Otto Thilow, of Dreer's, struck me as a born organizer, a keen business man and a genial soul withal. My confreres were heard to say, "Smart men in the seed trade of Philadelphia," and no one can dispute it.

Baltimore.

The Baltimore florists—sorry I can not name them all—were a merry bunch. They gave us Maryland hospitality in right good style at White Marsh and in the Monumental City, also. Toastmaster G. H. MEYER.

Everyone in the wholesale cut flower section of New York knows Meyer, likes him, and will recognize The Review's photographer as having touched the button when his subject was in a characteristic attitude, with a box of his favorite flower under his arm. Indeed, there are those who will see in Meyer a modesty akin to that of the violet, for Meyer is so content to jog along on the road of good fellowship that some of those who know him best are not acquainted with his full name —Meyer Otile. To the trade he is Meyer. There is only one Meyer.

Mr. Otile—Meyer—is still one of the young men of the New York market, but he has had many years of experience. For twelve years he was with the firm of Gunther Bros., and later for six years with A. J. Guttman. When the corporation of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer was formed to take over the Guttman business Meyer became one of the incorporators and stockholders, since which time he has hustled harder than ever.

under glass, it would be wise to syringe them occasionally. C. W.

GERANIUMS ONCE FROZEN.

We had a fine lot of geraniums in 2-inch pots which froze for us about four weeks ago, and they dropped nearly all of their leaves. Then we used nitrate of soda to hustle them along and the third dose we gave them was too strong and of course they turned brown at the roots and the leaves, but now they seem to be growing again. Now, would you transplant them into 3-inch pots or feed them something to make them grow? They were taken out of the sand and potted February 10. Any information on this subject will be appreciated.

E. E. G. C.

You did wrong in applying nitrate of soda to the geraniums after the leaves were frozen off. No plants in this condition can take up liquid food. You must treat them carefully, or they will be valueless when the spring trade starts. I would advise taking them out of the 2-inch pots. Scratch the balls over a little with a pointed stick and place in 3-inch pots. Use no manure in the soil, except it be a little which is well decayed. Pass it through a half-inch screen. Add a little fine bone to the soil; a 3-inch pot to a bushel of soil will suffice. Pot firmly and stand the plants on a sunny bench, where they can have a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. Allow them to dry out well between waterings. Scratch over the surface soil if it becomes baked and remove dry, moldy or dead leaves twice a week. Do not spray the plants overhead. Ventilate freely. Do not feed with liquid manure at all, or you will spoil them. Spread out from time to time as they grow and avoid a close atmosphere. These may not make first-class plants, but they may be salable in early June. C. W.

DUTY ON IMMORTELLES.

W. C. Beckert, of Pittsburg, has been upheld by the United States Board of General Appraisers in a claim that yellow immortelles are simply "flowers, preserved or fresh," and not artificial flowers as described in paragraph 438 of the tariff law, the difference in duty being thirty-five per cent of the value of the goods; but the board rules that the duty of sixty per cent applies to colored immortelles. General Appraiser McClellan says:

"The importation consists of 3,500 bunches of immortelles, and the testimony of the importer shows that all of them, except the 125 bunches of yellow flowers, were either bleached or dyed before importation; that as to the 125 bunches of yellow immortelles they were natural flowers simply dried, and as to these the claim for duty at the rate of twenty-five per cent ad valorem under paragraph 263 is well founded and therefore sustained. The remainder having been artificially colored, they were properly assessed under paragraph 438, and the surveyor's action is to this extent affirmed."

Agawam, Mass.—M. S. Angleman, formerly employed at the greenhouses of Mark Aitken, in this town, has taken a position with N. F. Higgins, at Springfield, Mass.

Geraniums

SCENTED GERANIUMS.

About everyone who has a garden wants a plant or two of the scented-leaved plants and none are more popular than the scented-leaved geraniums, of which there is a considerable variety. The leaves of these are useful in finger-bowls for dinners, while the shoots are excellent for arranging in bowls in rooms. There is some commercial value to scented geranium sprays, there being quite a little call for them in the large markets, but the average country florist cannot afford to grow these as a winter crop to any extent, but in summer if he plants out even twenty-five or thirty plants from 4-inch pots in good ground, they will give quantities of shoots the whole summer.

Another use to which these scented geraniums can be put is in growing them on from year to year in pots or tubs, keeping them well pinched and growing them of specimen size for use in the garden or on the piazza. In England these are grown from year to year into specimens six to eight, or even ten feet across, and used as we would box or bay trees. That popular plant, the lemon-scented verbena, Aloysia citriodora, is another suitable plant to treat in this way. Nothing could be finer for old-fashioned gardens than these specimens of scented geraniums and lemon verbenas. In winter they can be carried over safely in any light frost-proof cellar and can be placed in the greenhouse early in April, in order to get a good growth on before the time comes to stand them indoors.

THRIPS ON IVY GERANIUMS.

I enclose a geranium leaf and shall be obliged to you if you will tell me what disease is troubling my plants and the remedy for it. When the geraniums are affected this way, all the leaves finally drop off. J. M. T.

The leaf of the ivy geranium shows unmistakable signs of the attacks of white thrips. As a general rule, geraniums are immune from red spider, thrips and aphids, but the ivy-leaved section, with leaves of thinner substance, are sometimes attacked, particularly when growing in a bright house near the glass. If the watering has at any time been neglected, so that the plants become dry, thrips would get a foothold on the foliage. They are most likely to appear on plants growing near the heating pipes.

Pick off the worst affected leaves and spray the plants with a nicotine extract, of which there are a number of good brands on the market. Directions for use generally come on each can. Use a fine spray nozzle and direct the water below the foliage. Repeat this operation three or four times, at intervals of forty-eight hours, and you should clean out the thrips. Moisten down the more arid parts of your house in future. As less fire heat will be needed from this time on, there will be less likelihood of the pests increasing, but as they breed fast during hot, dry summer weather, if you keep any plants

Carnations

GREIVELDING'S METHODS.

Practically all growers of carnations, chrysanthemums and other stock of like nature think it profitable to change the soil in the benches or beds, if beds are used, once a year. That this is not always necessary, however, is testified by the accompanying illustration showing a carnation house at the range of N. Greivelding, Merrill, Wis. Mr. Greivelding says that he uses no benches, growing everything in solid beds, and that he has not changed the soil for the last five years, and yet the flowers this year are as good as any previous year and some of the blooms measured four inches in diameter.

In describing his method of culture, Mr. Greivelding writes: "My beds are all twelve inches high; in some I made a ditch filled with stone for drainage, but I can see little difference in results compared to those without drainage. I give water according to the needs of the plants and never feed with liquid manure. First I use lime, then hardwood ashes, and follow these with sheep manure, bone, blood and a little sulphate of potash. Most of these I apply separately, but sometimes I mix them all together and use as a mulch. Most of the feeding is done in the spring, beginning about February 1 and continuing every two weeks. Of course the plants do not take it all up and what is left enriches the soil for the next year's plants.

"The first year my soil had green scum over it, the second year it was a little better, and the third year it was all clean, showing that the soil improved constantly. I have three beds of new soil and three and one-half beds of five-year-old soil and the plants in the old soil are quite a little the best.

"I grow my chrysanthemums the same way and will plant my dahlias for this summer in the same old soil. The soil is a clay, but not a heavy one. I throw out my carnations between June 15 and July 4, then spade over the soil and let it dry out well for ten days, when I again spade it over and leave it for another ten days. Each time it is left as rough as the spade throws it. At the end of the second ten days I water it well, put on rotted manure to a thickness of about two inches, mix it, level it, and plant the new stock. I grow about 5,000 plants in these varieties: May Day, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Dorothy Gordon, Alma Ward, White Perfection, White Enchantress, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Victory, O. P. Bassett and Scarlet Glow. I have some red seedlings of my own which I shall use next year in place of O. P. Bassett.

"I leave a second bud on the stems two or three inches below the main bud, and as I retail nearly all my flowers I find it useful in several ways. When funeral work is heavy we pick one bloom and have another one coming for future use, and when business is dull and one flower spoils there is the second one left on the same stem. This apparently does not hurt the plants, as we had blooms four inches across, and people buying the flowers like them much better because of the extra bud. I also have carnations with a double calyx that does not burst or split. I have crossed about 225 this year and now have the double calyx plants in three colors."

AMERICAN SORTS IN GERMANY.

We always read with great interest The Review's notes on carnations and look eagerly forward for each new issue. We are thankful for your many hints, and I should like at this time to give you, in return, some data about the growing of carnations here, in Germany.

In last year's introductions we found Mrs. Ward and Alma Ward to be the grandest carnations ever sent out. We had 2,000 plants of each variety and we found that both sorts did excellently under various conditions. In four months we cut four or five flowers per plant of Alma Ward and seven flowers per plant of Mrs. Ward, and we found an easy market for them at double the price we got for any other varieties.

Alma Ward is doing exceptionally well on solid beds in our new house, which is sixty feet wide. The color, with its lovely shade of pink, makes it a fine novelty, and in stem and size of flower it cannot be beat.

Mrs. Ward is a fine commercial flower, likely to displace all others in its color. Even Winsor and Rose-pink Enchantress are not able to stand against it. In color, size and productiveness it is all that the introducer claimed, and that means something.

We intend to grow next season 25,000 Mrs. Ward and 12,000 Alma Ward. We are dropping Aristocrat, Winsor, Afterglow, Rose-pink Enchantress and Alvina, to make room for the Wards, because they make us much more money.

Among other novelties, we like only Conquest. This seems to be a sport of Lawson, with its many good qualities. It is a nice little flower. Of the many other new-comers, none seems to do well in our climate. Neither Mary Tolman, Sangamo, Shasta, Niagara, J. W. Riley nor Admiration is good enough to stay with us. We need in this country both quality and fine color, on long, perfect stems. It would be far better for us if there were not so many new-

MEYER.

Everyone in the wholesale cut flower section of New York knows Meyer, likes him, and will recognize The Review's photographer as having touched the button when his subject was in a characteristic attitude, with a box of his favorite flower under his arm. Indeed, there are those who will see in Meyer a modesty akin to that of the violet, for Meyer is so content to jog along on the road of good fellowship that some of those who know him best are not acquainted with his full name.

Meyer Otile. To the trade he is Meyer. There is only one Meyer.

Mr. Otile—Meyer—is still one of the young men of the New York market, but he has had many years of experience. For twelve years he was with the firm of Gunther Bros., and later for six years with A. J. Guttman. When the corporation of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer was formed to take over the Guttman business Meyer became one of the incorporators and stockholders, since which time he has hustled harder than ever.

under glass, it would be wise to syringe them occasionally. C. W.

GERANIUMS ONCE FROZEN.

We had a fine lot of geraniums in 2-inch pots which froze for us about four weeks ago, and they dropped nearly all of their leaves. Then we used nitrate of soda to hustle them along and the third dose we gave them was too strong and of course they turned brown at the roots and the leaves, but now they seem to be growing again. Now, would you transplant them into 3-inch pots or feed them something to make them grow? They were taken out of the sand and potted February 10. Any information on this subject will be appreciated.

E. E. G. C.

You did wrong in applying nitrate of soda to the geraniums after the leaves were frozen off. No plants in this condition can take up liquid food. You must treat them carefully, or they will be valueless when the spring trade starts. I would advise taking them out of the 2-inch pots. Scratch the balls over a little with a pointed stick and place in 3-inch pots. Use no manure in the soil, except it be a little which is well decayed. Pass it through a half-inch screen. Add a little fine bone to the soil; a 3-inch pot to a bushel of soil will suffice. Pot firmly and stand the plants on a sunny bench, where they can have a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. Allow them to dry out well between waterings. Scratch over the surface soil if it becomes baked and remove dry, moldy or dead leaves twice a week. Do not spray the plants overhead. Ventilate freely. Do not feed with liquid manure at all, or you will spoil them. Spread out from time to time as they grow and avoid a close atmosphere. These may not make first-class plants, but they may be salable in early June.

DUTY ON IMMORTELLS.

W. C. Beckert, of Pittsburg, has been upheld by the United States Board of General Appraisers in a claim that yellow immortelles are simply "flowers, preserved or fresh," and not artificial flowers as described in paragraph 438 of the tariff law, the difference in duty being thirty-five per cent of the value of the goods; but the board rules that the duty of sixty per cent applies to colored immortelles. General Appraiser McClellan says:

"The importation consists of 3,500 bunches of immortelles, and the testimony of the importer shows that all of them, except the 125 bunches of yellow flowers, were either bleached or dyed before importation; that as to the 125 bunches of yellow immortelles they were natural flowers simply dried, and as to these the claim for duty at the rate of twenty-five per cent ad valorem under paragraph 263 is well founded and therefore sustained. The remainder having been artificially colored, they were properly assessed under paragraph 438, and the surveyor's action is to this extent affirmed."

Geraniums

SCENTED GERANIUMS.

About everyone who has a garden wants a plant or two of the scented-leaved plants and none are more popular than the scented-leaved geraniums, of which there is a considerable variety. The leaves of these are useful in finger-bowls for dinners, while the shoots are excellent for arranging in bowls in rooms. There is some commercial value to scented geranium sprays, there being quite a little call for them in the large markets, but the average country florist cannot afford to grow these as a winter crop to any extent, but in summer if he plants out even twenty five or thirty plants from 1-inch pots in good ground, they will give quantities of shoots the whole summer.

Another use to which these scented geraniums can be put is in growing them on from year to year in pots or tubs, keeping them well pinched and growing them of specimen size for use in the garden or on the piazza. In England these are grown from year to year into specimens six to eight, or even ten feet across, and used as we would box or bay trees. That popular plant, the lemon-scented verberna, Aloysia citriodora, is another suitable plant to treat in this way. Nothing could be finer for old-fashioned gardens than these specimens of scented geraniums and lemon verbenas. In winter they can be carried over safely in any light frost-proof cellar and can be placed in the green house early in April, in order to get a good growth on before the time comes to stand them indoors.

THRIPS ON IVY GERANIUMS.

I enclose a geranium leaf and shall be obliged to you if you will tell me what disease is troubling my plants and the remedy for it. When the geraniums are affected this way, all the leaves finally drop off. J. M. T.

The leaf of the ivy geranium shows unmistakable signs of the attacks of white thrips. As a general rule, geraniums are immune from red spider, thrips and aphids, but the ivy-leaved section, with leaves of thinner substance, are sometimes attacked, particularly when growing in a bright house near the glass. If the watering has at any time been neglected, so that the plants become dry, thrips would get a foothold on the foliage. They are most likely to appear on plants growing near the heating pipes.

Pick off the worst affected leaves and spray the plants with a nicotine extract, of which there are a number of good brands on the market. Directions for use generally come on each can. Use a fine spray nozzle and direct the water below the foliage. Repeat this operation three or four times, at intervals of forty-eight hours, and you should clean out the thrips. Moisten down the more arid parts of your house in future. As less fire heat will be needed from this time on, there will be less likelihood of the pests increasing, but as they breed fast during hot, dry summer weather, if you keep any plants

Meyer Otile.

Carnations

GREIVELDING'S METHODS.

Practically all growers of carnations, chrysanthemums and other stock of like nature think it profitable to change the soil in the benches or beds, if beds are used, once a year. That this is not always necessary, however, is testified by the accompanying illustration showing a carnation house at the range of N. Greivelding, Merrill, Wis. Mr. Greivelding says that he uses no benches, growing everything in solid beds, and that he has not changed the soil for the last five years, and yet the flowers this year are as good as any previous year and some of the blooms measured four inches in diameter.

In describing his method of culture, Mr. Greivelding writes: "My beds are all twelve inches high; in some I made a ditch filled with stone for drainage, but I can see little difference in results compared to those without drainage. I give water according to the needs of the plants and never feed with liquid manure. First I use lime, then hardwood ashes, and follow these with sheep manure, bone, blood and a little sulphate of potash. Most of these I apply separately, but sometimes I mix them all together and use as a mulch. Most of the feeding is done in the spring, beginning about February 1 and continuing every two weeks. Of course the plants do not take it all up and what is left enriches the soil for the next year's plants.

"The first year my soil had green scum over it, the second year it was a little better, and the third year it was all clean, showing that the soil improved constantly. I have three beds of new soil and three and one half beds of five-year-old soil and the plants in the old soil are quite a little the best.

"I grow my chrysanthemums the same way and will plant my dahlias for this summer in the same old soil. The soil is a clay, but not a heavy one. I throw out my carnations between June 15 and July 1, then spade over the soil and let it dry out well for ten days, when I again spade it over and leave it for another ten days. Each time it is left as rough as the spade throws it. At the end of the second ten days I water it well, put on rotted manure to a thickness of about two inches, mix it, level it, and plant the new stock. I grow about 5,000 plants in these varieties: May Day, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Dorothy Gordon, Alma Ward, White Perfection, White Enchantress, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Victory, O. P. Bassett and Scarlet Glow. I have some red seedlings of my own which I shall use next year in place of O. P. Bassett.

"I leave a second bud on the stems two or three inches below the main bud, and as I retail nearly all my flowers I find it useful in several ways. When funeral work is heavy we pick one bloom and have another one coming for future use, and when business is dull and one flower spoils there is the second one left on the same stem. This apparently does not hurt the plants, as we had blooms four inches across, and people buying the flowers like them much better because of the extra bud. I also have carnations with a double calyx that does not burst or split. I have crossed about 225 this year and now have the double calyx plants in three colors."

AMERICAN SORTS IN GERMANY.

We always read with great interest The Review's notes on carnations and look eagerly forward for each new issue. We are thankful for your many hints, and I should like at this time to give you, in return, some data about the growing of carnations here, in Germany.

In last year's introductions we found Mrs. Ward and Alma Ward to be the grandest carnations ever sent out. We had 2,000 plants of each variety and we found that both sorts did excellently under various conditions. In four months we cut four or five flowers per plant of Alma Ward and seven flowers per plant of Mrs. Ward, and we found an easy market for them at double the price we got for any other varieties.

Alma Ward is doing exceptionally well on solid beds in our new house, which is sixty feet wide. The color, with its lovely shade of pink, makes it a fine novelty, and in stem and size of flower it cannot be beat.

Mrs. Ward is a fine commercial flower, likely to displace all others in its color. Even Winsor and Rose-pink Enchantress are not able to stand against it. In color, size and productiveness it is all that the introducer claimed, and that means something.

We intend to grow next season 25,000 Mrs. Ward and 12,000 Alma Ward. We are dropping Aristocrat, Winsor, Afterglow, Rose-pink Enchantress and Alvin, to make room for the Wards, because they make us much more money.

Among other novelties, we like only Conquest. This seems to be a sport of Lawson, with its many good qualities. It is a nice little flower. Of the many other new-comers, none seems to do well in our climate. Neither Mary Tolman, Sangamo, Shasta, Niagara, J. W. Riley nor Admiration is good enough to stay with us. We need in this country both quality and fine color, on long, perfect stems. It would be far better for us if there were not so many newcomers every year, though there is plenty of room for new sorts of the right quality, especially in fancy colors. The English raisers have sent out some good things, such as Mrs. Hunter, from H. Burnett, Guernsey; it is quite up to the standard. In yellow we are still looking for a good flower, and we are also hoping sometime to find a good striped one. Otto Dellinger.

WEAK-STEMMED GARNATIONS.

Can you tell me what is the matter with my carnations? They look well and healthy, but the stems seem quite soft, as they lop over on the braces. I have given them lime three times, using about a peck of lime each time to a bed 7x80 feet. I have run a night temperature of about 50 degrees, quite frequently running as low as 45 degrees.

The blooms are quite large, many measuring three and one-half inches, but the stems are very weak. Can you tell me the cause and remedy?

E. P. M.

Without knowing more about the local conditions surrounding your carnations, I am sure that I cannot tell what may be the trouble with them.

At this time of the year, above all others, we expect to have no trouble with weak stems. Varieties which are inclined to have weak stems in the fall and early winter, now have stems strong enough to hold the blooms perfectly erect.

Your letter does not disclose anything which may be at the bottom of the trouble. Your temperature seems to be all right, except that it should not be allowed to run so low. That, however, would cause stiffness of the stems, rather than otherwise.

The lime also should have stiffened up the stems. You do not say, however, when this lime was applied.

Without knowing more about the circumstances, I hesitate to suggest remedies, but it is a safe proposition that plenty of water and abundant ventilation would do a great deal toward putting strength into the stems. Do not apply a heavy shade on the glass as long as the stems are weak. A very light shade will help to hold the color in the blooms, and that is all that you really want.

small sizes are all good for fern dishes.

It does not pay the small grower to raise any of these small ferns from spores. Although about all of them are easily raised, they are purchasable at such cheap rates from fern specialists that it is best to secure them in this way, and if fern dishes only are to be filled a supply procured in the fall is all that is needed. Any leftover plants can be either potted along and plunged in ashes in a well shaded coldframe in summer, or planted out in boxes on piazzas, where there is necessary shade. C. W.

GROWING FERNS IN FRAMES.

Would you please tell me how to prepare coldframes in summer for growing ferns? What size of frames is the most desirable and how should the soil be prepared? A. H.

We understand this query to have reference to the growing of small potted ferns in frames during the summer. Many of the frames used for this purpose are the ordinary coldframes, about one foot deep in front and about eighteen inches deep at the back, with a light framework raised about one foot above the walls of the frame, so that the plants may be protected from the weather by sashes, but still have a good circulation of air beneath the glass. The glass is shaded with a coat of whitewash or paint, to protect the plants from the full sunshine.

The bottom of the frame is covered with an inch or two of fine ashes or sand, on which to set the pots, and the chief point in culture is to watch that the plants do not get too dry. A soil that will grow good geraniums or coleus will answer for the ordinary varieties of ferns. W. H. T.

BEDDING PLANTS.

The weather being now warmer, many of the bedding plants, in order to relieve congested conditions in the houses, can go into coldframes. Geraniums, verbenas, fibrous begonias, fuchsias, ageratums, petunias, Drummond's phlox, salvias and other sorts will be as well, or better, in frames as in the houses. If plunged a little, all the better, as they will then need less water. On hot days the sashes can be removed entirely, but it will be unwise to leave them uncovered over night, or to expose them to soaking rains. Coleus, alternantheras, cannas, heliotropes and others of a more or less tender nature will still be better off in the houses, but should be gradually hardened. It is not too late now to propagate coleus and alternantheras. These will root in a fortnight and soon make nice little plants in pots for late sales.

Late sown seedlings grow fast now and the work of pricking out or potting off will occupy a lot of time. It is always best to do this work while the plants are comparatively small and before they crowd each other and become drawn. Look over the stock of annual climbers, such as cobæas, moonflowers, etc., and tie them up. If they once become entangled, it will take a lot of time and patience to unravel them. The sun is now quite powerful and small pots dry up rapidly. It will be necessary on bright days to look after the water several times. Never allow plants to wilt if it can be avoided.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Adiantums.

The sun is gaining in power steadily, and, in order to keep the fern fronds of a uniform dark color, additional shading will be required on the glass. The two most popular varieties commercially are A. cuneatum and A. Croweanum. The fronds of the latter possess more substance than those of the former, and if the two are used in design work it will be noticed that A. Croweanum keeps fresh when used in a cut state for design or decorative work longer than A. cuneatum. Neither variety will last over an hour or two if picked and used without being first placed in water for some hours. Wetting the fronds, wrapping them up in soft paper and storing them in a cool room will keep the fronds fresh a considerable time, but if weighted and immersed in water over night they retain their freshness the longest. Care must be taken, of course, not to immerse them in tin or zinc receptacles, or the fronds will turn black.

Plants which are grown in large-sized pots and which had a little rest during the winter will now have a dense crop of young fronds, and any not repotted will be benefited by weak doses of manure water once a week. Sometimes there is an opportunity to plant out narrow benches of adiantum, and in six inches of good loam they soon develop into strong plants. Where snails are troublesome, baits of lettuce or cabbage leaves or sliced potatoes will attract many. A dusting of fine salt or lime among the pots will kill many. Another plan is to remove the plants and soak the bench with boiling water. This, of course, cannot be done where the stock is planted out.

Polypodium Aureum.

The distinct bluish color of the fronds on Polypodium aureum always attracts attention. It is a robust grower and, like Cibotium Schiedeii, needs a good-sized pot when well developed. If it can be planted out in rockwork, so that its roots can ramify, it makes remarkably fine fronds. W. A. Manda showed a variety with more finely divided fronds at the late National Flower Show, under the name of P. Mandaianum, which found many admirers, the fronds being identical in color with the old P. aureum.

Miscellaneous Ferns.

Cyrtomium falcatum, commonly called the holly fern, is an excellent decorative plant, its tough fronds withstanding drying heat well. The newer Cyrtomium Rochfordii is a valuable acquisition also. Plants of this fern in 5-inch or 6-inch pots are salable, and a cool house suits it better than a warm one. Some of the pteris are good for fern dishes and Wardian cases. They also make nice bushy plants for room decoration. The variegated P. Victoriae is pretty, but more delicate than some others. P. Wilsoni, P. Cretica Mayii and P. Cretica magnifica are all excellent varieties of dwarf habit, with crested fronds, as is the finer leaved P. serrulata cristata. Aspidium tussimense, A. cristatum, Onychium Japonicum and davallias in

RAMBLER ROSES.

The bulk of growers now pot up their rambler roses in fall, but some wait until nearly time for forcing before so doing. A few only pot them up in the spring. This latter plan means more work on them in summer, but they will repay for the additional outlay, as they start earlier and break stronger than fall potted stock, and this is an advantage, especially when Easter comes as early as April 7, which is the date for it in 1912. Fresh field stock should be potted in 6-inch, 7-inch or 8-inch pots, according to their strength. Cut them down to within a few inches of the pot. Place in a sunny house, where they will soon send up an abundance of shoots. These will need reducing to three to five in number, the pink varieties especially being profuse in sending up new canes. Keep the shoots tied up and keep indoors until June. Then plunge outdoors, and if possible tie them to a light fence, so that the canes can be tied up so as to ripen well, and also get all necessary syringing to keep spider under control.

It was noticed in the east this season that few Crimson Ramblers were grown for Easter, but that there were large quantities of Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay, Excelsa, Hiawatha, a lovely single crimson, White Dorothy Perkins and Tausendschon. This latter was especially popular, and no one will make any mistake in potting up a good batch of it. For outdoor purposes it is also one of the best, as it withstands 5 to 10 degrees below zero without injury. We get occasional inquiries about a yellow rambler for forcing. Aglaia, the so-called yellow rambler, is sulphury yellow when expanding, later turning creamy white, and is not really a yellow at all. The so-called Blue Rambler will probably be tried next season. Its color, however, is not at all a popular one and few people will be likely to fancy it.

CHEMICALS FOR ROSES.

Can you give me some information as to the use of chemical fertilizers? Cow manure is becoming a scarce article and I should like to try some chemicals for my roses. The roses are in good condition. How many ounces of nitrate of soda to one gallon of water could be used without hurting them?

W. J. W.

Chemicals for roses must be used with extreme caution, or they will do a great deal more harm than good.

The largest and most successful rose growers prefer to buy good cow manure, paying in some cases as much as $8 and $10 per cord for it, rather than resort to chemicals. So many growers have ruined their crops by the use of bone, blood and bone and nitrate of soda that I rather hesitate to advise their use. Nitrate of soda, while stimulating and quick in its effects, is not a safe chemical to use right along. The growths, while strong to look at, are soft and wilt easily under strong sunshine, while the flowers also lack substance. If you cannot readily secure the cow manure, try liquid made from pulverized sheep manure. This is an excellent liquid.

In using nitrate of soda, one pound to fifty gallons of water is sufficiently strong. Instead of using a second dose of the nitrate, try a top-dressing of dried blood, following this with sheep or cow manure. If some imported soot is soaked with the latter manures, it will assist in keeping the foliage dark and lustrous. Bone in the form of top-dressings is sometimes used. Its qualities are variable and, unless in skilled hands, it is better left alone. Of course, top-dressings of cow manure are of great value, and even if you need to give a rather stiff price for your cow manure you will find this form of feeding and mulching preferable to chemicals. C. W.

BAYS AND BOX TREES.

Bays and box trees should now come out of the cellars, cold greenhouses or storehouses in which they have been kept for so long. Some of the box trees will no doubt look brown when first taken outdoors, but a good syringing and plenty of water at the roots daily will presently induce a crop of new, tender shoots to break out. Some of the bays will now no doubt have stretches of brown running over them. These will need careful trimming, and a syringing twice or thrice a day will soon clean the plants, and to improve their growth further remove some of the old soil from the tubs and give them a liberal top-dressing of loam and well-rotted manure, to which can be added some bone meal.

Other evergreen plants of doubtful hardiness in the northern states, such as green and variegated hollies, aucubas, Irish and English yews, bay laurels, Araucaria imbricata and any other coniferous plants, should now be placed outdoors. Play the hose on them freely to remove any dust and dirt, and keep well sprayed for the first few days.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Gladioli.

This is an excellent time to plant a good sized batch of gladioli to follow the earliest batch, which will now be well above ground. Plant the corms not less than six inches deep; later in the season eight inches will be even better. Do not place rotted manure or other fertilizers so that they can come in close contact with the corms, or the latter will be injured. It is too early yet to make the latest planting of gladioli; a month hence will answer well for that.

Nerines.

Nerines should now be placed in a coldframe, where they can get all possible sunshine. As soon as the foliage starts to turn yellow, reduce the water supply gradually. When the leaves have all turned yellow, lay the plants on their sides in a dry, sunny place for the summer. The same treatment suggested for nerines applies with equal force to Belladonna lilies. Apply liquid manure twice a week until the leaves are getting quite yellow.

Stevias.

If a sufficiently large batch of stevia cuttings has not yet been put in, there is yet ample time in which to root a number more. Pinch the tops out of the strongest plants of the early batch and be sure not to stand them where they can get any chill. Stevias are killed by the least breath of frost. If, instead of planting all the stevias outdoors, some are kept potted through the summer, or even put in boxes in six inches of soil, they will be better under control and more satisfactory in every way than the outdoor grown plants.

Annuals for Cutting.

A good sowing of a number of annuals can now be made outdoors. Mignonette can still be sown, but would have been improved had it been started two or three weeks ago. Such useful cutting subjects as larkspurs in shades of pink, white and lavender, lupines, giant candytuft, schizanthus, Shirley poppies and others should go in the soil as soon as possible, being sure the land is well pulverized first. Poppies are fleeting subjects, and in order to have a succession of flowers several sowings in the season are necessary. These subjects are steadily gaining in favor with the public.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is little change to record in the condition of the wholesale cut flower market. The supply of almost everything continues enormous. The only hope seems to be a lessening of shipments and at the present rate some things will soon be off crop. Roses especially have dominated the market, and these, with the lilies, keep the ice-boxes and cellars gorged, notwithstanding sales at $10 per thousand on unopened boxes of roses. Killarneys are exceptionally abundant. American Beauties and gardenias are on the street and selling at one-tenth their real value. Orchids and valley alone have escaped the humiliation.

Carnations never were finer or so little appreciated; $10 per thousand would buy the best of them April 29. Orchids are down to 50 cents for the best, and quite abundant. The weddings may keep valley and orchids steady; there are a lot of orders already booked for May and June. The southern gardenias are here in shoals. Of lilies there is no limit, and fine flowers actually sold last week as low as $10 per thousand; any time $3 per hundred would buy the best stock and many thousands at the week's end remained unsold.

This week probably will end the violet shipments. Dozens of boxes came down daily last week and were sold at 50 cents to $1 a box, unopened. Only the best of the sweet peas are selling. The fine tulips fetch 35 cents a dozen. Bulbous stock of all kinds is abundant.

Smilax is now arriving in larger quantity and the price is falling. Fancy ferns, however, are advancing and $3 per thousand is the asking price.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club will meet next Monday evening, May 8, at the Grand Opera House building, West Twenty-third street, at 8 sharp. An interesting program has been provided, and there will be exhibits and refreshments. The speakers of the evening are: J. McHutchison, on "South America"; A. T. Boddington, on "Bermuda"; W. B. Du Rie, on "The Teachers' Work for Floriculture"; A. Kakuda, on "Japan"; W. J. Stewart, on "The Aftermath"; M. C. Ebel, on "Insects"; Robt. Schultz, on "Roses." Walter Siebrecht, of Siebrecht & Siebrecht, has undergone two painful operations at the hospital for the removal of a dozen carbuncles from his neck. He is improving and hopes soon to be on deck again.

The warm weather of last week filled the seed stores with buyers, and the counter trade was immense.

May 1 was moving day with several of the wholesalers and retailers. James McManus is now at 55 West Twenty-eighth street, the Growers Cut Flower Co. is at 111, J. J. Fellouris at 116 and Kessler Bros. at 113.

Moltz will be married. The honeymoon will be spent in the Adirondacks.

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold its exhibition at the Museum building at Bronx park May 10 and 11. The exhibits will be cut flowers, open to all, and plants, open to non-commercial growers, and prizes will be awarded. Richard Richter is in charge.

The Yonkers Horticultural Society will have a social May 5.

Reed & Keller announce a new book of photographs of designs to be issued in August.

The bowling club commences on Friday evening of this week its elimination contest for membership on the team that is to represent this city at the Baltimore convention. Tuesday the Madison Gardeners' Club entertained a team from the New York seed houses, with Bert Chadwick in charge, and Toten, Scott and the Rickards brothers as assistants. Friday evening, April 28, the bowlers were Messrs. Lang, Nugent, Chadwick, Scott, Kakuda, Shaw, Holt, Manda and Will Rickards. Chadwick made the high score—199.

C. C. Trepel will open the flower department of Gimbel Bros. in Philadelphia in September. Mr. Trepel says his Easter sales in his three New York stores totaled over $75,000.

In the bowling contest Tuesday evening, May 2, New York defeated Madison two games out of three. The scores: Madison, 2,284; New York, 2,417. The New York players were Broton, W. Rickards, Scott, A. Rickards and Chadwick; the Madison players, Ross, Dunn, Manda, Plusch and Duckham. High score, 223, was made by Chadwick, who acquired the prize offered by the Revere Rubber Co. Rooting was by Totty, Herrington, Ebel, Schultz, Kakuda and Holt.

J. Austin Shaw.

CINCINNATI.

Announcement is made that P. J. Olinger and C. J. Jones have formed a partnership to handle the consignment end of the business heretofore conducted individually by Mr. Olinger since the dissolution of the firm of Weiland & Olinger. They also will handle a full line of florists' supplies.

Cleburne, Tex.—J. S. Boyd is building an additional house, 40x110, with concrete foundations. Business has been good and his supply of stock is inadequate.

Lawrence, Mass.—Thornton Bros., who have for many years conducted a flower and general art store in the Gleason building, recently announced their retirement from all lines except the flower and seed department, which they intend to enlarge.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There is still a bountiful supply of everything in the way of cut flowers, and as business is exceptionally quiet, a glutted market is the result. On Saturday the retailers filled their coolers and windows to their full capacity, decorated their stores elaborately, advertised special sales on all cut stock and then—"folded arms" and watched it rain.

Carnations were selling at 25 cents per dozen; roses, good stock, were going at 50 cents, and fine American Beauties at $4 and $5. "It is an ill wind," etc., and these ridiculously low prices will at least educate the people in buying flowers.

Various Notes.

Cleveland is to have a flower show! Not a little exhibition, but a great, big show, which will equal almost anything of its kind that was ever held in the country. At a joint meeting of the Flower Club and the Cleveland Florists' Club, April 24, the committee's report on the flower show was accepted, and a committee was appointed by the Florists' Club to meet with a like committee from the Flower Club and organize a board of control to further the plans for the show. Central Armory is the most favored place for the show, and November 13 to 18 are the dates.

The "greatest ever" is the report of the Easter business coming from most of the florists in the city.

The Florists' Club will hold a May party at the Chamber of Industry, May 11. A big crowd is expected, according to the report of Secretary Frank Friedley.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Better weather conditions are bringing in stock of all kinds in quantities that make it necessary to get rid of them in large lots, and that is what the wholesalers are endeavoring to do, but in order to do so it is necessary to have little regard for price.

There is no one thing that is scarce in this market, but there seems to be no complaint, since the wholesale houses get rid of their stock and the retail shops are all busy, especially those that handle seeds and plants. Since it rains every Saturday in this city, people are getting so accustomed to it that business goes right along. There were more good decorations last week than for a long time, but it is said there is not much booked for later than May 1.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has one of the new houses completed and will begin planting roses this week.

George Learzaf, of Mt. Washington, is the latest to secure an auto truck. His growing business makes it necessary to keep up with the times.

M. C. Dunlevy, of Carnegie, Pa., who for years was one of our prominent carnation growers but now is in the small fruit business, has the sympathy of his host of friends in the loss of his wife, who died suddenly Friday evening, April 28.

William Hamilton, for years superintendent of Phipps Conservatory, Allegheny park, died suddenly Tuesday night, April 25. He was attending the tourney given by the Knights Templar commandery and was just about to start home when he dropped dead. He was buried from the residence of his son, April 28. Hqo-Hoo.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business has assumed a steady gait since Easter, and while there has been considerable funeral work, the spring-like weather has helped to stimulate the demand for stock not included in the cut flower line. Especially do those engaged in landscape gardening report business rushing.

In the cut flower line there is no shortage; even the supply of American Beauties, which have been a scarce article heretofore, is again equal to the demand. All in all, stock is of good quality.

Various Notes.

The annual May party of the Milwaukee Florists' Club takes place May 11 at Miller's hall, corner of Eighth and State streets. As this is always one of the most enjoyable events of the season, we again expect to make merry at that time. The so-called "passive" members of the club would confer an honor on the entertainment committee by attending in numbers.

Mr. Leister is the new manager of the flower department of the Flora Bon. This department has been sailing in shallow water for some time.

Schneck & Bliese, of Waukesha, Wis., have dissolved partnership by mutual consent, and the business in the future will be the sole property of Fred Bliese. R. Schneck and family will move to Richland Center, Wis., with the intention of locating there permanently.

Gust Pohl is again bringing in sweet peas, which, owing to their fine quality, find ready sale.

Much credit is due the Mueller & Schroeder Co. for the way they grow snapdragons. They are among the best that come into this market and seldom see a second day at the wholesale house.

Even though the working force of the Aug. F. Kellner Co. has been doubled, this firm is compelled to work overtime in order to keep up with orders, which are coming in bunches.

The Kaiserin roses which come from the Brown Deer plant of the Holton & Hunkel Co. are of extra fine quality these days.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. reports business quite satisfactory and shipping trade on the increase.

At the W. E. Dallwig seed store it was said that the spring rush is on and that it keeps them busy working overtime.

The following North Milwaukee carnation specialists began to move their young stock into the field April 27: Nic Zweifel, A. Groth and Manke Bros. They all claim that the quality is the best yet.

Bowling.

Most of the local bowlers and rooters will journey to Chicago, Sunday, May 7, to play the return match game. About fifteen have already consented to go, and all arrangements are in the hands of Gus Rusch, so get particulars from him.

April 17 witnessed the end of the bowling season for the florists' league, and as the treasury showed a surplus of $35, it was offered as a prize for the bowling of the evening. Roy Currie had the highest single score, but Fred Holton made the largest number of spares, and the final total scores were:

F. Holton	545	N. Zweifel	448
G. Pohl	543	L. Manus	439
G. Rusch	542	J. Neubeck	431
R. Currie	521	R. Leitz	414
P. Nohos	512	I. Hare	386
A. Kellner	486	T. Cassidy	378
G. Hunkel	482	W. Halliday	369

BOSTON.

The Market.

Even with cool weather, such as we had until April 25, business was not at all up to the mark, but the immediate change from winter to summer conditions thoroughly demoralized the market. April 23 the maximum temperature was 38 degrees; April 27 it had jumped to 85 degrees, and held there for two or three days. July weather in April was altogether too much for the cut flower trade, and values simply melted away as the quantities of unduly forced and soft flowers arrived. Not for years has there been such a slump in April. Cooler climatic conditions have relieved matters a little now, but business remains dull.

Roses have increased in quantity as much as they have declined in quality. With prices cut in two, fakers can now get all they want at almost their own prices. Carnations are also down and out in popularity. As spring approaches buyers want a change and turn to other flowers, such as yellow marguerites, Spanish irises, Gladiolus Peach Blossom and a few other flowers seen in lesser quantities more suggestive of spring. Valley has sold fairly well; lilies and callas poorly. Pansies have been in heavy oversupply, and so have English primroses. Dutch bulbous flowers are nearing the end from indoors, and outdoor ones appeared this week. These have, however, sold slowly of late.

Pink antirrhinum has sold fairly well; other colors slowly. Pink lupines move well. Mignonette is now druggy, while stocks are little wanted. Sweet peas are abundant and as popular as anything on the list. Single violets are done, but a limited number of small doubles still arrive. Asparagus and smilax have each been selling well. Trade in bedding plants is starting in nicely, while flowering plants for store trade are now rather a slow sale. Hydrangeas are, however, in considerable demand for Memorial day trade.

Various Notes.

Mann Bros. have had a successful season with bulbous flowers, of which they handle some 750,000 bulbs. The prolonged cool weather in March and April retarded them nicely and helped their sale.

At the last club meeting the question, "What have we learned and gained by the late show?" caused considerable discussion. James Wheeler was of the opinion that a similar show in 1912 would attract double this year's attendance, but other speakers felt that it would probably be ten years before Boston tried a show again of like magnitude, the strain on the big exhibitors being too heavy to be repeated at short intervals.

John McFarland, of North Easton, has just broken up five acres of recently purchased land on Randall street, which will give him an abundance of excellent compost for his roses, chrysanthemums and other plants in future.

A number of the carnation men are this week getting their young stock out in the fields, the soil being now in extra fine condition for them.

Harry F. Woods, of Brookline, still has both single and double violets of fine quality not frame grown. He says he finds that by keeping a lot of the leaves picked off the singles and giving them an abundance of water, they bloom much longer than where the leaves are all allowed to develop.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 16, E. J. Shaylor, of Wellesley Hills, will speak on peonies. Mr. Shaylor has one of the finest peony collections in the country, and a talk from him should prove timely and instructive.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, and Seth Borden and Paul de Nave, of Fall River, are each sending in quantities of fine Cattleya Mossiae at present, with smaller lots of Mendellii and Schroederæ.

A week ago vegetation was almost as dormant as in midwinter. Now forsythias, magnolias, early spiræas and other shrubs are in full flower. Narcissi are almost at their best, and quite a few tulips are open. The jump in vegetation from a few days' tropical heat was almost electrical.

The question of whether or not hyacinths are poisonous came up at the last club meeting. The beautiful spring flowering bulbs have been banished from the Boston Public Gardens by the present city forester, D. H. Sullivan, the reason given being that they poison the hands and the soil. The only instance of poisoning given at the club meeting was by C. Van der Voet, who stated that in Holland decayed bulbs left in the soil poisoned it and a renewal was necessary. Peter M. Miller said handling Roman hyacinths caused a slight irritation. This, however, he found was due to a minute insect on the bulb. No other person present had known of any instance of poisoning, and the action of the Public Gardens' officials is generally looked upon as childish and utterly absurd.

There will be a prize exhibition at Horticultural hall May 20 and 21. Calceolarias, pelargoniums and bulbous flowers in variety will be special features.

E. H. Wilson, who was a welcome visitor at the last club meeting, returns to England in a few days. Mr. Wilson looks and feels well, but will have a permanent lameness as a result of his accident while on his last Chinese trip.

Henry M. Robinson is away in the south on a business trip. His firm is busy and constantly expanding its business, and is already preparing for an immense Memorial day trade.

William Penn is convalescing nicely from an operation for appendicitis performed April 24.

A. P. Calder, of Mattapan, president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston in 1890, when the S. A. F. convention met in Boston, rejoined the club April 25 and much enjoyed the first meeting he had attended in some years. He was heartily welcomed by many old friends.

D. J. Horrigan, of Foxboro, is one of the largest shippers of high grade yellow marguerites at present. These flowers are selling as well as anything in the market at present.

The Sutermeister estate, of Readville, reports an excellent bulb season. They are now busy getting their big stock of bedding plants in shape for spring sales, and have already sold a large number. W. N. Craig.

WATERBURY, CONN.

The Market.

The fine weather has brought stock on rapidly. The weather the last few days reminds one of summer. The conditions at the wholesale places are excellent as far as stock is concerned. There was plenty of it last week, but the demand was not so heavy as it was a month ago, though many weddings are taking place daily.

Sweet peas are not brought into town in large quantities, and the stems are not so long as the retailer would like to see, but they are quickly sold and there do not seem to be enough to fill all requirements. In other classes of stock there is little to spare, and the growers cannot complain of difficulty in disposing of it. Of course there is a great demand for funeral work.

In the surrounding towns much the same conditions prevail, and business in general is better than a year ago.

Various Notes.

Alexander Dallas has removed his greenhouses from Union and Willow streets to his new location at Mill Plain. Mr. Dallas intends to keep his greenhouse at West Side Hill.

The Flower Shop, 144 Bank street, reports a fine winter.

Walter Dallas has become associated with his father at his new plant at Mill Plain. B.

DENVER.

The Market.

The weeks following Easter have been fairly good, but not quite good enough to move all the stock that is being put upon the market. There seems to be an abundance of everything but sweet peas, and for these there is a heavy demand. Most of the peas are of extra good quality and, with the passing of the violet, are greatly in demand for corsage bouquets.

Beauties, carnations and roses are at a standstill, but perhaps when the Easter plants drop their blooms they will move more rapidly. Shipping trade has kept up wonderfully, and has been a source of much consolation to the wholesalers. Easter lilies are too numerous to mention. There are quantities of them, with no visible outlet, and the loss will be considerable.

Since Easter, some of the department stores that do not deal regularly in flowers have bought up job lots of plants, and have had special sales, cutting the prices almost to nothing.

Leucothoe sprays are fast coming into favor. It takes a little coaxing at first to get a customer to try them, but once he has used them he realizes their value, especially when fern leaves are so scarce.

Everyone reports a good Easter trade, which, in the majority of cases, ran slightly ahead of last year.

Florists' Card Party.

The second annual card party and dance of the Colorado Florists' Club, held Saturday evening, April 22, at T. M. A. hall, was pronounced by all to be the most enjoyable affair ever given by the florists of this city.

The hall was beautifully decorated with carnations, Easter lilies and snapdragons, and the orchestra was hidden by quantities of palms and potted plants. E. P. Neiman, of the Park Floral Co., did the decorating. The flowers and plants were donated for the occasion by various stores and greenhouses.

Dancing was enjoyed by many, and included a prize waltz. Card playing attracted others and prizes were awarded to the winners of the most games.

Punch was served all evening, and ice cream, pineapple ice and cake were passed around.

Nearly every retail store and greenhouse had a representative present and in some cases there were a dozen or more from one place. The hall was crowded, there being between 200 and 300 in attendance.

When it was time to go home, the guests were told to help themselves to the cut flowers that had been used in decorating, and it was really laughable to see how eager some of the retailers were to get a share of what was being given away. Perhaps they wanted it for a souvenir.

Several Colorado Springs florists came to town especially for the occasion. They were John Berry, Ed Johnson, W. E. Crump, J. Hagemeyer and Mr. Lovett.

The party was under the direction of A. H. Bush, and he and his able corps of assistants deserve a few words of congratulation on the success of the affair.

Various Notes.

J. L. Ennegon has purchased the New York Floral Co. M. Nichols finds it necessary to remain here for a few months, but he is now planning to go home "to the old country" when things are settled.

August Schenkel, one of Denver's pioneer florists, who at one time conducted the greenhouses now owned by Ben Boldt, died last week.

A mile above sea level seems to be too high for the majority of florists who come here from the east. The altitude has affected Fred Lienhart, of Chicago, who has been with Fred Hall about three weeks, and he is making preparations to leave as soon as possible.

People have queer ideas about funeral designs, but one was made last week that beat them all. It was for the funeral of a saloonkeeper and was made of one large and two small gates ajar, with the gates removed, the large design being in the center. The three arches were supposed to represent the back of a saloon bar. The florist was instructed to fill in the spaces between the arches with mirrors, to make it look more realistic, but some of the relatives came in and objected, so they were removed. The total length of the design was about eight feet.

A. H. Bush, of the floral department of the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co., reports that their Easter business ran from forty to fifty per cent over any previous holiday. This was probably due to the fact that so much additional space was given over to the flower department. The departments which occupied the Sixteenth street side of the old building had just moved into the new store, and with this added room, there was an opportunity to display the stock to better advantage and more room to wait on customers.

Two more store men have been added to the Park Floral Co.'s pay roll. They are W. A. Miller, formerly with the W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, Mo., and H. Schilling, of Indianapolis, Ind., a former employee of John Riegan and A. Wiegand & Son.

Mr. and Mrs. F. X. Goeschl are the proud parents of twin boys, born last week.

Visitors: Chas. F. Fawcett, Boulder, Colo.; Mr. Chapin, Lincoln, Neb.

M. R. J.

MERIDEN, CONN.

The Market.

This has been a strenuous week for Meriden florists, as there were quite a number of large funerals that called for the best the market could afford. Everything in the flower line was used. There have been numerous May weddings, but few big ones.

General trade is keeping up well. The demand for bulbous stock continues. The call for valley has been brisk, but there was plenty to go around. Sweet peas are not so good as they have been and the stems are getting shorter. The public has noticed this fact and, as a consequence, the demand is not so brisk as it has been. Carnations are fully fifty per cent better than they were two months ago. The growers still show an inclination to keep the prices up to what they were at Easter time, but the indications are that they will drop in price in a few days.

Various Notes.

Joe Greenbacker has a large showing of dark double violets and sweet peas. He reports an unusually active week, chiefly in funeral work and wedding decorations.

R. W. Barrow reported a heavy week. A fine window showing was made of potted plants and cut flowers.

The Blatchley Co. has been making fine improvements in the store on West Main street. Mr. Blatchley has been established in Meriden several years. This has been one of the best years in the history of his store.

Many of the local grocery stores have fancy plants for sale. B.

Saginaw, Mich.—J. B. Goetz & Sons are building three new houses, each 28x150, using the Garland iron-frame construction, and will plant them to cut flowers.

Rowayton, Conn.—Traendly & Schenck, the well known New York florists, whose greenhouses are located here, have begun the erection of a large addition to their range. A carload of glass has been received for the purpose.

Carbondale, Ill.—E. W. Plater, of Lilac Place, had the decorations and furnished the bouquets for the recent Whittlesey-Hypes wedding here. The bouquets were made up by a Chicago wholesale florist and shipped to Mr. Plater here, arriving in fine shape.

OBITUARY.

Jacob Rudesule.

Jacob Rudesule, a florist at Railroad and Ridgewood avenues, Glendale, Brooklyn, N. Y., died April 21, at the age of 69 years. He had been ill since February. His death was said to be due to cirrhosis of the liver.

George Engle.

George Engle, who had been engaged in the florist business at Xenia, O., for the last thirty-four years, departed this life at his home, Sunday, April 30. Mr. Engle for many years had been a great sufferer with kidney trouble, which finally terminated in Bright's disease. So great was his determination and ambition to take care of his business that he did not give up until two weeks ago, when he was confined to his bed. Through his honesty and uprightness of character he won many friends wherever he went, and all will be grieved to learn of his death.

George Engle was born in Germany, December 25, 1847, and came to this country when a mere boy, making his home in Xenia. He was married for the second time in September, 1892. His wife and one daughter, Esther, are left to mourn his loss.

Mrs. William Winter.

Mrs. Winter, wife of William Winter, of Kirkwood, St. Louis, Mo., died at her home in that city April 29. She is survived by her husband and four children. Many beautiful tributes of flowers were sent to the funeral by friends in the trade.

Mrs. Caroline O. Schilder.

Mrs. Caroline Oberer Schilder, widow of the late Martin Schilder, of Chillicothe, O., died at her home on West Fourth street Tuesday evening, April 25, as the result of organic heart disease. She had been a sufferer from the malady for several years, but was apparently in her usual health until almost the hour of her death. While she was frail in body, she was remarkably active for one of her age. She was born at Mannheim, Germany, June 10, 1830. At the age of 11 she came to this country, and was united in marriage to Martin Schilder in 1850. Eleven children were born to this union and seven survive the mother. They are: Sister Evangela, of St. Mary's of the Springs; Mrs. Frank Spetnagel, and Messrs. Edward, Charles, Thomas, William and Joseph, all of Chillicothe.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Roses are in good supply. There are plenty of Beauties for everybody. Carnations are abundant. The supply of lilies, both Harrisii and callas, is also good. There is some complaint about outdoor lilacs, as the foliage protrudes beyond the blooms on most of the old varieties. The Russian lilacs are good. There are few white lilac blooms to be seen. Sweet peas are plentiful, with prices about the same as previously. Trade last week was rather slow. Everybody is getting porch boxes ready. This city is noted for its porch and window boxes.

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

Various Notes.

School commencements will soon be due. A Walnut street flower shop sent to each of the teachers in the high school a package of six nice roses, with compliments for their past patronage. We believe this way of advertising pays well, if roses are plentiful.

Miss Hattie Jewell reports a nice business. Her display of Rex begonias is fine.

Miss Jennie Murray always has a good display in her show window.

A visit to the greenhouses of our florists proves that all are in good shape for a large spring trade. Quite a number have already delivered porch boxes, and some bedding has been done at this early date. It is hard to get some people to wait until May when we have such fine weather. Some of the florists here expect to ask $1.50 per dozen for their good geraniums, instead of $1, as last year.

The Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is well supplied with carnations and the stock of roses is good. Their geraniums are well grown and in excellent shape and size. Their stock of calla lilies is about the largest in the city. Large quantities of purple lilacs are handled here.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a pretty window last week; yellow and purple irises and ferns were the chief decorations.

Samuel Murray had an excellent display in his window, which caused almost everybody to stop and look.

Nelson Jarrett's two wagons of blooming plants can be seen every day in the market. His stock is good this year. Mr. Jarrett has given his personal attention to the growing end of the business all winter.

August Luther has two wagons that make daily trips to the market with bedding plants.

A. Arnold is on hand with two wagons loaded down with fine geraniums and pot roses in full bloom. He has no competition on roses.

W. H. H.

Maywood, Ill.—Rober & Radke, at 1712 South Fourth avenue, recently completed a new addition to their greenhouses. This firm was organized less than six months ago, by Ernst Rober and Martin Radke. Mr. Rober had previously conducted the business alone for about two years. They are quite pleased with the outlook.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus,
Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White
Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dornier, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

WHAT are you doing to advertise
Mothers' day? Nothing yet! Well, better get busy. Mothers' day is May 14 this year.

DON'T give Mothers' day a black eye by selling anything but the freshest flowers. No need to pickle at this season.
There will be enough without it.

WHEN a dozen British "horticultural traders," as they called themselves, visited the United States at the time of the National Flower Show the craft in this country found much pleasure in offering such entertainment as the hurried nature of the trip made possible. The leader of the party was J. S. Brunton, editor of the Horticultural Trades' Journal, and for The Review he has written his "Impressions of America." The opening article, in this issue, might better, perhaps, have been entitled "Impressions of Americans." In subsequent issues Mr.
Brunton will speak of the business aspect.

THE rose growers are busy with the early replanting of their houses. It does not appear that the Killarneys will be any less predominant than in the season now drawing to a close. In fact, Bride and Maid will be dropped in many of the not large number of places in which they were retained last year. My Maryland also will be cut down on. Golden Gate and Uncle John will share a like reduction. Cardinal and Rhea Reid will occupy little space. But Melody, Prince de Bulgarie and Mrs. Aaron Ward will get space for thorough trial, and so will several sports of the Killarneys.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

There has recently been organized in England the National Gladiolus Society and I am informed by the secretary, K.
Atkinson, Locksheath, Southampton, that they are working much along the same lines as the A. G. S. and will gladly coöperate with us for the mutual interest and advancement of the gladiolus. I hope to give at an early date further particulars of this new society. Now then, Germany and France, all together, and an international society for the gladiolus is here.

The Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, has offered for our Baltimore exhibition a silver cup valued at $25, to be awarded for the best twenty-five spikes of the new gladiolus Kunderdi Glory, exhibited in one vase.

L. Merton Gage, Sec'y.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

At the Boston exhibition a matter was suggested in regard to the permanent registration and record by the American Rose Society of all the roses that had been originated in America for the last twenty-five years and to embody the list as a permanent record in the next bulletin. During the last two years records have been received of several new varieties or sports, and the same have been published. We want to go further than that and gather an accurate record of all the roses and the stock from which they were obtained and place the same in a book of registration for general information. This idea was suggested to the secretary and, in speaking with a few rosarians, the plan was deemed an advisable one to carry out, if possible, and therefore I would ask all parties who may have any accurate information bearing on this subject or who may be the originator of a new rose to file a statement with the idea of compiling an accurate list and publishing the same by the American Rose Society.

Benj. Hammond, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There have been few times in the history of this market when the over-supply has been so unwieldy as in the last fortnight, but May day, though it was wet and the coldest in many years, gave evidence of the approach of a change in the market situation. Apparently crops are going off, and values have been so low that growers are hastening the work of throwing out for replanting. The result will be before many days have elapsed a return to something like the normal spring condition. Already orders from out of town are on the increase.

It is interesting to note that in spite of the overstocked condition of the market sweet peas have been steadily in excellent demand, with first-class prices prevailing, in accordance with quality, and the possibility of selling more than were received. The sweet pea has had a wonderful appreciation in popular favor. The Butterfly peas, as the Spencer varieties are locally known, are being received in greater quantity, but the supply has been held in check by several days of cold, dark weather. With the return of spring sun there will be a quick jump in the production, prices undoubtedly will come down and there will be peas for everyone. Valley has recovered from the few days' shortage and is now equal to the demand. Cattleyas also are much more abundant.

The quality of the spring crop of Beauties is doing something to make up for the winter shortage. Beauties never were finer and there is so great an abundance that the retailers are again running each other to see who can sell the largest quantity at the lowest margin of profit; they are buying high priced space in the daily newspapers to offer cheap Beauties, in some cases at $4 per dozen for the best.

In the last week it has been simply impossible to move the rose receipts through the regular channels. After the needs of the regular buyers have been supplied the greater part of the day's receipts have remained, to be forced out by any device the whole-salers' ingenuity could suggest. There has been considerable waste. The quality of roses is fine. This week pink shows a tendency to shorten, but there is plenty of white.

Carnations have been in oversupply equal to roses, but there is apparent a tendency toward reduced production and white especially is demanding a little better prices. The wholesalers are receiving many inquiries and orders for Mothers' day. The principal call is for white carnations, but in most cases the wholesalers do not care

CARNATIONS

DAY

Buyers who want to feel that they are in touch with the largest supply and best quality of stock should order of us. We ship regularly to the most distant customers, to the most critical customers and supply the biggest buyers all through the middle west, from Canada to the Gulf. That shows how our Carnations carry. We can meet your needs on quantity, quality or price. Let us show you.

Beauties

We are now getting the largest cut of Beauties of the season and the quality is as fine as the crop is large. Can supply any length in quantity. Beauties have been so scarce the last three months that you will find your customers hungry for them. Push Beauties and call on us to furnish the stock. Prices are low, especially low for such fine flowers, and you can do a great deal now to work up your trade on Beauties. Don't let the chance slip. We always can supply you.

ORCHIDS

We are cutting a big crop of Cattleyas and they are fine; we can fill all orders on short notice.

SWEET PEAS

These fancy, long-stemmed Peas of ours are about the most popular flowers now in the market—they're so fine and so fragrant they sell like the proverbial hot-cakes in all the retail stores. Nothing better liked for corsage bouquets, for table centerpieces or other fine work. We still have the Winter-blooming varieties in their best condition and are handling increasing quantities of the Butterfly varieties. All colors. These ship well. Order some today. You'll want more of them.

Killarneys

There are no roses like the Killarneys, white and pink, and there are no Killarneys like Randall's—our supply always is large and fine, but just now it's even larger and finer than usual. Long, perfect buds on all lengths of stem; splendid color, clean foliage, strong stems. We are shipping these regularly to retail stores as far away as Spokane—and that's as convincing a test of quality as any we know of short of ordering some to see for yourself. Prices now are low.

VALLEY

There is in this country no better Valley than that we always can supply. Telegraph and we ship on on next train—any quantity.

to take orders for white alone. It is noteworthy that practically every order says the stock must be first-class or it is not to be shipped at all. The last part of next week will see a first-class market for really good carnations, with scarcely any outlet for soft and sleepy stock. The growers should take heed; it won't do to pickle.

The supply of Easter lilies is scarcely less than last week, and callas are equally unsalable. The bulbous stock has pretty nearly seen its finish and only now and then is there a box of violets, and such as there are could be spared. Snapdragons are abundant and fine. Iris is everywhere and selling at extremely low prices. The lilac from the south is extremely poor. A few peonies come in. Cape jasmine has arrived and there is no danger of any scarcity developing.

Southern ferns have come and the holders of cold storage stock that is not keeping any too well indicate a willingness to clear out at some concession from the prices which have been prevailing.

April Business.

April, of course, makes an excellent comparison with the record of the month for last year, because Easter was included—in 1910 the festival was in March. Stock has been more plentiful this year than it was in April, 1910, and prices have averaged lower. Demand, except for a few specialties, like sweet peas and valley, has not been so strong as it was last year, but nevertheless an extremely large business has been done, else so great a quantity of stock never could have been moved.

Taking March and April together to get a comparison that includes Easter in both years, the two months this year gave quite a little better total of sales than in 1910, for most of the wholesale houses, but it is doubtful if the increase in money was as great as the increase in glass, and there is agreement that the average value of flowers was lower this year than in March and April last year, the crops having been considerably heavier.

W. E. Lynch severed his connection with the establishment of E. H. Hunt, May 1, after ten years in charge of the cut flower department there. Mr. Lynch has an extremely large list of acquaintances and friends who will regret his departure from the market, but they will be pleased that he has in prospect the organization of a company to bear his name and engage extensively in the growing end of the business. Mr. Lynch's plans are not far enough along for him to make any announcement, but it is understood that an excellent tract of land has been secured at Twenty-second street and Harlem avenue and arrangements virtually completed for the immediate erection of 50,000 feet of glass.

A young man introducing himself as Mr. Thorley, Jr., of New York, called on some of the wholesalers May 1 and stated that he will open a flower store in the Hotel La Salle and in the Blackstone. John Mangel, who has the flower booth in the Blackstone, said he didn't know anything about it.

That two sisters should marry two brothers is so unusual that a wedding in the family of George Reinberg May 3 is attracting much attention. A couple of years ago Mamie Reinberg married Paul Grabenkrueger, and by Wednesday's ceremony his second daughter, Henrietta, became the bride of Arthur Grabenkrueger. The wedding took place at St. Gregory's church and was largely attended, many of those in the trade being present. Under the name of Krueger the groom has caught in semi-professional baseball for several years and one season was with the White Sox.

G. Swenson, at Elmhurst, has what he thinks will prove a treasure in a winter-flowering form of the Countess Spencer sweet pea. He has had it bloom since early January, but has not cut the flowers, so that he has quite a quantity of seed for next season's planting. The E. C. Amling Co. says Suppose, Mr. Retail Florist, it is May 29 and a customer stands at your counter.

On the counter is a bunch of twelve good Peonies. In another vase there are twelve roses, and in still another vase twelve carnations.

The Peonies cost you 5 cents each flower, the Roses 8 cents and the Carnations 4 cents. Put your own selling prices on them.

Which does the customer select?

The Peonies, practically every time.

The modern Peony is as fine as any rose. It's as big as several carnations, and it makes a showing for the money unequalled by any other flower.

That's why the Peony is the big special item of the Decoration Day demand.

Up to and including May 20, we are booking orders for first-class Peonies, pink and white, mixed, for Decoration Day shipment at the guaranteed price of $5.00 per 100.

Last year and the year before, when Decoration Day came, such goods were selling at from 8 cents to 10 cents.

We don't know what the price will be after May 20 this year, but the chances are the only chance you take is in not ordering enough while the guaranteed 5 cent price is open to you.

That's till May 20.

To The Trade

WE have concluded arrangements with one of the largest Foreign producers of prepared Natural Magnolia Leaves, which places us in a position to offer the same at a special low rate to the trade for imported leaves.

Magnolia Leaves are gradually taking the place of galax leaves and in many instances are used by the leading florists on account of their beautiful appearance and lasting qualities. Floral designs can now be mossed and made up of Magnolia Leaves and kept for any length of time, and are always ready for immediate shipment or use. Designs of Magnolia Leaves may be decorated with fresh flowers in a simple or in an elaborate way.

The keeping qualities of the Magnolia Leaf renders it more economical in use than the perishable galax leaves, as there is absolutely no waste.

These Magnolia Leaves are imported by us in bulk and repacked in substantial cartons, thus enabling us to offer them at the following low prices:

1 carton of about 1000 leaves,	$1.75 carton
5 carton lots and over,	1.50 carton

Mayor Harrison issued a Mothers' day proclamation, but he didn't say a word about flowers. Probably he thought boosting the florists' business would look too much like paying political debts to his campaign manager, Peter Reinberg. There's a disadvantage in having a seat too near the throne.

L. H. Winterson says that April 29 was the biggest day in the history of Winterson's Seed Store. Joe Curran is helping out during the rush.

The Busy Bee Floral Co., at the corner of State and Monroe streets, went out of business May 1. This was one of the biggest buyers in the market when stock was cheap. It is said the rent for the tiny store was $1,000 a month. Since the city authorities prohibited selling on the sidewalk, the rental was not justified.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There are enough flowers coming into the city to satisfy all the shipping and local orders many times over. To dispose of the surplus new buyers are created, buyers never heard of when supply and demand are evenly balanced or only figuring in a small way. These buyers buy in quantity, usually carrying off stock that will not satisfy the regular customers, and paying cash for it. The extraordinarily hot wave that has just passed over this city put many of the cut flowers into their class, so to speak, not good enough for the florists but attractive to these special buyers at special prices, and the volume of business has been large. The cooler weather now prevailing has toned the market, improving the quality and preventing that overripeness ruinous to the value of any flower.

The features of an overstocked market are the really good prices realized by select stock, the surprising way in which the market is taking Beauties now that the lower level of prices has been reached, and the appearance of the first outdoor flowers, lilac and tulips. There are some additions to the indoor lists, too. Spanish iris, I believe this was indoor grown, and baby gladioli have made their appearance. Blue cornflower, too, has made its reappearance, presumably indoor grown, and German ten weeks' stocks have come prominently to the front, though not new. A soft shade of lavender and white are especially pleasing.

The closing days of April saw much business; weddings, parties, store openings, funerals and that miscellaneous demand that comes from the love of something bright and fresh in spring-time, a love often satisfied by a bunch of flowers at the street corner in our crowded city.

Kaiserin, Maryland and Bride are gaining ground on all but the best grown Killarney, and Richmond of finest quality is no longer preferred to Beauty. Carnations have found a market in most cases at some figure, often one best mentioned only in a whisper;

the Wards lead, as they have done throughout the season. Sweet peas, a strong factor during the last days of April, are not so much favored these early days of May, but sweet peas are still good stock at lower prices. Violets have held surprisingly well.

The supply of valley has been reduced, the forcers deeming May a good time not to have too many. Valley has made a splendid record through April. Cattleyas have dropped back; a new variety, Gaskelliana, I think, has come to the aid of Mossia. Gardenias are plentiful, for they do not sell. Easter lilies are probably the least sought flower on the list. The quantity of lilies that missed Easter is remarkable, considering its lateness this year. Their number seems legion, there is no sign of abatement, and nobody wants them in quantity. Disposing of small lots of Easter lilies when quantities are in the way is a vexation. Callas have held surprisingly long; they are still good and meet with moderate favor. Yellow daisies are popular, not so the white. Daffodils, Emperor and bicolor, are to be had in splendid form. Indoor white lilac is good. Mignonette continues fairly abundant. Pansies are in brisk demand. The members of the green list are popular to a degree unknown to

STATE COLLEGE, PA.

The last week in April the Department of Horticulture and the Penn State Crab Apple Club, the horticultural student organization of the Pennsylvania State College, managed a flower show that was decidedly successful. Floriculture is rapidly coming into prominence in the college, and the show did much to arouse interest on the part of the students and the general public.

The exhibition was staged in the service room of the new greenhouses. The center of the room had a long table upon which were the roses, the center of interest to most visitors. The sides were given over to the carnations and pot plants.

Myers & Samtman, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., sent a magnificent display of American Beauty roses, My Maryland and Hilda roses. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. made the largest display of all. Included in it were fine Richmond, My Maryland, Killarney and White Killarney roses; Lawson, White Enchantress, Winsor, Enchantress and Victory carnations. S. S. The Market.

The market last week was overcrowded; worse, in fact, than it has been since aster time. Roses, carnations and bulb stock were most in evidence. Carnations were so plentiful that it was impossible to find room to vase them and they sold as low as $7 and $8 per thousand. Roses in fine color and stem brought $10 and $15 per thousand. Short-stemmed peas were also plentiful, but the better ones were cleaned up well. Low prices prevail in almost everything. Funeral work has been good and has cleaned up considerable stock, but the supply is too great.

Summer weather lasted the entire week and as a result outdoor stock has made a big jump, which should make stock good for Memorial day. Outdoor jonquils and tulips made their appearance on Saturday and will no doubt come with a rush from now on.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club will hold a meeting shortly and, in connection with it, will hold a show for the ladies. The views from the Boston show will be re-

The Market.

Trade was fairly good here last week, and flowers are in good supply. The demand for them is fair, as funeral work has been good and used up large quantities. Carnations now retail at 50 cents per dozen, roses at $1.50 per dozen, snapdragons at 75 cents per dozen, tulips and daffodils at 50 cents and 35 cents per dozen, double Murillo at 60 cents per dozen and sweet peas at $1 per hundred blooms. Violets are about gone. What few are left retail at $1 per hundred blooms. Alyssum helps out considerably. Plant trade is fair, but a great many of the department stores are selling rose bushes, shrubs, etc., at extremely low prices. Pansies and daisies retail at 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen roots. There are now two fakers selling flowers on the street, one at 25 cents per dozen and the other at 2 cents each, thirteen for 25 cents, but these flowers are short lived. The weather here is warm.

Various Notes.

The Star Store last week gave 20,000 catalpa trees away. It was a common sight to see people on the street with these little trees. With each tree was given full directions for planting. No public planting was done here on Arbor day.

R. H. Woodhouse is cutting some elegant Fair Maid carnations.

William P. Peirce, E. H. Chamberlain, William H. Davenport and R. E. Nofftz are making nice window displays.

The Market.

The run of business for this spring is showing quite a satisfactory increase over previous years. The demand for shrubbery and hardy herbaceous plants is much heavier than for the corresponding season last year, and indications are for an especially large run of sales in all sorts of bedding stock. The locally grown young stock, now showing up in the market, is of excellent quality and will probably need replenishing from outside sources before the close of the season.

The sales in cut flowers hold about steady, with stock of fair quality and plenty to meet the demand. Local carnations are dropping off slightly in quality and quantity, while the last of the bulb stock is represented in the final display of Murillo tulips and Emperor narcissi. Some good cut snapdragons and Easter lilies are being shown.

The Easter trade compared favorably with that reported from other sections, the increase over last year being from thirty to fifty per cent. Locally grown stock was all good; lilies exceptionally so. Shipped cut flowers were good, with the exception of some carnations, which proved a disappointment.

Various Notes.

The Mueller greenhouses are laying hollow sub-irrigating tile under several acres of their ground, which will be devoted to growing their summer flowering crops and next year's carnations.

Norval Kline has taken over the business of C. M. & S. E. Luther, Lawrence, Kan. CHICAGO NOTES

J. B. Deamud was at Carbondale April 27, visiting E. W. Plater.

Frank Hagen, of George Reinberg's store force, has been on the sick list for several days.

William Johnson, formerly shipping clerk for Vaughan & Sperry, is now with O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co. His place with Vaughan & Sperry has been taken by W. W. Goodel, of Cleveland.

H. N. Bruns says that without doubt last month brought "the biggest April business on record."

Frank Felke, at Wilmette, says he picked 37,000 sweet peas Easter week, being about the end of his crop of winter-bloomers. He is now picking the first of his crop of Spencers. The greater part of his output is handled by the J. B. Deamud Co.

A. L. Randall Co. last week received the first cape jasmines of the year, fine stock. The season in Texas appears to be nearly three weeks earlier than last year. Mr. Randall spent Sunday on his farm in Michigan.

W. J. Keimel is one of the committee in charge of the Elmhurst booth at the real estate show now in progress at the Coliseum. The American Metal Box Co. has an exhibit of self-watering lawn vases and window and porch boxes and Vaughan's Seed Store two attractive displays, on each side of the entrance.

Fred Lautenschlager, first Chicagoan to start for the National Flower Show, was the last to return. He got back last week, having made a month's trip among eastern boiler buyers for Kroeschell Bros. Co.

Bowling.

The bowlers finished their league contest April 26 with the following standing:

Team.	Won.	Lost.
Orchids	60	21
Carnations	40	41
Roses	33	48
Violets	29	52

The individual averages of the ten high men, each of whom got a piece of the money, were as follows, dropping the fractions:

A. Fischer.....171	J. Friedman.....160
A. Zech.....167	W. Wolf.....157
J. Zech.....161	W. Graff.....156
L. Farley.....160	J. Huebner.....154
F. Ayers.....160	J. Degnan.....153

The Vaughan & Sperry silver cup for high average went to Al. Fischer, and he and each of the five other highest individuals got a silk umbrella, donated by the John C. Moninger Co. Fischer also won the fob donated by George Asmus for high game, 245, and the prize for the high average in three games, 207.

The high average man on each team got a stickpin, donated by Poehlmann Bros. Co. They were: A. Fischer, Roses; John Zech, Orchids; J. Friedman, Violets; A. Zech, Carnations.

The members of the Orchid team divided the money for high team game, 921, and for high average for three games, 860.

It was a most successful winter season, and the boys are sorry that it is over.

Sunday, May 7, the Milwaukee bowlers and rooters to the number of fifteen or twenty will arrive about 11 a. m. on the North-Western. The local bowlers will meet them with automobiles and try to square accounts for the hospitality shown them at Milwaukee a few weeks ago. Dinner will be served at the Hofbrau, bowling will follow at Bensinger's and later there will be a luncheon. All in the trade are invited to participate.

The Market.

The market was much overcrowded all of last week with almost everything the trade wanted, and at low prices. The retail trade suffered somewhat owing to continuous rain storms from Thursday to Monday, making five days of rain. The wholesalers all have the same story—plenty of stock of good quality, low prices and little demand, with white stock selling better than colored.

Long, fancy Beauties are abundant and sell as low as $2.50 to $3 per dozen. Other roses, too, are arriving in great quantities, especially the different Killarneys. Richmond, Carnot, Ivory, Bride and Maid, good stock, were sold as low as $3 per hundred. Carnations, also, were a glut in many varieties, and in big lots they were sold at low prices. Lilies are still a big glut; so also are callas and sweet peas.

Cape jasmine buds and peonies are coming in; also an abundance of outdoor lilac, both white and purple, and plenty of fine valley. Outdoor valley sells cheap and the large consignments were expected to continue another week.

Judging from the society news in the local papers, there will be a number of good sized weddings for this month, which should bring some good business for the florists.

The local greenhouse men had a hard time of it last week, as scarcely any outdoor work could be done, owing to the hard rains. Little, if any, planting out was done. The first day of May was ushered in with a cold wind and fires had to be started, as the weather man said there would be frost by night.

last two years in the city forester's department, has been named city forester to succeed Andrew Meyer, Jr., who has held the office for the last four years. The appointment was pleasing to the local trade, as Mr. Koenig was the right man for the position.

Woerner Bros.' roses, Killarney and Richmond, are coming in fine shape, and their cut is large. Weber & Sons' rose crop, too, is in full blast and of extra good quality.

Mayor Kreisman has sent in with his other appointments the name of Dwight F. Davis for park commissioner, to succeed Phil Scanlan. Mr. Davis, like Mr. Scanlan, is a millionaire club man and will, no doubt, make an excellent commissioner. He will appoint a superintendent when he takes his office; a number of applications have been sent in.

Frank Fillmore was presented last week with a handsome silk umbrella by the members of Hickory Council, Royal Arcanum, for faithful service as Deputy Grand Regent during the last year.

The bowling leagues will close this week. Those in the trade who bowled in the various leagues are C. A. Kuehn, Carl Beyer, George Schriefer, Fred Regan and J. J. Beneke. All have good, big averages and some of the league prizes will fall to them when distribution time comes.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has issued a large and well gotten up spring price list of all the good things they have in stock, and it is fully illustrated. Mr. Smith says their shipping trade has been large of late.

C. A. Kuehn received last week large shipments of lilies of all kinds; also the first cape jasmines and peonies of the season. His stock in all lines was plentiful all the week.

When Mayor-elect Chas. B. Lambert, of East St. Louis, took his seat May 1, he was presented with a 6-foot floral horseshoe by his friends. The design was finely executed by Ammann & Johann.

The many friends of William Winter, of Kirkwood, extend him their sympathy in the loss of his wife. Mrs. Winter died April 29 at her home in Kirkwood. Besides her husband, she leaves four children. Brother florists at Kirkwood were the pallbearers. Many beautiful floral designs were sent by friends in the trade.

ciation, through its attorney, Randolph Laughlin, drew up a bill prohibiting crepe pulling. It was presented for the first time to the house of delegates last week by Delegate Lawton. In the bill a house of mourning is defined as "a place of human habitation, whether house, flat, apartment, tenement or other residence, in which someone has died within four days preceding and which has on its front door crepe or some other like emblem of bereavement." The solicitation is made a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $25 or more than $500. The florists who do not depend for their business on crepe pulling hope the bill will pass when it comes up this week.

D. D. P. Roy, of Chicago, visited the trade here last week. Julius Dilloff, of Schloss Bros.' ribbon house, New York, also spent a few days with the trade, with good success. J. J. B.

The Market.

Trade has been a hummer ever since Easter. Flowers have been plentiful and selling well. There has been a shortage on Beauties. Outdoor spring plants are coming in plentifully. Pansies are fine. The outlook is for a good and busy spring. Peonies and lilac have been kept back and seem out of danger from frost.

Various Notes.

April 27 the Omaha Florists' Club held one of the most interesting meetings in its history at the Metropolitan Bowling Alleys, with a large attendance, lunch and refreshments. The Omaha and Council Bluffs bowled, two out of three games, with ten-men teams. The first game the Omahas won by 100 pins. The second game the Bluffs won by 147 pins. The third game is what Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

DUTY ON HYACINTHS.

The new Court of Customs Appeals, at Washington, May 1, reversed the action of the collector at Boston and the U. S. Board of General Appraisers and decided that hyacinth bulbs are dutiable at 50 cents per thousand under the tariff law now in force. The decision was by Justice DeVries in the case of Joseph Breck & Sons Co. vs. the United States. This is the first case of interest to the seed trade to be heard by the court and the interpretation given the law is of the utmost importance, especially as it is the opposite of what most bulb importers believed to be the intent of the law.

First reference to the case was made in The Review for February 24, 1910. In the issue of May 12, 1910, the hearing before the General Appraisers at New York was reported. The importers claimed that hyacinth bulbs were dutiable under paragraph 263 of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law as "all other bulbs, bulbous roots or corms which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage," at 50 cents per thousand. The Government claimed that the bulbs were subject to duty under a clause of the same paragraph which provides for "hyacinth, astilbe, dielytra and lily of the valley clumps," at $2.50 per thousand. Among those present on subpoena by the Government and whose testimony was heard were Harry A. Bunyard, with Arthur T. Boddington; J. B. Clark, with Henry A. Dreer; A. M. Kirby, with Peter Henderson & Co.; George Stumpp, of Stumpp & Walter Co.; Mr. Wilson, with J. M. Thorburn & Co.; G. C. Eldering, of W. J. Eldering & Son; L. C. Corbett and others. The Board of General Appraisers sustained the action of the collector at Boston in collecting duty at $2.50 per thousand. An appeal was taken, with the result that the decision of the Board now is reversed.

MONTANA is coming to the front as a pea-growing state. Northrup, King & Co., of Minneapolis, have for several years had considerable acreage under contract there and now Macomb B. Gray has put out several hundred acres of peas, beans and other seeds near Billings. Mr. Gray was formerly with the McMorran-Gray Co., at Port Huron, Mich. He has gone into the seed business at 503 North Twenty-eighth street, Billings, and expects to issue a catalogue next season.

CORRESPONDENCE now coming to hand gives further information of the damage done by the severely cold weather previously reported as having visited the Holland bulb fields just as the stock was coming into bloom early in April. The temperature went as low, in some places,

Kills Weeds in 48 Hours

Ammoniated Lawn Lime, a light top dressing for lawns, does it. Kills flat-leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours.

Saves time and labor weeding lawns.

Is far superior to hand weeding, because it kills the weeds, making the pulling up or injuring the grass unnecessary. This wonderful compound will kill the weeds without injury to the grass, when used as directed. If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 square feet; 25 lbs. to 1000 square feet (20x50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Makes Grass Grow. Insures a New, Vigorous Growth.

Produces a lawn grass that is wonderfully luxuriant, and a rich green distinctly noticeable.

SEVEN TOP TURNIP

Originally introduced by us from South Carolina in 1850 and annually grown for over sixty years under the zero winter temperature of Bloomsdale Farms, the Landreth's strain of Seven Top has obtained, by this northern culture, a hardiness not approached by southern-grown seed. All inferences would point that way, while thousands of experiments have conclusively proven it beyond a shadow of doubt; consequently, one pound of Landreth's Seven Top will in the dead of winter produce more greens than can be cut from three times the more delicate southern-grown Seven Top.

Write us how much you want and we will name you a price.

as 18 degrees and it appears that, while the bulbs have, in a large measure, recovered in the warm weather which followed, irreparable injury was done to cabbage, cauliflower, mangel and turnip for seed crops. Peas, beans and radish were in many cases destroyed and were replanted. It is said that not in sixty years has Holland had such cold weather in April.

BIG PEA CROP NEEDED.

The time for planting peas in northern Michigan is close at hand, but the prospect for a profitable crop is not especially bright; the return of normal conditions is not in early prospect. Alfred J. Brown, at Grand Rapids, had this to say, April 29, of the situation as it then appeared:

"We will soon be planting peas in northern Michigan, and as to the acreage will say that it will be much less than usual. This is on account of the farmers being indisposed to plant peas, even at the advanced prices pea growers are offering them. We understand the same conditions exist in other pea growing localities. What we need is a big world's crop in order to bring back normal conditions. Should we have another bad year it would be absolutely impossible to supply the demand.

"So far we have experienced no trouble in securing contracts with farmers for growing beans, although we have been obliged to pay pretty stiff prices."

ONION SETS.

The 1910 crop of onion sets all found some sort of an outlet, and interest now centers in the new crop. At Louisville the seed has all been in the ground for some time, but at Chicago planting still is in progress—whenever the condition of the fields will permit; rainy weather has held back the work.

At Louisville, April 29, H. R. White-side said:

"The onion set season is over with us; we sold out the last onion sets we had April 1. There have been no sets to offer here for two or three weeks. The coming crop is planted, and I think the acreage is perhaps a little less than it was last year. The weather conditions since the crop was planted have been all that could be desired and, so far as the season has gone, it looks good, but it is too early to tell much about it yet."

"It is too early to outline the prospects for the coming year on onion sets at Chicago," said J. J. Budlong, of the L. A. Budlong Co., April 29. "Seed is not all planted yet, but the general impression seems to be that there will not be as large a crop as last year. The are proving to the children of the schools of some places, especially in this section." The clipping, from the Syracuse Herald, April 26, is as follows:

The government seeds, distributed by Congressman M. E. Driscoll to the schools, have been a disappointment, so far, say those who have planted them. They are old stock and in many instances do not come up at all and those which do come up do not give thrifty plants.

That's just a knock. The fact is, the congressional free seeds are just as good as the average seedsman sells. Why shouldn't they be, when the list of those who hold the government seed contracts contains the names of firms that, some of them, constitute the trade's chief sources of supply?

SNOW IN WISCONSIN.

There was snow in the Wisconsin pea district April 30 and May 1, after a considerable quantity of seed was in the ground. At Green Bay May 1 E. L. Olmsted, superintendent of the Everett S. Clark interests, said of the situation:

"In this section of the state bright and cool weather was the rule during the entire month of April. Active spring work commenced about April 15. This section has had little rain so far this spring, but the soil has been moist enough to work well. We judge that not more than one-third of the total acreage of peas has been sown by May 1. The remaining two-thirds will be sown during the next fifteen days, weather permitting.

"A general storm struck us April 30. The snowfall here will average about three inches. We do not think this storm will cause any particular damage to the peas now sown. It will be three or four days before seeding can be resumed and every day's delay now will tend to affect the crop unfavorably.

"We consider present conditions on the whole as favorable for a normal pea crop.

"It is too early to say anything about beans, as it will be at least thirty days before any seed will go into the ground."

A few years ago we lost a customer temporarily because one of our competitors bought bedding plants from him in exchange for his lily bulb order. He called it "reciprocity." For two years now he has had lilies a-la-dandelion blend which were hardly worth the space they occupied. After figuring it all out he finds his loss on lilies, based on his cut flower purchases to supply his trade, is far more than the entire value of the bedding plants. It took just three years to figure it out. It is all right to reciprocate when the values are the same, but on such a lop-sided proposition it does not pay. Buy your goods where it pays you best to buy and sell your goods likewise, but don't let anyone tell you where to sell and where to buy your goods, because no one knows your business as well as yourself. When you want first-class lily bulbs or French bulbs, you can get them here at prices consistent with the quality delivered. You can make more money on our kind than on any other kind you can buy. cause March of this year was away below March of 1910. We remembered, however, that March of 1910 was unusually mild and warm. This led us to hope that possibly April, 1911, would do better than April, 1910. Our hopes have been fully realized and we now find that May 1 we are considerably ahead of last season at the same time. If May of this year is as good as May of last year, we shall be abundantly satisfied."

SPRING ARITHMETIC.

It was the busy hour of 4,
When from a city hardware store
Emerged a gentleman who bore
1 hoe,
1 spade,
1 wheelbarrow.

From thence our hero promptly went Into a seed establishment
And for these things his money spent:
1 peck of bulbs,
1 job lot of shrubs,
1 quart of assorted seeds.

He has a garden under way,
And if he's fairly lucky, say,
He'll have about the last of May 1 squash vine,
1 eggplant,
1 radish.

—Washington Herald.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The market last week found everything in the cut flower line plentiful. Roses are coming in heavily and are well cleaned up, considering the large numbers received daily.

Carnations are in heavy supply and of good quality. The wholesalers found it necessary to clean up at low prices Thursday, Friday and Saturday. One of the leading florists of the city ran a special sale for the last three days of the week and managed to clean up 25,000 carnations, which under ordinary conditions would have found their way to the ash barrel. Another firm handled, in addition to the above, about 15,000 of the same flowers.

These sales proved decidedly successful and helped greatly to move the surplus, and have also acted as an educator in teaching the general public to use flowers more liberally. Roses were also handled at the same time and the oversupply in this line has been greatly reduced. We all know that to sell flowers cheaply is hard, but when we keep it among the trade and let the legitimate florists have the distribution instead of the department stores, we are doing good, and this policy should be carried out whenever there is any surplus of this kind.

Easter lilies and callas have been in heavy supply since Easter, and it is hard to move them at a good price. Violets are a thing of the past in this market, but sweet peas are in great favor this season and are certainly selling well.

Beauties are off crop in this section, but are not missed, as the demand is well taken care of by stock from outside growers. Some fine Spanish iris is coming into this market and meets with a ready sale. Ixia is arriving in all shades and is a fine novelty.

Plumosus and Sprengeri are selling well and the supply is just about equal to the demand. Fancy ferns are still to be had and the new crop is arriving from the south. There will be no scarcity in this line this season, as the danger point has been passed.

Retailers in the city and country all report business fine and a general good business was enjoyed for May day.

PACIFIC COAST.

Seattle, Wash.—Rosalia Bros., at 1003 Third avenue, whose show house contains 2,000 square feet of floor space, stocked the building in particularly attractive style for Easter and announced in the newspapers that visitors would be especially welcome during the week of the Easter display.

San Jose, Cal.—The Chas. C. Navlet Co., whose flower and seed departments have heretofore been under one roof, has opened a flower store at the corner of San Fernando and First streets. It is said to be one of the finest stores in the state and includes among its attractions a handsome fountain, constructed in the ancient Roman style and supported by four Cupids.

San Diego, Cal.—It is said that the directors of the Panama-California Exposition have offered $1,000 for a new rose, to be known as the San Diego and to be used in profusion on the grounds of the exposition in 1915. The offer will be extended to every florist in the United States. The rose must be hardy, so that it can be easily grown outdoors, the competitors must be residents of the United States, and they must make known to the floral association their intention to compete.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has turned cold again and stock of all kinds, although not so plentiful as a week ago, is produced in sufficient quantity for all purposes, with quite a bit to go to waste. Business since Easter has not been brisk. Funeral orders have not been as numerous as they were a few weeks ago, but wedding decorations of various kinds have helped to fill out.

Outside bulbous stock is almost out of season. A few late daffodils and tulips are seen, but they are showing the lateness of their appearance sadly. Peonies are in flower and the lilacs are over for the year. Carnations are of good quality, owing to the extra favorable weather, and the same can be said of roses. The prices are slightly lower than they have been and, if trade does not mend somewhat in the near future, they are liable to drop even farther.

Sweet peas are still being held at a

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business last week was good, considering the quietude that usually follows the Easter rush. What little stock was left over was passed along at a fair price. Funeral work forms the major part of the trade, with an occasional wedding. Garden flowers are used a great deal in table decorations, utilizing home talent in arrangement.

Roses are plentiful in every variety, and it keeps the trade busy to dispose of them without a loss. Carnations are also in full crop, but the change in the weather has affected their keeping qualities. Sweet peas are improving in quality and increasing in quantity. Violets are almost out of the market.

Various Notes.

Last week being kermess week, there was quite a call for bouquets and basket arrangements. In fact, during the last day or two it was almost impossible to fill all orders.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres. E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June 14 to 16, 1911.

THE season has been a strenuous one with the nurserymen in nearly all sections of the country. In most localities spring, whether early or late, came all at once, though it can as yet scarcely be said to have arrived in New England. Waiting for a belated spring is about as nervous a job as falls to the lot of any nurseryman heavily booked up with orders.

CONTRACT HELD NOT BINDING.

According to the finding of a jury in the court of Justice Hawkins at Northport, L. I., April 22, the terms of a signed contract are not binding, in the event of a verbal understanding between the parties to the contract.

The case was that of Hoopes, Brother & Thomas vs. George W. Duryea. The plaintiffs are nurserymen of West Chester, Pa., and they sued to recover a bill of $192, claimed to be due them for fruit trees delivered on the premises of the defendant April 5. The jury brought in a verdict for the defendant.

According to the evidence, W. W. Tomlinson, an agent of the plaintiffs, in September, 1909, secured an order from the defendant, who owns a farm in Elwood, for 200 fruit trees to be delivered in April or May, 1911. The printed order signed by Mr. Duryea stated that the order could not be countermanded, and that the agent had no authority to change any of the terms of the contract. In December, 1909, Mr. Duryea wrote to the company countermanding his order for the trees. He received no reply. March 29 he was notified that the trees were at Greenlawn station, consigned to him. He wired the company that he would not accept them, and April 5 Mr. Tomlinson hired a truck and delivered the trees under a shed on Duryea's farm, later notifying Duryea that he had done so. The company then brought suit against Mr. Duryea to recover the value of the trees, which was $175, and their expense in delivering them.

On the witness stand Mr. Duryea said he signed the order without noticing the terms of the contract, but that Mr. Tomlinson had told him that in case he wanted to countermand the order it would be all right.

The case will probably be appealed.—Brooklyn Eagle.

DAVENPORT, IA.

The J. W. Davis Co. has just closed a contract for the range of houses which have been in contemplation for some time. Mr. Davis recently made a trip through the east and has given close study to modern construction methods. It is his purpose to build houses for vegetables, which can be turned into cut flower crops should trade developments make this course seem desirable. He has now placed his order with the Lord & Burnham Co., Chicago, for three iron-frame houses, the first iron-frame structures to be put up in the west. Each house is to be 43x600 feet, with a propagating house 24x260 and three connecting passages. The houses are to be built with 7-foot eaves and continuous ventilation. Iron, glass and concrete being the only materials used, Mr. Davis thinks he will have attained the utmost permanency and will have houses that will be as good as new for years. George Sykes, Chicago manager for Lord & Burnham Co., was here last week to work out the details with Mr. Davis. The site chosen is a new one, outside of town, where soil supply is practically unlimited and where growing conditions are of the best. Work on building the new range will be begun as soon as possible, the intention being to have the plant completed and ready for use by September 1.

Holyoke, Mass.—G. H. Sinclair has prepared for an enlargement of his business by purchasing a 46-acre farm at Smiths Ferry. He intends, when his arrangements are completed, to build a residence and greenhouses on the new property.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

In the last ten days there has been plenty of rain, which has somewhat checked the progress of outside work, but there has been plenty to do otherwise. Business has come along "steady by jerks" and, when summed up, amounted to quite a satisfactory total.

Carnations, locally speaking, are still a drawback. Were it not for the ones that are being shipped in, the supply would be decidedly scarce. Roses are cropping abundantly, and the demand keeps up fairly well. Lilies are also abundant, but move slowly. Green goods are scarce. Pot plants are beginning to move, and as the weather warms up the demand will increase.

Various Notes.

J. W. McNary, the nurseryman, reported business in his line to be a little bit slow, owing to the rainy weather.

Mrs. B. Haschke went to Springfield, O., on a short business trip last week, and while there she visited several of the wholesale growers.

Carnation growers are commencing to feel the approach of Mothers' day, as inquiries on white carnations are beginning to come in.

Ray Bartholomew has been the victim of ptomaine poison during the last ten days. At the present writing his condition is much improved.

John Boehner has secured the contract to furnish all the bedding plants for the city parks and public squares.

Mrs. E. Young had a big wedding decoration on hand last week.

MUNCIE, IND.

The annual convention of the Northern Indiana Florists' Association, with the usual banquet and business session, was held in the Delaware hotel and was attended by about forty members.

At the noon hour the visiting florists were taken to the Delaware hotel and tendered a sumptuous banquet as the guests of S. Humfeld, proprietor of the Muncie Floral Store. Many impromptu speeches were made at the banquet by prominent flower men.

In the afternoon the business meetings were held. Addresses were delivered, discussions were carried on and the contracts for florists' supplies were let. The association buys the supplies in large quantities, thus getting reductions in the prices, and then the supplies are distributed among the members of the association. Several representatives of flower box companies and supply houses were in the city trying to land the contracts.

Several of the most prominent firms in the state sent exhibitions, and the Muncie firms contributed also. The E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, had on exhibition a new rose of its own production, which caused much favorable comment. Among the other exhibitors were: Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis; W. W. Coles, of Kokomo; Poehlmann Bros., of Morton Grove, Ill.; W. Frank & Sons, of Portland, Ind.; B. H. Klus & Son, of Anderson; Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson; Williams & Clark, Mrs. George Miller, Carnes Co. and S. Humfeld, all of this city. One of the prettiest exhibits was that of red carnations sent by Mrs. W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, wife of the florist of that city.

The Northern Indiana Florists' Association was organized four years ago and includes members from Elkhart, South Bend, North Manchester, Portland, Warsaw, Muncie and several other large cities. W. W. Dederick, of Warsaw, is president, and A. J. Wagoner, of Columbia City, is secretary.

Worcester, Mass.—L. C. Midgley, the well known florist, recently purchased a residence at Lyman and Belmont streets and will build two greenhouses, each over 100 feet long, on the adjoining grounds. The boiler has already arrived. Mr. Midgley's property also includes a farm of sixty-one acres, on the line of the Marlboro & Westboro street railway and the Boston & Worcester air line.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

Business has been only fair since Easter, the greatest quantity of stock being used up in funeral work. Roses, carnations and lilies are plentiful and of good quality. April certainly upheld her reputation as a rainy month, there being twenty-one days of rain out of the thirty. The florists are all busy getting spring stock ready for outdoor work, which begins here about May 10.

Various Notes.

By order of the court, the greenhouses and property of W. S. Bell were sold under the hammer during the week, the buyer being Miss Fannie White, with Michler Bros. as the contending bidder. This property, being opposite the two city cemeteries, is a splendid location. Miss White will rebuild part of the old houses this summer and eventually move her entire business to her new place. We wish her much success in her new venture.

Honaker the Florist is displaying an excellent lot of stock. This firm intends doing some building this year. Quite a shipping trade is done and large quantities of stock go out every week.

Miss Fannie White had a record week in decorations, having nine affairs of that kind. Her bedding plants are in good shape.

Kelley & Current have two houses of geraniums, 8,000 plants in all, that are hard to beat. Their new house, just completed, was filled at once with geraniums. This firm has a stand in the city market now and reports business brisk.

Miss Emma Bell, for years connected with her father, W. S. Bell, in the florists' business, has accepted a position with a Clarksville, Tenn., establishment, and leaves immediately to take charge of her new duties.

F. M. Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill., and O. Heberling, of Georgetown, Ky., were visitors last week.

J. P. K.

Greenwich, Conn.—J. B. McArdle, though he has been in business here only a short time, is already establishing a good trade as a florist and seedsmen. He was recently elected secretary of the Westchester and Fairfield County Horticultural Society. His store is in the Merritt building, on Greenwich avenue. Philip Moore has been engaged as one of his salesmen.

The New Fern Nephrolepis Dreyerii

(SPORT OF BOSTON)

GROWN BY

G. DREYER, Elmhurst, Long Island, New York

THIS New Fern, when exhibited at the S. A. F. & O. H. Convention last August, received the following description: "Nephrolepis Dreyerii has many good points which will render it popular. It makes a quick growth, is compact, of good color, and stands considerable rough treatment, adapting itself to almost any condition. It is of the Scottii type, but not as stiff, the fronds drooping gracefully, giving the plant a very attractive appearance."

Price: 2 1/4-inch pots, per 100, $25.00; per 1000, $200.00.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There was a good volume of business last week; the increased supply of all kinds of cut flowers caused the prices to drop and thus accelerated the demand. An unusual number of weddings occurred during the week and these added to the call. One custom that has shown a material increase during the last few years is that of sending cut flowers to friends who are sick. There has been an unusual amount of sickness and in consequence there has been a growing demand for blooms. The growers and retailers are looking forward to a big Decoration day trade and lots of potted stock are being grown for that occasion.

Various Notes.

Johnston Bros. have just made a large importation of rhododendrons and boxwood plants.

L. A. Daniels, of Blackstone, has been booking a large number of orders for tulip trees for street planting.

The Burke Rose Co. is tearing out its rose houses and remodeling them. They are putting in concrete benches and adding ten feet to the length of each house.

William Appleton's Sons are busy on outside work and have twenty-five men employed on landscape and decorative work.

M. Macnair has taken a large store at the corner of Chestnut and Weybosset streets and will occupy it for making up pieces.

William Jurgens, of Newport, was in the city April 29 and reported his roses for summer cutting as being exceptionally fine. They include My Maryland, Beauties, Kaiserin and William R. Smith. He also has a large lot of Spanish iris and baby gladioli.

Albert Burke has left the employ of the Burke Rose Co., Inc., and has taken charge of a private greenhouse at the corner of Camp and Cypress streets.

T. J. Johnston & Co., Ed. Brooks, proprietor, report a brisk trade last week in wedding and reception work.

Mrs. William Butcher has an unusual number of orders on her books for outdoor and landscape work. She has more than a score of men employed.

The public gardens facing the Union railway station at Exchange place are just bursting into bloom. The central beds are at present planted to tulips. Miss Florence Willard has charge.

Charles H. Hunt has more than 10,000 fine geranium plants coming along for Decoration day. They include Madame Canovas, S. A. Nutt, Poitevine and Grant.

A resolution to appropriate $500 for the maintenance of school gardens was recently adopted by the school committee.

Hollis, N. H.—George W. Coburn & Son have built a 56-foot addition to their greenhouses, besides making some improvements in their residence.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.The Market.

Business is dull. The wholesalers have an oversupply of all kinds of stock and prices are low. Nothing in the immediate future is apparent to help clean up the market. Roses are holding up fairly well. The demand last week inclined toward pink. Carnations are in large oversupply and some are off color. The longiflorums, valley and Shasta daisies are exceptional in quality. The stems on the sweet peas, though still long enough to work up easily, are not nearly what they were. The supply of decorative greens is sufficient to meet all demands.

Various Notes.

Olson & Lunden, of Plantsville, report the last winter as being one of the most successful they ever have witnessed.

William Fischer, who has recently undergone an operation at the Meriden hospital, is reported much improved. His many friends hope to see him back at his greenhouses soon. Mr. Fischer purchased the Buckland Greenhouses from Olson & Lunden last autumn.

Mothers' day was a big success here last year. We could not get enough carnations to supply the demand. This year it has been advertised more, and the florists are looking forward to a much larger demand.

The force at the Curtis Greenhouses is kept busy with the outdoor stock this warm weather.

The Blatchley Co. has a fine lot of pansy plants this spring.

Otto Glueck, of Marion, is kept hustling getting orders for vegetable plants. This is Mr. Glueck's first winter in the florists' business. He reports a fine trade, both wholesale and retail.

B.

MADISON, N. J.

John H. Dunlop, of Toronto, was a visitor at Madison April 26, the guest of C. H. Totty and M. C. Ebel. Mr. Ebel discussed insecticides, and explained the process of manufacturing Aphine and Fungine. Mr. Dunlop accepted the Canadian agency for these products.

At Mr. Totty's big plant all is life and business is booming. Here 500 varieties of mums are growing, 100,000 in pots and 80,000 in sand. In process of planting in the field are 160,000 carnations, including Wodenethe, White House, Princess Charming, Winsor and the Enchantress triplets. There are also 15,000 pots of the Golden Bantam corn ready for early planting. There are 160,000 grafted and 200,000 own-root roses of the Lady Hillingdon, Radiance, Rose Queen and other popular varieties. Wm. E. Tricker is foreman and has thirty men employed. Shipping goes on night and day, and he says the demand is constantly increasing. Wodenethe is in fine condition and the new yellow rose is popular.

The Noe rose growing combination is one of the biggest things in Jersey. L. A. Noe, L. M. Noe and the Noe farm comprise an industry that totals 400,000 square feet of glass, forty big greenhouses, supplied with every modern convenience, with hundreds of acres of farm land, an abundance of Jersey cows, a model dairy that sends out 1,000 quarts of pure milk every day, and fish ponds, ball fields and many other luxuries. Mr. Noe is a great sportsman. In his greenhouses are 100,000 roses, 45,000 of them American Beauties. Joseph Rusicka, the courteous and competent manager of it all, has been in the Noe service for fifteen years.

TORONTO.The Market.

The shipments of cut stock coming into this market have been heavy and, although business has been fair, the supply in most lines exceeds the demand. Everything is plentiful, especially carnations, which are coming in better than at any previous time this season. White is in big demand, much of it being used for design work, which has been quite plentiful. Easter lilies that were left over, or were late in coming in, are also being used for designs.

A slight increase in the corsage demand was occasioned by the horse show at the Armory last week.

Various Notes.

J. S. Simmons captured first prize in one of the three classes for best window decorations in the colors of the Horse Show Association, yellow and blue. J. H. Dunlop, though not entered in the competition, secured third in the same class.

J. S. Simmons had the decoration for the banquet of the horse show directors. The tables were set around a miniature arena of tan bark. In the center of the arena was the judges' stand, decorated with forget-me-nots and daffodils, the show colors.

A. E. Moore is now in control of the Georgetown Floral Co., and received his first shipments May 1.

A deputation from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of this city waited on the fire and light committee to secure an amendment to the by-laws relating to greenhouse construction. As in the past, however, nothing could be done.

The seed and bulb business is rushing just now. The Steele-Briggs Seed Co. and J. A. Simmers report a big trade.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

TWO CONNECTED HOUSES.

We are building two houses, each 30x150 feet. The houses will be connected. They will be built on ground that slopes to the east. There is about four feet of a drop in the 150 feet. The boiler will be at the east end of the houses. The walls of the houses are six feet high and the ridge is thirteen feet from the ground. We want a temperature of 65 degrees at night and 70 to 80 degrees in the daytime, at 5 degrees below zero. There are four beds on the floor, the full length of the house. How many 2-inch flows and returns will be needed and where would you place them to get the best results? Where would you place the expansion tank? We want to use the gravity system, to help the flow of water. The supply tank will be above the houses, on the higher ground. What size of feed pipe will be needed? What size of boiler?

H. B.

Each of your houses 30x150 requires sixteen lines of 2-inch pipe to supply sufficient radiation to maintain the temperature desired. It will be advisable to use three lines in each house as risers, and the thirteen returns in as many coils as there are risers for each house; that is, two coils of four pipes

Awarded the Certificate of Merit

at the National Flower Show, Boston, Mass.; and also received the universal approval of all the visitors who examined its merits, the expression of the majority being

"THAT IS THE BOILER I HAVE BEEN LOOKING FOR"

The points of merit that appealed to the judges and the critical visitors were that the fire-box is entirely surrounded by water, there being no brick work to require constant repair; every part of the boiler is easily accessible for cleaning and oiling, which is the most important feature to be considered in purchasing a boiler that is idle during the summer months; all the castings, doors, grates, etc., are made double extra heavy.

☐ Made in 23 sizes for steam and hot water.

☐ In use during the past five years by well-known florists in all parts of the country.

☐ Have shown a saving in coal consumption of from 25 to 40 per cent over other types of boilers.

☐ All parts of the boiler subject to wear are made standard.

☐ The grates are of the shaking and dumping type, with openings for egg, pea or soft coal.

☐ Tested at the factory to 150 pounds pressure.

MOREHEAD STEAM TRAPS

☐ The installation of a Morehead Return Steam Trap in a Greenhouse is absolute evidence of progressiveness on the part of the florist.

☐ It is further evidence of good management, for the "Morehead" is an investment in both satisfaction and economy.

☐ The majority of florists are using Morehead Traps. If you are one of the exceptions, it will be to your interest to write us—we will make you a liberal trial offer proposition.

What the Users Say

Greenhouse and Residence Heated by One Kroeschell Boiler

"Had different kinds of cast-iron boilers. I am assured that I can save about one-third fuel with your boiler. I started firing October 10, and the fire never went out up to this time, May 12, 1907. This boiler heats both my dwelling and greenhouses and gives the best of satisfaction. My dwelling is about 40 feet from the boiler. Can recommend your boiler to anybody. It is the only greenhouse boiler."

A CONCRETE STACK

How should we go to work to build a concrete stack? We notice that there are many stacks through the country that look as though they might have been built without outside aid and we want to put up one of some kind, only don't know how to set about it.

W. F. R.

Van Aken Bros., Coldwater, Mich., use a concrete stack at their greenhouses, built by their own labor. They describe the method as follows:

"We commenced with a foundation twelve feet square and nine feet deep. This was made solid with cobblestones and cement grouting, using a cement mixer and running the grouting thin, so it would fill all hollows between the stones. Six feet down in this we set 1½-inch and 1¼-inch iron pipes on end, so that they extended upward as reinforcement for the stack. Above the foundation, where we set our first form for the stack, we wired old buggy tires to the pipes every ten inches, thus making a complete and secure reinforcement for the stack. Our forms were three feet high and were put together in sections, which we fastened in place by wiring them to the iron pipes. We used two sets of the forms, removing the lower set each day, putting it on top and refilling it. Thus we went up three feet per day.

"The stack has a 36-inch flue. All scaffolding was placed inside, thus saving a good deal in that item of expense. The wall for the first thirty feet is eight inches thick, and the upper thirty-two feet is six inches thick. In the upper thirty-two feet we also reduced the size of the reinforcing pipes to 1-inch.

"The entire cost, including the making of the wooden forms and the excavating for the foundation, was $290. The connection to the boiler is made with a cement flue running from the boiler cellar up into the square base of the stack."

The Market.

Trade is heavy here at present, with a good supply of stock coming in. Roses have been in good crop and the quality is all that could be desired, so they have been used up closely right along. Carnations have been in heavy crop, with the demand about equal to the supply, and quality never better at this date. Sweet peas are still coming in heavily and are about all cleaned up daily.

Violets are about done; there are a few coming in, but the quality is rather poor and some retailers have cut them out entirely as a consequence.

Beauties have been more plentiful in the last week or so, with demand somewhat light. There are quite a lot of blooming plants to be seen now, reminding us that spring is here. Among them are geraniums, fuchsias, pansies, etc., in large quantities. The demand is quite heavy on potted ferns and large numbers are being moved.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, April 25, with a good attendance, considering that all the greenhouse men are busy with their spring work.

Wm. Graff has been in Chicago several days on a business trip.

Sherman Stephens reports heavy business on Sundays.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting heavily on carnations and roses.

E. Metzmaier reports heavy business.

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Business during the last two weeks was about average; it was by no means as brisk as just before Easter, but still the demand was strong enough to dispose of nearly everything offered in the markets. There seemed to be a small surplus of lilies. Roses were plentiful, but the quality was good, thus avoiding any extreme cut in prices. The wholesale houses were able to dispose of stocks about as fast as they came in, either locally or through shipments. On the whole, therefore, both growers and retailers have reason to be satisfied with the conditions.

Building Operations.

That there is a demand, and a demand that is steadily increasing, for Rochester-grown flowers and plants, is evidenced by the activities in building by several of the prominent growers and retailers. One of the most important undertakings in this line is that of George J. Keller, who has just purchased a piece of property in the southern part of the city, about 400 feet square, on which he will at once erect several houses, 200 feet long. These will be of King construction, and will embody the latest ideas in ventilating and heating. Mr. Keller will grow a general line of flowers and plants, for both wholesale and retail trade.

J. B. Keller's Sons have also contracted with the King Construction Co. for the erection of four houses, each 150 feet long. These new houses, as well as the large establishment on South avenue, will be given entirely to producing supplies for this firm's retail trade.

Henry P. Neun, a man who has built a most successful business from a small beginning, is planning to erect four houses, 180 feet long, this summer. While the contract is not let, the prospects are bright that these houses will be in active operation before 1912.

Various Notes.

Fred B. King, of the Mandeville & King Co., seedsmen, and Miss Elizabeth Reineck were married on Wednesday evening, April 19, at the home of the bride's sister, in this city. Mr. and Mrs. King left for an extended tour, including Baltimore, Washington and New York, thence to New Orleans by steamer, and will return to Rochester about the middle of May. E. F. R.

The Market.

Trade was rather light last week. There have been a number of good sized wedding decorations, but funeral work has been scarce. The weather continues cool and it rains about every other day. About as much stock is coming in as can be disposed of. The florists doing a bedding business are having their hands full, the late Easter proving quite a disadvantage.

Alfred Brandt has disposed of his auto and gone back to the horse for delivery. Mr. Brandt got in a large shipment of palms and ferns last week for his new conservatory.

George Wiegand is spending a few days in Chicago and Cleveland this week.

John Grande is doing service on the grand jury. He says this jury work is not what it is cracked up to be.

Peter Weiland, of New Castle, who is to open a commission house in Indianapolis, was in the city last week.

Frank Hasselman, of the Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co., says that he has a fine lot of bedding plants, having devoted considerably more glass to them this year.

The May meeting of the State Florists' Association is to be held at Anderson this week, at the plant of Stuart & Haugh. It is expected that quite a number will go from here.

Adolph Baur has about 5,000 plants of his new red seedling carnation, St. Nicholas. Mr. Baur is especially proud of this new one and expects to put it on the market next year.

E. T. Barnes, of Spencer, Ind., has been shipping quantities of jonquils into this market.

Baur & Smith have been cutting sweet peas of high quality. They also are having a larger cut of carnations.

A. Wiegand & Sons were quite busy last week with wedding decorations, having five on Wednesday.

Albert Kempe has been sending in some fine Easter lilies. He also had a lot of fine pot ramblers, which came in a little late for Easter. H. L. W.

PANSY STUDIES.

Useful Flowers for Outline Work.

Cut pansies are useful as construction flowers and will work into many places for outlining and shaping an intricate design where carnations, asters or the thick-bodied flowers would increase the bulk of the smaller parts and make it clumsy. Where you wish to keep the finished piece close to the measurements of the frame, they are just the thing. Pieces that require thin edging are difficult to fill without a flat flower, and their thinness of petal, together with their fine range of colors, seems to fit them for just such purposes. They are much wanted for small outline work, such as is found in the "Elks' head," in the spinning wheel and bicycle, and in lodge emblems where several implements or symbols are grouped together. One solid color should be used for each piece of such a group, each piece being so colored as to be in sharp contrast to the color of an adjacent part.

At funeral after funeral one can see pieces made of pink or white or both, till they all look as much alike as so many "coons." Here and there a piece of some dark color would not only be more noticeable in itself, but would bring the lighter pieces into relief.

An Urn and a Broken Column.

Aside from its relative value in a collection, however, the pansy piece has a personality all its own. An urn of pansies, draped with the stars and stripes and filled with an immense bunch of lilies, hydrangeas, gladioli or other tall, sweeping flowers, makes an excellent Memorial day piece for the window or cemetery. The moss under the pansies should be well soaked and the pansies should be sprinkled often. With a little renewing each day, this piece will last the greater part of a week.

Another piece which can be well executed in pansies is the broken column. Begin at the top with the blue whites. Work in some darker blues and lavenders, not abruptly, but by running a line of the lighter ones far into the space to be occupied by the darker ones, and vice versa. In the same way introduce a still darker shade, till the deepest purples are reached. If enough pansies of this one strain of color are to be had, complete the piece with the darker shades at the base. If not, introduce the purple browns, and carry the color to the lower part of the base all around. This will increase the apparent height of the piece. Your piece will lose character if the colors are mixed in any careless way or improperly shaded. On one of the side corners of the base set a group of lilies or equally dignified and graceful flowers. Throw a loose garland of pink or cream roses around the column and lose the end among the lilies.

A Wreath of Pansies.

A pansy wreath is a handsome piece if well planned. Make the frame extra wide by fitting a small wreath frame within a larger one. Wire firmly together and fill as a wide framed wreath. Cover solidly with pansies in shaded colors, making the inside and outside edges the same as the top. Throw a loose, light spray of roses over one side and fasten it in place with a staple of tum frond. For an elderly person use the purple pansies. For a younger one change to brown, shaded to bronze and yellow.

Gertrude Blair.

NIEREMBERGIA FOR BASKETS.

"Get plenty of Nierembergia gracilis! You never will have too much of it!"

This was the advice of an expert florist, years ago, when I was consulting him about greenhouse stock. I did not then know what Nierembergia was, and I think that today many florists are not familiar with it or aware of its value, but I followed his advice, got some Nierembergia and have been glad of it ever since.

Also I found his prophecy true—that I "would never have too much of it." In fact, although I grow more and more every year, I never yet have had enough to supply my customers.

We use it mostly in filling porch and window boxes, cemetery vases, baskets, etc. Our customers like it, and every year they want more. One lady on our street fills her box with Nierembergia and vines only, and her box is one of the delights of the neighborhood. Nierembergia gives so constant a show of

Wreath of Pansies and Snapdragon.

No. 21 wire, brought through to the under side of the frame and clinched to each wire on the edge.

Another finish for such a pansy wreath would be a wide band of Farleyense ferns across one side of the piece.

A casket panel of pansies and adiantums is a rich piece. Make the panel in two sections and fill as for center-pieces. Border with one hanging adian-bloom, is so graceful, so durable and so satisfactory that we have found it one of our indispensable plants.

POINT OUT THE FAULTS.

A reader suggests that a helpful addition to this department of The Review would be one for the reproduction of photographs of designs for criticism. The reader, who, by the way, signs him-

PANSY STUDIES.

Useful Flowers for Outline Work.

Cut pansies are useful as construction flowers and will work into many places for outlining and shaping an intricate design where carnations, asters or the thick-bodied flowers would increase the bulk of the smaller parts and make it clumsy. Where you wish to keep the finished piece close to the measurements of the frame, they are just the thing. Pieces that require thin edging are difficult to fill without a flat flower, and their thinness of petal, together with their fine range of colors, seems to fit them for just such purposes. They are much wanted for small outline work, such as is found in the "Elks' head," in the spinning wheel and bicycle, and in lodge emblems where several implements or symbols are grouped together. One solid color should be used for each piece of such a group, each piece being so colored as to be in sharp contrast to the color of an adjacent part.

At funeral after funeral one can see pieces made of pink or white or both, till they all look as much alike as so many "coons." Here and there a piece of some dark color would not only be more noticeable in itself, but would bring the lighter pieces into relief.

An Urn and a Broken Column.

Aside from its relative value in a collection, however, the pansy piece has a personality all its own. An urn of pansies, draped with the stars and stripes and filled with an immense bunch of lilies, hydrangeas, gladioli or other tall, sweeping flowers, makes an excellent Memorial day piece for the window or cemetery. The moss under the pansies should be well soaked and the pansies should be sprinkled often. With a little renewing each day, this piece will last the greater part of a week.

Another piece which can be well executed in pansies is the broken column. Begin at the top with the blue whites. Work in some darker blues and lavenders, not abruptly, but by running a line of the lighter ones far into the space to be occupied by the darker ones, and vice versa. In the same way introduce a still darker shade, till the deepest purples are reached. If enough pansies of this one strain of color are to be had, complete the piece with the darker shades at the base. If not, introduce the purple browns, and carry the color to the lower part of the base all around. This will increase the apparent height of the piece. Your piece will lose character if the colors are mixed in any careless way or improperly shaded. On one of the side corners of the base set a group of lilies or equally dignified and graceful flowers. Throw a loose garland of pink or cream roses around the column and lose the end among the lilies.

A Wreath of Pansies.

A pansy wreath is a handsome piece if well planned. Make the frame extra wide by fitting a small wreath frame within a larger one. Wire firmly together and fill as a wide framed wreath. Cover solidly with pansies in shaded colors, making the inside and outside edges the same as the top. Throw a loose, light spray of roses over one side and fasten it in place with a staple of tum frond. For an elderly person use the purple pansies. For a younger one change to brown, shaded to bronze and yellow.

NIEREMBERGIA FOR BASKETS.

"Get plenty of Nierembergia gracilis! You never will have too much of it!"

This was the advice of an expert florist, years ago, when I was consulting him about greenhouse stock. I did not then know what nierembergia was, and I think that today many florists are not familiar with it or aware of its value, but I followed his advice, got some nierembergia and have been glad of it ever since.

Also I found his prophecy true—that I "would never have too much of it." In fact, although I grow more and more every year, I never yet have had enough to supply my customers.

We use it mostly in filling porch and window boxes, cemetery vases, baskets, etc. Our customers like it, and every year they want more. One lady on our street fills her box with nierembergia and vines only, and her box is one of the delights of the neighborhood. Nierembergia gives so constant a show of

Wreath of Pansies and Snapdragon.

No. 21 wire, brought through to the under side of the frame and clinched to each wire on the edge.

Another finish for such a pansy wreath would be a wide band of Farleyense ferns across one side of the piece.

A casket panel of pansies and adiantums is a rich piece. Make the panel in two sections and fill as for center-pieces. Border with one hanging adian-bloom, is so graceful, so durable and so satisfactory that we have found it one of our indispensable plants.

POINT OUT THE FAULTS.

A reader suggests that a helpful addition to this department of The Review would be one for the reproduction of photographs of designs for criticism. The reader, who, by the way, signs himself J. E. Jay, thinks so well of his idea that he offers himself as the first sacrifice. He sends the photograph of the standing cross reproduced herewith and invites criticisms of it. Just to see what is in the idea, The Review will give a half column space to anyone who cares to offer criticism of this design, or suggestions for its improvement. Sign your contribution, for the editor's benefit; your name will not be published.

WEDDING BUNCHES.

If there is any one thing that counts most for or against a florist, it is the character of the wedding work he turns out. Pretty nearly all the guests at a wedding know who supplied the flowers—and you may be sure that nothing at such an event escapes critical consideration. It is to the favor with which its wedding work has been received that the Goldsboro Floral Co., Goldsboro, N. C., attributes much of its success. The concern, which is owned by J. L. O'Quinn and H. C. Smith, is only eighteen months old. It was started with about 6,000 feet of glass, but the business is growing so rapidly that additional supplies are required. The manager is S. A. Starr, who is only 21 years of age. The illustration on page 11 is reproduced from a photograph of one of Mr. Starr's bouquets of valley and plumosus.

PROPAGATION OF AZALEAS.

Please explain how azaleas are best grown, from seed or cuttings. Where can the seed be procured? Also give a description of the different varieties.

J. K.

Probably you have in mind the greenhouse or Indian azaleas only. The family is quite an extensive one and includes quite a number of beautiful outdoor American varieties. Azalea Indica is seldom raised from seed, except it may be by Belgian and other specialists. This is a slow method of propagation. The two methods usually adopted are cuttings of half ripened wood in August or September in a close frame with some bottom heat, or by tongue grafting. It is much cheaper to import than to try to raise Azalea Indica at home, except in the case of some of the dwarf sorts, like Charles Encke, Firefly and some others. About all azaleas from Europe are grafted. Strong growing azaleas and, to some extent, rhododendrons are used for stocks, the azaleas being raised from cuttings.

A few popular varieties of azaleas are: Deutsche Perle, double white, early; Empress of India, double rosy salmon; Mme. Van der Cruyssen, semi-double, light pink; Vervaneana, double, salmon rose; Apollo, vermilion red; salmon rose; Apollo, vermilion red; Bernard Andre alba, late, double white; De Schryveriana, double rose, shaded red; Prof. Wolters, single, bright pink; Simon Mardner, double, velvety rose; Indica alba, fine single white; Sigismund Rucker, rose, bordered white, spotted crimson, a fine single; Fielder's White, single white; Raphael, double white; Niobe, double white; Empereur du Bresil, double rose, banded white.

IMPRESSIONS OF AMERICA

By a British Visitor.

Commercial floriculture in America is run very much on the lines that I anticipated. For many years I have been a reader of the American horticultural press, and therefore conversant with floricultural affairs as recorded therein. I had formed definite views of what to expect at each establishment that I visited, and so faithfully had each been portrayed in the columns of The Review from time to time that I received no surprises. All that I expected to see was there and just as I expected to see it.

I was fortunate in visiting America just before Easter, thereby obtaining a view of the plant and flower cultures at their best. According to population, the American plant trade is not so extensive as ours, but in most lines the culture is equal to the average of Covent Garden market. In America cut flower growers specialize on fewer varieties; this tends to working the establishments with less expense, though at the same time it gives the American brings out larger displays from individual growers, with blooms equal to those in America and the entire show more artistically arranged. I think E. G. Hill, of Richmond, who visited one of our shows last year, will endorse my views, and J. R. Fotheringham, of the F. R. Pierson Co., who was an eyewitness of one of our first shows in London, must also carry favorable impressions in his memory.

The Wonderful American Beauty.

Cut roses, American Beauty excepted, are on a level with ours; probably you surpass us in the first two months of the year. American Beauty has not installed itself as a favorite with our growers, and to me the blooms and stems seen in America were most wonderful; we have nothing approaching them in England.

Sweet peas, as seen at Boston, are far ahead of anything we produce in March. We do not obtain equal quality until late in April and in the first part of May. No doubt the clearer atmosphere in America is an important factor in bringing about the result.

In cut flowers I was delighted with the pink antirrhinums which frequently came under my notice, a line we have not struck in England yet for early work. For decorative purposes they are superb.

The Immense Chicago Ranges.

The extent of the glass establishments around Chicago is marvelous. In our small island there is no room for such; our markets could not take the produce. A few of our largest modern establishments excepted, the American systems of greenhouse building, heating and ventilating are ahead of ours. I admire the skill and enterprise of your horticultural builders. I congratulate them on their skillfully planned advertisements in the trade press. They know how to build and they know how to make it known that they can build.

Great as the floricultural industry is in America, it appears to me that it has a still greater future, and that at no distant date. The cut flower trade is no doubt abreast of the times. There is room for the development of the plant trade.

Opportunities in Plants.

In our homes, our hotels and restaurants we decorate freely with plants. In the American hotels I noted the absence of large palms in the halls and corridors. Foliage and flowering plants in the lounging places and public rooms, such as we are accustomed to in summer and winter, were also lacking, and plants were conspicuous by their absence from the dinner tables. There is an opportunity there for the development of the plant trade. It appeared to me that the American public does not take such a keen and enthusiastic interest in home gardening as we do.

Will You Offer Criticism?

public a smaller choice of varieties to select from.

Carnations—English and American.

In carnations I anticipated great things and I was not disappointed. The fine, healthy plants and their cropping qualities are marvelous, but for quality our English blooms are quite equal to the American standard, and when I say that I take as the standard the blooms shown at the Boston show. Our British Carnation Society, established in 1906,

When that enthusiasm awakens, there will be golden harvests for the nursery-men and hardy plant salesmen who are in the field and prepared for the demand.

Our trade in hardy herbaceous plants has developed marvelously during the last twelve years, probably quadrupled. Our people are keenly interested; home gardening is fashionable with the wealthy and popular with the poor. Some day these conditions will "catch on" in America. When William R. Smith, of Washington, was over here a year or two ago, he said the greatest change he noticed from his previous visit was "the great variety of plants in the well kept gardens of the artisans."

American City Parks.

I was deeply interested in the large public parks in all the cities I visited, but, unfortunately, I was too early to see them in their verdant robes. You have more very large parks than we can boast of and, generally speaking, their extent gives them a grandeur all their own; the judicious planting of trees and shrubs completes the picture. I fancy our parks show a livelier display of flowers in spring and summer, as we make more ample provision in that direction in the shape of flower beds and borders.

Chicago's system of small public parks cannot be too highly commended or too freely imitated. They are grand assets to the well-being and health of the community.

Fairmount park, Philadelphia, is magnificent. I wish I could see and enjoy it in summer. Philadelphia may justly be proud of the natural beauties and extent of its pleasure ground. As I was transported from one end to the other in an automobile—a 10-mile drive—the idea flashed through my mind that it was more than "a Sabbath day's journey" for many Philadelphians to reach it. What a pity nature did not distribute it around the city!

Washington impressed itself upon me as a "garden city." That impression will always remain. Embosomed in trees, it approaches the ideal that many of us are striving for over here in the planning of cities and towns. Progress in that direction is slow; perhaps it is sure.

The Boston Show.

Boston show was a great show. On its management I have no adverse criticisms to advance and none reached my ears. On the contrary, I admired the order and good management that prevailed, reflecting the highest possible credit on all concerned in its organization. I admit it was a great show, but come over to London any year in May and you will see a greater. The Temple show covers a smaller area than did the Boston show, but it provides more variety, the cream of European products in horticulture. True, the third week in May is a more favorable date.

The exhibits from Roland, Walsh and Farquhar stood out preëminent. The sweet peas from William Sim were most remarkable and I was indeed glad to be thus early an eye-witness of Zvolanek's latest introductions, destined to make their mark in the world of sweet peas. The pink antirrhinums again caught my eye and admiration. The cut roses, taking them all around, were superb. The carnations I have already expressed an opinion upon; the huge masses of blooms were most creditable to the growers, but I certainly would have appreciated more elegance in the arrangement. Nephrolepis from the F. R. Pierson Co. were extremely interesting on account of the variations.

Some General Conclusions.

Taking the show all in all, it was a grand testimonial to the enterprise of American horticulturists and "Merit" was written in large letters on the exhibits all the way around.

When I try to compare floriculture in America with floriculture in England, I am led to the conclusion that the differences are not very great. The scale of operations may vary and methods may differ, but the results arrived at are practically alike. There exist wider differences in the fashions in flowers and the flower shows of London and Paris than are apparent between those of London and Boston, and Paris is only eight hours from the British capital. May floriculture continue to flourish in America and in all countries, is the earnest wish of

J. S. Bruntom.

["Impressions" have become quite the fad; the British visitors following Mr. Bruntom's lead are busy writing their recollections for the English trade press, from which they are being extensively copied, and The Review also has received from W. E. Wallace, Dunstable, an appreciative letter with regard to his six weeks' trip to the United States.]

THE CONTROL OF INSECT PESTS.

[An extract from a talk by M. C. Ebel, before the New York Florists' Club May 8.]

Experience has taught me that entirely too little thought and consideration are given by the growers to that important feature of the business, the control of insect pests, and the neglect of this at times causes them serious loss, which might easily be overcome by a little more attention to the preventing of insects getting a foothold on their plants. In every other branch the progressive growers are alive to the new conditions and methods employed and keep themselves in tune with the times, but when it comes to controlling insects it appears that too many of them find that their grandfather's ways are still good enough for them. But plants are much like the human being who is not content to bear only what his forefathers suffered; they are continually afflicted by new diseases and insects and it is essential that the florist or gardener who is ambitious to rank with the successful of his profession should study this important phase of plant culture as he does the temperature, fertilizer, etc.

Some growers prefer fumigating or vaporizing, and others spraying, as a means of insect control. From the results that are being obtained there is little doubt that both remedies are effective when properly applied, but improper applications, no matter how good the material employed may be, must result in failure, and carelessness oftentimes is the chief contributor when bad results are obtained. Both the methods referred to have their special merits, fumigation being generally regarded as the more economical from the labor-saving standpoint. But on many of the large places spraying is being resorted to more and more, for it is found to be the less harmful to plants, and with proper system the labor of an establishment can be engaged in the work without additional cost above that of fumigating; in other words, when everything is done in its time and place spraying can be made one of the routines of the regular work in a house. Fumigating requires the filling of a house, while spraying is necessary only in that part of the house where the pests have taken a hold, when cures are sought. Still, every grower should bear in mind that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and nowhere can this old adage be more truly applied than in the control of insect pests. Our most successful growers no longer wait for the insects to put in an appearance, but fumigate or spray regularly to keep the pests down, as they realize that clean plants make healthy growth.

Too much care cannot be exercised in the use of insecticides to obtain proper results. Many men are satisfied to make a guess at the proportions required and will not take the trouble of careful measuring, and then when failure or, worse, injury results, the remedies are immediately blamed and the careless management of those entrusted with the work of applying them seems seldom to be considered. Fumigation and spraying are regarded by too many as only boys' work, although no careful grower would set an apprentice at work to attend to the fertilizing of his houses and it certainly does not seem

Great as the floricultural industry is in America, it appears to me that it has a still greater future, and that at no distant date. The cut flower trade is no doubt abreast of the times. There is room for the development of the plant trade.

Opportunities in Plants.

In our homes, our hotels and restaurants we decorate freely with plants. In the American hotels I noted the absence of large palms in the halls and corridors. Foliage and flowering plants in the lounging places and public rooms, such as we are accustomed to in summer and winter, were also lacking, and plants were conspicuous by their absence from the dinner tables. There is an opportunity there for the development of the plant trade. It appeared to me that the American public does not take such a keen and enthusiastic interest in home gardening as we do.

Will You Offer Criticism?

public a smaller choice of varieties to select from.

Carnations—English and American.

In carnations I anticipated great things and I was not disappointed. The fine, healthy plants and their cropping qualities are marvelous, but for quality our English blooms are quite equal to the American standard, and when I say that I take as the standard the blooms shown at the Boston show. Our British Carnation Society, established in 1906,

When that enthusiasm awakens, there will be golden harvests for the nurserymen and hardy plant salesmen who are in the field and prepared for the demand.

Our trade in hardy herbaceous plants has developed marvelously during the last twelve years, probably quadrupled. Our people are keenly interested; home gardening is fashionable with the wealthy and popular with the poor. Some day these conditions will "catch on" in America. When William R. Smith, of Washington, was over here a year or two ago, he said the greatest change he noticed from his previous visit was "the great variety of plants in the well kept gardens of the artisans."

American City Parks.

I was deeply interested in the large public parks in all the cities I visited, but, unfortunately, I was too early to see them in their verdant robes. You have more very large parks than we can boast of and, generally speaking, their extent gives them a grandeur all their own; the judicious planting of trees and shrubs completes the picture. I fancy our parks show a livelier display of flowers in spring and summer, as we make more ample provision in that direction in the shape of flower beds and borders.

Chicago's system of small public parks cannot be too highly commended or too freely imitated. They are grand assets to the well-being and health of the community.

Fairmount park, Philadelphia, is magnificent. I wish I could see and enjoy it in summer. Philadelphia may justly be proud of the natural beauties and extent of its pleasure ground. As I was transported from one end to the other in an automobile—a 10-mile drive—the idea flashed through my mind that it was more than "a Sabbath day's journey" for many Philadelphians to reach it. What a pity nature did not distribute it around the city!

Washington impressed itself upon me as a "garden city." That impression will always remain. Embosomed in trees, it approaches the ideal that many of us are striving for over here in the planning of cities and towns. Progress in that direction is slow; perhaps it is sure.

The Boston Show.

Boston show was a great show. On its management I have no adverse criticisms to advance and none reached my ears. On the contrary, I admired the order and good management that prevailed, reflecting the highest possible credit on all concerned in its organization. I admit it was a great show, but come over to London any year in May and you will see a greater. The Temple show covers a smaller area than did the Boston show, but it provides more variety, the cream of European products in horticulture. True, the third week in May is a more favorable date.

The exhibits from Roland, Walsh and Farquhar stood out preëminent. The sweet peas from William Sim were most remarkable and I was indeed glad to be thus early an eye-witness of Zvolanek's latest introductions, destined to make their mark in the world of sweet peas. The pink antirrhinums again caught my eye and admiration. The cut roses, taking them all around, were superb. The carnations I have already expressed an opinion upon; the huge masses of blooms were most creditable to the growers, but I certainly would have appreciated more elegance in the arrangement. Nephrolepis from the F. R. Pierson Co. were extremely interesting on account of the variations.

Some General Conclusions.

Taking the show all in all, it was a grand testimonial to the enterprise of American horticulturists and "Merit"

The Goldsboro Bride's Bouquet.

was written in large letters on the exhibits all the way around.

When I try to compare floriculture in America with floriculture in England, I am led to the conclusion that the differences are not very great. The scale of operations may vary and methods may differ, but the results arrived at are practically alike. There exist wider differences in the fashions in flowers and the flower shows of London and Paris than are apparent between those of London and Boston, and Paris is only eight hours from the British capital. May floriculture continue to flourish in America and in all countries, is the earnest wish of

J. S. Brunton.

["Impressions" have become quite the vogue; the British visitors following Mr. Brunton's lead are busy writing their recollections for the English trade press, from which they are being extensively copied, and The Review also has received from W. E. Wallace, Dunstable, an appreciative letter with regard to his six weeks' trip to the United States.]

THE CONTROL OF INSECT PESTS.

[An extract from a talk by M. C. Ebel, before the New York Florists' Club May 8.]

Experience has taught me that entirely too little thought and consideration are given by the growers to that important feature of the business, the control of insect pests, and the neglect of this at times causes them serious loss, which might easily be overcome by a little more attention to the preventing of insects getting a foothold on their plants. In every other branch the progressive growers are alive to the new conditions and methods employed and keep themselves in tune with the times, but when it comes to controlling insects it appears that too many of them find that their grandfather's ways are still good enough for them. But plants are much like the human being who is not content to bear only what his forefathers suffered; they are continually afflicted by new diseases and insects and it is essential that the florist or gardener who is ambitious to rank with the successful of his profession should study this important phase of plant culture as he does the temperature, fertilizer, etc.

Some growers prefer fumigating or vaporizing, and others spraying, as a means of insect control. From the results that are being obtained there is little doubt that both remedies are effective when properly applied, but improper applications, no matter how good the material employed may be, must result in failure, and carelessness oftentimes is the chief contributor when bad results are obtained. Both the methods referred to have their special merits, fumigation being generally regarded as the more economical from the labor-saving standpoint. But on many of the large places spraying is being resorted to more and more, for it is found to be the less harmful to plants, and with proper system the labor of an establishment can be engaged in the work without additional cost above that of fumigating; in other words, when everything is done in its time and place spraying can be made one of the routines of the regular work in a house. Fumigating requires the filling of a house, while spraying is necessary only in that part of the house where the pests have taken a hold, when cures are sought. Still, every grower should bear in mind that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and nowhere can this old adage be more truly applied than in the control of insect pests. Our most successful growers no longer wait for the insects to put in an appearance, but fumigate or spray regularly to keep the pests down, as they realize that clean plants make healthy growth.

Too much care cannot be exercised in the use of insecticides to obtain proper results. Many men are satisfied to make a guess at the proportions required and will not take the trouble of careful measuring, and then when failure or, worse, injury results, the remedies are immediately blamed and the careless management of those entrusted with the work of applying them seems seldom to be considered. Fumigation and spraying are regarded by too many as only boys' work, although no careful grower would set an apprentice at work to attend to the fertilizing of his houses and it certainly does not seem that one of these departments in the growing of plants is of much less consequence than the other.

It must be admitted that much more attention is given today to the proper means and methods of insect control than has ever been the case in the past, and it is also true that the means for their control are more effective than they have been heretofore; but by no means has perfection been attained and great opportunity is still at hand for further improvement to those who are giving thought and study to the ravages which result in the loss of millions of dollars yearly in the horticultural and agricultural industries of this country.

PEAS IN THE OPEN.

Before the early outdoor plants of sweet peas get too far advanced, give them a liberal mulching of grass, old hay, straw or partly spent manure, the last being the best, as it allows of some manurial properties being washed down to the roots. Keep the plants well cultivated until they are mulched and choose a day following a considerable rainfall to spread on the mulch. If the seedlings come up too thickly, have courage to thin them and always get the supports in position before the plants start to fall over. Sweet peas out of doors will not produce flowers equal to those raised under glass, except it may be in the more northerly states near the seaboard. They are cool and moisture-loving plants, and in an average summer the moisture they need is usually lacking.

SWEET PEAS NOT FLOWERING.

Can you tell me why my sweet peas did not have even one bloom last winter, though the vines were strong and healthy? I had fine ones in the summer, which were full of bloom. I sowed seed ripened in the greenhouse and planted for Christmas bloom, but I did not get one flower. Now I have sowed aster seed in the same way and I fear that I may have another failure. If it is because of ripening the seed in the house, please let me know. The seed was sound and good. L. P.

You do not state what varieties of sweet peas you sowed in your houses. It is just possible that you have made the mistake of using sorts which, while excellent outdoors for summer flowering, will simply not bloom at all under glass in winter, but, if left in sufficiently long, will flower in spring. Such sorts as Dorothy Eckford, Countess of Spencer and all other Spencer varieties, Helen Lewis, Lady Grisell Hamilton and other popular sorts are of no use for winter flowering, but excellent for a crop wanted from the end of April until outdoor flowers are obtainable. If your plants were strong and vigorous, the seed must have been all right. Another season use only the special winter-flowering varieties, such as Christmas Pink, Florence Denzer, Watchung, Mrs. Sim, Wallace and Mrs. W. W. Smalley.

Aster seeds that have been carefully selected from pollinated flowers should be all right, but you would do better with imported German seed, or any good American strain, such as Vick's and other specialists produce. C. W.

BULBS IN SCHENLEY PARK.

Each year about 200,000 new bulbs are purchased for Schenley park, in Pittsburgh, Pa., and these are planted in solid colors in the beds. On one of the walks a number of beds of Couleur Cardinal tulips, along one border, gave the appearance of a stretch of 1,000 feet of red bloom that was exceedingly effective. Beds on the lawn, twenty to thirty feet in diameter, of Duchesse de Parma tulips, showed a richness of color that never failed to attract attention. On the circles and other walks were found beds of Pink Beauty, probably the best pink in cultivation for bedding. These, with Cardinal Rappolla, Salvator rosea, Keizerskroon, Proserpine, Murillo, Imperator rosea and others, were grand and the flowers were the finest for several years.

After blooming, all the bulbs are dug and matured in a shed. The next fall these are planted under the shrubbery and in long stretches of lawn, right in the grass, in some places covering an acre, and one can find carriages standing along these roads any time, while people admire the effects. Parrots, Darwins and Gesnerianas are mixed with those planted in the shrubbery, to bloom after the early varieties are gone.

While there is no doubt about the beauty of the new bulbs planted in beds, the most artistic effects are those produced by the old bulbs in the grass and in by-places, even though the individual flowers may not be so fine.

Hoo-Hoo.

I have a few azaleas that were left over from Easter and I should like to know how to keep them over for next Easter, as I have never yet saved any from one season to another. Please tell me, also, when to bring them in so that they will bloom. I am located in eastern Pennsylvania. J. D. P.

Unless your other duties are too numerous and exacting, it will pay you well to save the azaleas, as they will probably bloom more readily and freely than newly imported stock. All flowers and flower seeds should be removed from the plants which you intend to carry over. After the middle of May, in your latitude, they may be either planted out in any good garden soil where they can be reached with the hose and kept well syringed, or they may be plunged outdoors in the sun. The pots should be plunged in some material to the rim, but in a place where water will not remain standing in wet weather. Over the surface of the pots about an inch of rotted stable manure should be spread. In hot, dry weather the plants will need a daily syringing and they must never be allowed to become "killing dry."

Leave the plants outdoors till about the end of September, or till there is danger of frost. A light freeze will not injure the flower buds, but it is better not to run any risks. In repotting from the open ground, reduce the balls with a sharp-pointed hardwood stick, so that they will go into as small pots as possible. A compost of three parts loam, one part leaf-mold and a good dash of sharp sand will suit the plants. Any manure used must be old and thoroughly decayed. The old idea about peat being a necessity for successful azalea culture has been long ago exploded. Be sure to work the soil well around the sides of the pots and ram it firmly, so as to leave no open spaces. Soak well with water and leave them outdoors in the full sun until threatened frost compels their removal indoors. The best place in which to store them is a pit, where they can get sufficient light and where frost can be excluded without any resort to fire heat, unless it be in zero weather. Spray the plants freely for a week or two.

FIELD PLANTING.

Whether the violet plants raised were from cuttings or by root divisions, it is now time to set them out in the field. Probably nine-tenths of the singles are propagated from divisions of the old plants, which, if left with some roots on and with the leaves pretty well cleaned off, can be planted right outdoors in cool, moist weather, and thus treated will make just as fine plants as when more fussed over. Violets, both single and double, want planting out before really hot and dry weather starts in, so that they can get established before real summer weather arrives. The ground should be well enriched and space left between the rows to allow of hand cultivators being used, if sufficient space cannot be given for horse cultivators. The number of varieties of violets does not increase as do those of carnations, roses or mums, and two varieties of doubles, Campbell and Marie Louise, and one variety of single, Princess of Wales, are the standbys of an overwhelming majority of the growers, as they have been for some years now.

Field of Liliun Harrisii at William Bustrin's, Watsonville, Cal.PLANTING MIKADO ASTER SEED.

If Mikado aster seed is sown now and the plants put in greenhouse benches about June 1, will the blooms mature?
J. R. S. & S.

Yes, but they will do much better if planted in well enriched ground outdoors. For early asters indoor culture is all right, but for later crops outdoor culture is much to be preferred. You still have ample time in which to sow aster seed and have them flower before frost; in fact, some varieties can be sown as late as from the middle to the end of June.

LILY BULB GROWING.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph taken last June of a part of a field of Liliun Harrisii being grown for bulbs by William Bustrin, Watsonville, Cal. The part shown in the picture contained about 2,000 bulbs.

Mr. Bustrin started in 1906 with two dozen bulbs and from these has increased his stock to 10,000 or 15,000. He estimates that the bulbs increase about four to five fold annually, the younger bulbs seeming to produce more bulblets than the older ones. His soil is rather heavy and it produces a remarkably solid bulb. The bulbs mature the latter part of October and are then lifted and replanted, the bulblets being of course separated at that time.

The bulbs he started with were from an old garden and the stock seems entirely free from disease.

His greatest difficulty in growing these bulbs is in obtaining sufficient labor to do at the proper time the large amount of hand work required. In his section fruit is the main industry and the Japanese supply most of the labor. And they generally work for a share of the crop, especially in the case of strawberries, and of course this cannot well be arranged in the case of lily bulbs. But he hopes to overcome these local difficulties and believes there is an excellent future for the lily bulb growing industry in his section.

THE HARRISII OF TODAY.

[Extracts from a paper by Arthur T. Boddington, read before the New York Florists' Club May 8, 1911.]

I left New York April 5, arriving at Bermuda April 7. The lilies were just coming into bloom; hardly any were expanded, but the buds were white.

Disbudding the Lilies.

The growers have been busy in the onion and potato business this year and they were a little behind with the disbudding of the lilies. A great deal of care is necessary to produce good bulbs. No weeds can be allowed to grow more than an inch or two high. If the weeds are allowed to get large, when they are pulled out they disturb the surface roots of the lily, which will always result in serious injury and failure when the bulb is grown the next year. It is a practice among the Bermuda growers to disbud the lilies just as the buds are whitening. This is done that the plants may be strengthened and that all the nutriment may go to form as large a bulb as possible. Fortunately for me, the weather, which had been rather cool, became suddenly warm and by Palm Sunday the fields were a sight to behold. The next day, April 10, I made photographs of some of the best fields at Columbia Farm, Longbird, Smiths Island and at Westmeath. The lilies were growing strongly and for the most part showed perfect health. When examining them closely, however, there seemed to be about ten per cent of stunted and deformed plants, all of which are being dug out by the more careful growers.

Rough Handling Causes Deformity.

Upon my pointing these plants out to R. H. James, he told me they had not been removed before for the reason that in digging out these rogues an equal number of good plants would be destroyed, and that the plants that were deformed and stunted were really not diseased plants but bulbs which had been injured in digging the previous year, or in the process of planting. Mr. James informed me that they handle lily bulbs as if they were eggs and that rough handling in digging, or by the seedsmen, or by the florists when the bulbs are being potted, is one of the most frequent causes of the stunted and deformed plants.

To convince me that his theory is correct, Mr. James had a number of these deformed plants dug in my presence. He demonstrated to me that the bulbs showing these deformities were smaller than when they were planted and that they could never even by accident get packed in the cases as salable bulbs, for the reason that they would not be big enough to grade as even 5 to 7-inch bulbs.

The bulbs of these deformed plants, or, as our friend Louis Schmutz calls them, "kyoudles," were all afflicted with a partial rotting of the root base. Mr. James, who has had thirty years' experience in growing bulbs in Bermuda, tells me that to drop a bulb out of the hand onto even the soft ground will frequently produce an injury sufficient to cause this disease of the root base. There seems to be nothing contagious in this disease.

Ward's Disease Being Eradicated.

The other disease that seems to be afflicting the lilies in Bermuda is what is known as Ward's disease. The symptoms of this disease are as follows: The plant starts to grow healthily, until it gets up a few inches high, when it develops yellowish-brown streaks and spots in the foliage and finally peters out to nothing, or produces a deformed flower. This disease has been almost eradicated, though here and there a plant was to be seen afflicted with it. About the only remedy for this disease that one of these departments in the growing of plants is of much less consequence than the other.

The symptoms of this disease are as follows: The plant starts to grow healthily, until it gets up a few inches high, when it develops yellowish-brown streaks and spots in the foliage and finally peters out to nothing, or produces a deformed flower. This disease has been almost eradicated, though here and there a plant was to be seen afflicted with it. About the only remedy for this disease is to dig up the bulb and see that it is destroyed, though spraying with arsenate of lead and fungicides is a preventive measure. The percentage of this Ward's disease, however, was very small.

Lilium Jamesii was looking fine at Mr. James' Longbird Farm. This lily is almost disease-proof. It has extra fine foliage, and flowers under Bermuda conditions one week to ten days later than Lilium Harrisii. The bloom is slightly shorter and not so large as Lilium Harrisii, but it is a robust type and well worth growing. Furthermore, this lot had been thoroughly rogued and were true to name.

Careful Roguing.

A point in favor of the Bermuda lilies as grown at Smith's Island, Longbird and at Westmeath, is the fact that these growers have eliminated all hybrid types. I do not think that in the pure Harrisii grown on these establishments there could be seen more than one hybrid in a hundred bulbs. These hybrids were plain to be seen by the fact that they were only beginning to turn down their buds, whereas the true Harrisii were in full bloom. The method of roguing is as follows: The men go through the fields with paint brushes and daub the foliage of all plants that are to be discarded, such as hybrids, Ward's disease plants and "kyoudles." The plants cannot be removed in April, as it would cause too much injury to the good stock. Lilium Harrisii is particularly sensitive to any disturbance of its surface roots.

I have been doing my best to urge the Bermuda growers to still further improve their stock and to endeavor to get Lilium Harrisii back to where it was twenty-five years ago. This is being done by careful and painstaking methods. There is no doubt in my mind that the progressive florist of the United States would gladly pay fifty per cent more than the present price for Lilium Harrisii bulbs if the stock could be improved still further.

The great trouble has been that plants afflicted with Ward's disease will produce just as handsome and fine looking bulbs as the healthy plants do. Further, a crop of lily bulbs may be well grown and be absolutely ruined by rough handling in digging, in packing, or in the hands of the bulb dealer, or even in the hands of the florists.

Growers Should Establish Brands.

I think that the Bermuda methods of selling lily bulbs have been entirely wrong, or, perhaps I should say the methods of the American bulb dealer in buying them. Under conditions as they have been, the man who grew good lily bulbs in Bermuda and looked after them carefully got no more for his product than the grower that was careless. I often think that the selling of lily bulbs should be a good deal like the cigar business. It is pretty hard to tell what a cigar is until you smoke it, and for that reason the cigar manufacturer sells his goods under a brand. He takes every care that no cigars go into a box bearing his brand unless they will uphold the reputation of the brand he spent his money to establish. This same condition should apply to lily bulbs and the man who grows the extra fine article should be suitably recompensed for the trouble and care he has gone to. There are some stocks of lily bulbs on the island of Bermuda which are cheap at the price they are sold for, and there are other stocks which are dear at any price, but the bulbs, when they come to New York next July and August, will all look about the same.

I have spoken only of the good fields which I saw. I saw many small patches which were looking badly, but on the whole both Lilium Harrisii and Lilium Jamesii are showing much improvement in spite of a rather cold, dry and unfavorable growing season. I think that any florist who buys Bermuda bulbs from dealers who are earnestly trying to encourage the Bermudians by paying liberally for well grown stock will get his money's worth this season.

Good Work Deserves Reward.

Due to the painstaking care of such men as R. H. James, of St. George's; W. H. Conyers, of Hamilton, the vigor of Lilium Harrisii is coming back. It only remains for the bulb dealers to give these gentlemen proper support.

As regards the shipping of lily flowers, this pernicious practice was going on to a limited extent and was being carried on mainly by people who do not grow bulbs. Quite a business is being done in Hamilton now in sweet peas, iris flowers, roses, etc., and last but not least, cut lilies. The large hotels were entirely filled up most of the winter with American visitors and we cannot blame the Bermuda florist for taking advantage of the situation, so long as he does not cut flowers from bulbs which he afterwards intends to ship up to his American brother florists to grow.

To me, Lilium Harrisii is the grandest and noblest of the Easter lilies. Furthermore, a well grown plant of 5 to 7-inch Lilium Harrisii will produce about as many flowers as a 7 to 9-inch Japanese giganteum and for this reason I contend that Lilium Harrisii is not any more expensive. I hope within the next few years to see Lilium Harrisii come back and take its rightful place among the commercial lilies grown by the florists of the United States. This, however, can only be accomplished by the greatest care on the part of the Bermuda growers and by the establishing of brands, so that when a florist in the United States buys a case of bulbs of a brand with a high reputation he can depend on getting 900 good plants out of 1,000 bulbs, with proper care and attention on his part.

WINDOW BOXES.

Coming Into Greater Favor.

It is encouraging to note the advance being made in the use of window boxes, not only at private residences, but also hotels and the large dry goods stores, some of the latter using hundreds annually. There is a fine opportunity here for wide-awake retailers to branch out and do a lucrative business. Illustrated circulars mailed to desirable parties, boxes of suitable size being shown filled with plants, sample boxes neatly filled being also on exhibition at the store or greenhouses, will bring business. We still are far behind European cities in the use of these boxes. Anyone visiting London for coronation week will be struck by the immense number of these seen on every hand. It is the same in Paris, Berlin and other big cities and there is no reason whatever why more should not be seen here. Passers-by will always pause and admire a store with window box adornment and those who have used them once use them again, showing that not only does it improve the attractiveness of the outside of the store, but it encourages customers to come inside.

For Larger Business Buildings.

It is noticed that on stores running eight to ten stories in height the plants generally used are scarlet geraniums and variegated vincas. These two plants withstand hot and at times arid conditions as well as anything. S. A. Nutt and Ricard seem to be favorites, but the finest display seen last season was of the single Jacquerie, with which green vinca was used. This far outclassed any of the doubles. It is, of course, well understood that the soil must be rich and boxes must not be shallow or too narrow; six to seven inches deep, or even eight inches, and a similar width as a minimum will give a sufficient rooting space for ordinary plants if water is supplied in necessary quantities.

One color of geranium to a box is of course best, and where large numbers are used on a building uniformity is perhaps necessary. In private houses, however, greater variety should be introduced and the number of plants usable in the make-up of boxes is legion. Geraniums, petunias, nasturtiums, verbenas, cannas of dwarf habit, and Lobelia gracilis all stand the sun well, while ivy geraniums, hydrangeas, fuchsias, tuberous begonias and show pelargoniums need some shade.

Other Good Material.

As a general rule, a better effect is produced by using one or two varieties of plants than a miscellaneous mixture. For heavily shaded places, where boxes of considerable size are permissible, green plants alone can be planted and here such palms as Kentia Belmoreana and K. Forsteriana, Phoenix rupicola, P. Canariensis, P. Roebelenii, Areca lutescens, Curculigo recurvata, ficus, crotons, dracaenas of the colored-leaved section, such ferns as nephrolepis, cyrtomiums and adiantums, grevilleas and a host of others are at command.

Crotons stand the sun well, better than the colored dracenas, and where high colors are admired answer well. Green-leaved subjects are usually, however, more popular, the green foliage being more natural and suggestive of coolness on a torrid day. The green dracenas, like Australis and congesta, are among the toughest subjects for withstanding sun and wind, and are good alike for centers of vases or in boxes. The phoenixes stand sun better than the other palms, but all palms turn a little yellow when fully exposed to the sun.

A fine drooping variegated subject, not sufficiently used, is Abutilon tessellatum variegatum; the somewhat newer Savitzii is also good. All the abutilons stand sun well and flower fairly well through the summer.

Soaking the Ball.

In filling piazza and window boxes, vases for lawns and cemetery use, hanging baskets, etc., do the work at home and it will be done a lot more economically than at the places of your customers. Always make sure of one thing, viz., that all plants set in the boxes, etc., have their roots moist. In the rush and turmoil of bedding-out, careless men will cover up these with dust-dry roots. Do not allow it for a moment, for no matter if you soak the boxes at once after filling, you will not soak these dust-dry balls and such plants will never grow and thrive like those with moist earth about them. This applies even more forcibly to plants bedded outdoors, where watering is not much done, but the assistant who will persist in planting stock of any kind with the balls of soil dry about the roots is neither a reliable nor desirable one to retain, and the man who continues to tolerate such work will assuredly in the long run have much cause to regret it.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Planting.

Commercial growers who desire to cut flowers by the end of September should now have their stock in condition to be planted. This would include such varieties as Golden Glow, October Frost, Yellow October Frost, Monrovia, Rosiere, Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose and other varieties of like character. It is true they can be planted much later than this and still be cut at about the same time, but it is also true that the plants must have a reasonable time to grow, in order to develop a long enough stem.

It must be remembered that, to get flowers by the end of September, the bud must be taken on some kinds in the last days of July, and in nearly all cases not later than the first part of August, as a bud takes from eight to ten weeks to develop.

In many cases, if the plants are not yet properly established in pots, they can be put right into the bench from the sand, and if shaded for a day or two they will come along and make much finer looking plants than stock that has been raised early and grown along in pots, and has been more or less stunted.

The Benches and the Soil.

Every year at this season we are asked the question, "Is it better to plant chrysanthemums in solid beds or raised benches?" In the light of our own experience, I would unhesitatingly declare in favor of raised benches, particularly with the early varieties. When they are grown on the raised benches, with about four inches of soil, the roots are absolutely under control and can be more easily regulated. In speaking of regulating, reference is made to the fact that if a batch of October Frost, for instance, continues to grow, as it often will, without producing a bud, it is then possible, by drying off the plant somewhat and by checking its growth, to force it to bud much sooner than it would if left to itself.

It is assumed that the grower prepared his soil last fall or early this spring, so that it is now in condition to go into the benches. A good fibrous loam, with one-fourth well decomposed stable manure and a light sprinkling of fine bone, makes the ideal compost. The chrysanthemum will grow in almost any soil, but a heavy clay is better, if it is loosened with quite a little sand or a considerable quantity of humus in some form.

The Distance Apart.

The distance apart to set out the plants will vary somewhat, according to the quality of the flowers which the grower wishes to produce and the demand in his market. It is useless to try to produce a 50-cent grade if the market conditions in his town are such that 25 cents is as much as people will pay for the flowers. In our market, in New York, there is a certain demand for high-class flowers, which we endeavor to supply and which sell for $50 per hundred, wholesale.

To produce this class of flowers, the plants must be set no closer than 9x6, and with many varieties 9x8 or 9x9 would be even better. This is for single-stem plants. Some growers set out their plants that same distance apart and take two, three or even four stems on every plant. They claim they make at least as much money as they would were they to grow but one flower to a plant, in this allotted space.

One facetious friend of mine claims that he is a public benefactor, because he makes three mums grow in the same space in which I grow one, and he argues that, should I lose my one bud through any accident, and should it fail to produce a flower, I get nothing at all from that space, while he will get, at the worst, one bud out of his three, so he is sure of something.

It can readily be seen, therefore, that it is difficult to advise a man just what grade of flowers to grow, though it is a fact that thousands of the medium sized flowers are sold, to dozens of the finest grade.

Plants for Exhibition.

Exhibition growers should also be setting out their plants this month, and the sooner the better. Experience has long ago proved that, to get depth and solidity in the flower, the plant must have a long enough season of growth so that it may build up properly by producing stocky, short-jointed growth and ample foliage. This wood will ripen easily in the fall, and when the crown bud is secured—which is the bud to take for all the exhibition varieties—the neck of the flower does not get limp and the flower itself greatly improves in size and fullness.

I have heard men complain that they cannot handle varieties that need to be taken on the crown bud, as the neck is long and weak. This is almost entirely due to the mistake of growing the plants too rapidly, so that the tissues of the stem have not been built up as nature intended them to be.

The chrysanthemum is not a semi-aquatic, as some growers seem to think, judging from the quantity of water they apply to its roots. Neither is it a tropical plant. Common-sense methods of culture, with the fact in mind that the mum is almost a hardy plant, will always insure success.

Charles H. Totty.

THE COMPOST PILE.

The time is near at hand when a lot of compost will be needed for growing chrysanthemums, smilax and other crops in, and it is not good policy to wait until the planting time arrives before preparing the compost. If the sod and manure were layered up last fall, it should now be chopped down and some fine bone added to it before being mixed. Do not let the soil pile become a mass of rank weeds, as these will speedily take away much of the goodness from it. It pays to keep the compost pile clean, just as it does to keep the greenhouses themselves in the same attractive condition.

The matter of getting the right kind of compost is one that is worth careful consideration.

A HOUSE OF HILDA.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a not especially good photograph of an excellent house of roses. The variety is Hilda, growing, of course, at the establishment of Myers & Samtman, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. As every rose grower knows, Hilda is a sport of My Maryland and originated with Myers & Samtman, who were among the first to take up Maryland in a large way. With them Maryland was the most profitable rose on the place, until Hilda came. It is Maryland over again except for a much deeper, richer pink. Myers & Samtman last season grew 5,000 plants of it, the picture showing one of the houses cropped for Christmas, when an extremely heavy cut was taken. The picture shows the house as it was February 24. The firm is adding another house 55 x 300 this season and will plant Hilda more extensively than before. Some of the plants now flowering have stood in the same bench for three seasons.

If we plant them much deeper than they were when standing in the pots, they are likely to get stem-rot. If planted too shallow, the roots of the plants are liable to be laid bare in cultivating among them. If you think it might take too long to get them all out in time, do not wait until you do, but get the cultivator and run through those first planted at least every two weeks and keep it up. It will pay you. I think keeping the ground loose on top is worth half the fertilizer you can put in. In preparing the ground, do not forget to provide ditches, so the water can not stand, as neglect in this matter is sure death to carnations.

Topping the Plants.

Next in order is a little scientific work, the topping or cutting back. Do not wait until the plants are big enough so that you can cut back four or more shoots at a time. It is better to get at them whenever you have the time to spare, taking the shoots as they get long enough to make three or four branches after they are topped. In order to secure a steady crop in winter, it is advisable not to have the shoots come evenly on the plants. This I prevent by skipping some ready shoots when they are too even, and leaving them for the next trimming. To get the main crop in at a time when we need them most, which is from December 1 to March 1, I stop topping about August 1.

The next step is the housing. In this operation growers differ greatly as to the time of planting. Earlier planting will give earlier and larger flowers, but not as many as when the plants are given a little more time in the field, and as long as the new stock is outside we can keep cutting from the old ones. I still stick to my old time, from August 1 to September 1. The Lawson family, and such varieties as naturally do not make extra long stems, should be taken in first. This, I think, gives the plants plenty of time to get established for the winter.

CARNATION GROWING.

[A paper by Ferdinand Kolbe, of North Detroit, Mich., read before the Detroit Florists' Club at a recent meeting.]

Isn't it the carnation that fills the biggest hole in our pocketbooks? What could we do without it? Is there any other flower that brings joy and pleasure to so great a number of people as does the divine flower (to use the popular expression of other essayists)? Is there any other flower that excels it in beauty, in fragrance, in lasting quality, for general use in making up designs, decorative work and many other uses which it is adapted to, too numerous to mention? Another point in its favor is the simple and plain treatment it requires to bring it to perfection. I say simple; it is simple, if you are willing to study its wants and habit just a little. Now, as to me is assigned the task of giving my experience in growing carnations, I will cheerfully do so to the best of my ability. If others differ with me in opinion, do not criticize harshly, but let me know it, as I am always willing to learn.

The Cuttings.

I will, of course, commence with the cuttings. My first batch I generally put in in December; then is the time when the plants have a good number of side shoots on the fall growth, and these I consider the best, if the strongest, near the base of the stem, are selected, and from healthy plants, of course. After this I generally make about two more batches, as fast as I can find any. When taking them off, I do it in such a way as to do as little damage as possible to the plants, as well as to the cuttings. In trimming them, I think it well to take off the lower two or three tiers of leaves and make a clean cut.

After thoroughly cleaning the propagating bench, I fill it with about three inches of sand and insert the cuttings about 2x1 inches apart, deep enough so they will stand up straight after giving a good soaking. In winter I hardly touch them, except for prompt attention in shading until they are rooted. I do not syringe except when they happen to get dry before they are rooted.

The next step is either to transplant them into flats or to pot them up, each of which methods has its advocates.

For the last few years I have planted the early ones in flats and potted them in March in 2½-inch pots, which I find is a fairly good way to keep them growing right along. The late ones I put in 2-inch pots and give them as good a place in a cool house as I can. As the weather permits I move them to coldframes, to remain there until planting time in the field. The soil I use for potting is the same as in the benches, but well decomposed.

Planting in the Field.

While they are in the field, we must not think we have a rest for a while. They need attention then as well as in the houses. In the first place, we must see that the land is in proper condition to receive them. It is a good plan to plow the land in the fall, dragging it early in the spring, giving it a good dressing of manure, plowing it again and then dragging it and leveling it.

Now we are ready for planting. I make my rows about fifteen inches apart and leave every seventh row out to make room for a walk, as the ground generally gets hard enough without trampling much between the rows while working among them. In planting we must see that we do not either plant too deep or too shallow.

A ROCHESTER RETAILER.

For more than half a century the name of Salter has been linked with the florists' industries of Rochester, N. Y. As far back as 1860 Richard Salter stood high among the gardeners and commercial growers who supplied the Rochester market, and anything produced by this successful English gardener was sure to be of excellent quality. That the father's vocation is often chosen by the sons found no exception here, and Mr. Salter's two boys, Richard G. and Albion H., began working around the place in various capacities, and soon became capable greenhouse managers and salesmen. In 1871 Richard entered the employ of James Vick, as clerk in the cut flower department of the Vick seed store, then located on State street. After about three years he was placed in charge of this department, holding this position until 1881, when he purchased the flower business from Mr. Vick and carried it on alone for over a year, when Albion H. became associated with him, under the name of Salter Bros.

In 1885 an opportunity came to secure a Main street location and the business was moved into a store in the Poyers Hotel building, where under management of Richard G. Salter it has become nearly as well known as the hotel itself.

Just about this time a small branch store was opened at 245 Main street east, with "Al" in charge. This was a fortunate move, as it brought the firm in close touch with the rapidly growing eastern part of the city. After a couple of years this store was moved a block farther east, at the junction of East avenue and Main street. No other florists were located in the immediate vicinity and the business of Salter Bros. grew rapidly. More room was needed, and in 1895 a desirable store was secured in the new Sibley building, at 320 Main street east. This store has one of the best windows in the city for display, and A. H. Salter knows how to take full advantage of his opportunities in this direction.

In addition to the two retail stores, Salter Bros. have fourteen greenhouses and four acres of land on Park avenue, and an equal number of houses and twenty-five acres under cultivation at Fairport.

old stock plants of this bouvardia under glass. Pot them over and feed well and they will give you a nice crop of flowers which will be specially valuable for brides' bouquets or any other work calling for white flowers with some quality.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

The first week in May brought out rather unusual conditions and was just the reverse of the previous week. The quantity of stock decreased greatly, especially the home-grown stock.

Consignments from outside are coming in as usual, and during all of the last week they were cleaned up fairly well each day. On Monday, May 8, the wholesalers cleaned up early on everything, and a great scarcity in carnations and sweet peas was noted, with roses quite plentiful in all varieties. The prices of carnations have gone up to 3 cents and 4 cents for the best, and sweet peas are 50 cents and 75 cents per hundred. There are plenty of peonies, and lilies of all kinds are to be had in any quantity.

A lot of outdoor stock is coming in and selling well, owing to the scarcity of other stock. The weather has been fine and the growers are happy. They had a great amount of planting to do and are taking advantage of the good weather by putting on extra forces of men.

Various Notes.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., was a caller last week, buying supplies. Mr. Denker says business is good, with a great many orders ahead for planting, which weather conditions so far prevented.

The Henry Shaw memorial services will take place at Christ church sometime this month. As usual, the plant

SEASONABLESUGGESTIONS*Ericas.

Ericas are among the hardiest of the hard-wood plants usually grown, and can now be planted outdoors in any good garden soil. Peat is not necessary for their successful culture, but they thrive specially well in land which has had some old, well rotted manure, leaf-mold and sand added to it. A shady location is neither necessary nor desirable, and water should be within easy reach, so that the plants can get a thorough hosing over once or twice a day during the summer. Prune back any long, straggling shoots when setting out the plants and firm the soil well about the roots. Some growers prefer to carry their plants over in pots. These should be plunged to their rims in soil, or better still, ashes, and must never be allowed to suffer from drought at any time. For early flowering the plants carried over in pots have some advantage over those planted out, but those in the open ground make the best growth.

Bouvardias.

Bouvardias, if they have been well hardened, can now be planted outdoors. It is not a safe plan to take them direct from a close, warm house and place outdoors. The plants get a starving, from which they are slow in recovering.

The best of all the bouvardias and the one which is now more popular than any other variety is the large-flowered and sweet-scented Humboldtii corymbiflora. Give young stock eighteen inches apart in the rows; plants carried over from the previous year need thirty-six inches apart. The soil should be well manured and the location a sunny one. If you have any call for choice white flowers in summer, keep some of the

This was a fortunate move, as it brought the firm in close touch with the rapidly growing eastern part of the city. After a couple of years this store was moved a block farther east, at the junction of East avenue and Main street. No other florists were located in the immediate vicinity and the business of Salter Bros. grew rapidly. More room was needed, and in 1895 a desirable store was secured in the new Sibley building, at 320 Main street east. This store has one of the best windows in the city for display, and A. H. Salter knows how to take full advantage of his opportunities in this direction.

In addition to the two retail stores, Salter Bros. have fourteen greenhouses and four acres of land on Park avenue, and an equal number of houses and twenty-five acres under cultivation at Fairport.

old stock plants of this bouvardia under glass. Pot them over and feed well and they will give you a nice crop of flowers which will be specially valuable for brides' bouquets or any other work calling for white flowers with some quality.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

The first week in May brought out rather unusual conditions and was just the reverse of the previous week. The quantity of stock decreased greatly, especially the home-grown stock.

Consignments from outside are coming in as usual, and during all of the last week they were cleaned up fairly well each day. On Monday, May 8, the wholesalers cleaned up early on everything, and a great scarcity in carnations and sweet peas was noted, with roses quite plentiful in all varieties. The prices of carnations have gone up to 3 cents and 4 cents for the best, and sweet peas are 50 cents and 75 cents per hundred. There are plenty of peonies, and lilies of all kinds are to be had in any quantity.

A lot of outdoor stock is coming in and selling well, owing to the scarcity of other stock. The weather has been fine and the growers are happy. They had a great amount of planting to do and are taking advantage of the good weather by putting on extra forces of men.

Various Notes.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., was a caller last week, buying supplies. Mr. Denker says business is good, with a great many orders ahead for planting, which weather conditions so far prevented.

The Henry Shaw memorial services will take place at Christ church sometime this month. As usual, the plant

SEASONABLESUGGESTIONS*Ericas.

Ericas are among the hardiest of the hard-wood plants usually grown, and can now be planted outdoors in any good garden soil. Peat is not necessary for their successful culture, but they thrive specially well in land which has had some old, well rotted manure, leaf-mold and sand added to it. A shady location is neither necessary nor desirable, and water should be within easy reach, so that the plants can get a thorough hosing over once or twice a day during the summer. Prune back any long, straggling shoots when setting out the plants and firm the soil well about the roots. Some growers prefer to carry their plants over in pots. These should be plunged to their rims in soil, or better still, ashes, and must never be allowed to suffer from drought at any time. For early flowering the plants carried over in pots have some advantage over those planted out, but those in the open ground make the best growth.

Bouvardias.

Bouvardias, if they have been well hardened, can now be planted outdoors. It is not a safe plan to take them direct from a close, warm house and place outdoors. The plants get a starving, from which they are slow in recovering.

The best of all the bouvardias and the one which is now more popular than any other variety is the large-flowered and sweet scented Humboldtii corymbiflora. Give young stock eighteen inches apart in the rows; plants carried over from the previous year need thirty six inches apart. The soil should be well manured and the location a sunny one. If you have any call for choice white flowers in summer, keep some of the decorations will be made up of plants from the Missouri Botanical Garden.

J. Farney, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, and A. Viaud, representing Philip L. Carbone, Boston, are here this week, calling on the trade. Both say they had a good trade since leaving home.

Albert Gums, one of Geo. H. Angermueller's right-hand men, was back at his post last week, after ten days of sickness.

The Paris Floral Co., at Broadway and Olive street, which is run by Fred Foster, held an opening of its new store last week and gave away cut carnations. The store has a large show window, with an entrance on each side, and the interior is prettily arranged.

Arthur Meyer, bookkeeper for C. A. Kuehn, was the victim of a painful accident May 3. On leaving the store he boarded a car for home and a sudden start threw him off and broke his right arm. It will be several weeks before he will be able to be in harness again.

David Geddes, who for a long time has been with F. C. Weber, has accepted a position with Mrs. M. M. Ayers. Mr. Geddes was also at one time with C. A. Samuelson, Chicago. Joseph Witek, who for the last two years was Mrs. Ayers' head man, has accepted a position with Fred C. Weber.

Henry Lorenze, who, with his wife, has run the Park Floral Co., at Mississippi and Park avenues, died May 6. He had been ill for some time. The funeral took place May 8 and many members of the trade extended their sympathy to the widow and children.

The Koenig Floral Co., Fred H. Meinhardt and other florists near the big cemeteries have their hands full now, planting out and taking care of large lots in these cemeteries.

Ernest Strehle, superintendent of public parks, has a large force of men at work planting the big flower beds in the different parks. Mr. Strehle was appointed to fill out the term of the late George Ostertag.

Fred H. Weber has been exceedingly busy of late and has had little time to attend to his duties as state vice-president of the S. A. F., the office assigned to him by President Asmus, but he is acknowledged to be a hustler and will make up for lost time when the spring rush is over.

The trustees of the Florists' Club held a meeting at Smith's, May 6, and made arrangements for a fit celebration of the club's twenty-fifth anniversary, which occurs June 28.

The frosts of last week did little if any harm to the fruit crop in Missouri, according to Professors J. C. Whitten and W. L. Howard, of the horticultural department of the State University of Missouri. Burners were placed in readiness in nearly all the fruit orchards and would have been used had the temperature fallen below 30 degrees. Smudge pots were used in all orchards around Springfield, St. Joseph and Jefferson City.

Henry Enders, who has been a student at the Missouri Botanical Garden for the last four years, has been awarded a scholarship at Kew Gardens, England, being selected from a long waiting list of American applicants for a scholarship at Kew. He will sail May 17 on the Campania for England, to take up his new work. He is the third Shaw's Garden student to win a scholarship. We wish the young man much good luck and a safe return home. J. NEW YORK.

The Market.

"The good old summer time" seems to have arrived at last. The wholesale cut flower market is convalescing. The last days of last week developed an encouraging improvement; the overwhelming shipments shortened up considerably and prices steadied. Immense quantities of lilac from the south are here, depressing the value of the home product badly. Dogwood, fruit tree blossoms and even branches of magnolias combine to make the retail windows everywhere attractive. These, too, are utilized largely in wedding and dinner decorations, and of the latter especially there seems to be no end. June holds out much encouragement for the decorators and the bookings for that month are already numerous.

As to roses, there has been no advance in price worthy of mention and overshipment will drop them again to the depressing level of the last two weeks, a condition seldom realized except in the hottest month of the year. Carnations are doing better, and Mothers' day, May 14, should aid in the uplift. Orchids are worth 50 cents now, when perfect. Gardenias from the south are flooding the market and the quality is poor. The best blooms from the local growers do not sell at over $1 a dozen. There seems to be no end to the supply of lilies; $1 per hundred for lilies is a condition without precedent. Let us hope it may never happen again. There is plenty of valley at half the prices of ten days ago. Of sweet peas, tulips and narcissi there is enough and to spare.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club May 8 was well attended and President Nugent opened promptly at 8 o'clock, which enabled him to carry out the long program and close at a reasonable hour.

C. H. Totty reported success in the effort to secure an appropriation of $20,000 for the greenhouses at the New Brunswick Experiment Station. The outing committee reported a change in arrangements for June 28, making tickets for lady and gentleman $6, single tickets for gentlemen $4, and for ladies $2.50. The essay committee reported the promise of stereopticon lectures in the autumn by J. Otto Thilow, of Philadelphia, and J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, also the promise of papers at the June meeting by Messrs. Esler, Rickards, Stewart, Schultz and Young. J. Fisher, M. Du Rie and Joseph Robinson were elected to membership. A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of a sister of W. E. Marshall. The secretary read a letter from P. Welch, Boston, in answer to one sent by the club in appreciation of the courtesies at the National Flower Show.

Arthur T. Boddington read a thoroughly practical paper on his recent trip to Bermuda and on the Harrisii situation. A. Kakuda, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., spoke on the lily question from the Japanese standpoint. James McHutchison was introduced to talk on "South American Floriculture," but said it is a misnomer, as there isn't any floriculture there. Still, he made the account of his recent travels there extremely interesting to his audience. W. B. Du Rie, schoolteacher-florist, spoke in characteristic vein of the work the school teachers are doing in behalf of floriculture. M. C. Ebel talked on the practical features of the use of insecticides. Each speaker was given a vote of thanks.

Robert Schultz, of Madison, staged a vase of splendid Richmond roses and was awarded a cultural certificate.

Al. Rickards, chairman of the house committee, provided liberally for the inner man.

Various Notes.

A committee has been appointed by the Greek Florists' Society to arrange for its annual outing sometime in July.

The new store of the Growers' Cut Flower Co. had in its big window last week some grand Gladiolus Brechleyensis and some fine specimens of the giant Calla Devonensis.

Fengar's splendid Spanish iris is in the market again.

J. K. Allen, as is his custom, is on deck with the first peonies of the season.

M. A. Bowe calls his new store at 12 West Thirty-third street, opposite the Waldorf, "The Shop Beautiful." This will be his headquarters until the fall, when he will return to Broadway.

The florists' supply men on Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets all had a satisfactory season. Several of them will leave for Europe in June on their annual quest for novelties.

J. J. Fellouris has completed the changes in his new store, 100 feet deep. He has sublet the entire upper floor to a Greek social club and will sublet part of the ground floor space to a wholesale florist.

The demand for the new fern, Dryerii, Mr. Kessler says, is exceedingly satisfactory.

Gunther Bros. have a new carnation, unnamed, that will be shortly on exhibition and which possesses great merit and size, and is of a brilliant pink color. The few that arrive daily are taken by one of the Fifth avenue florists.

M. C. Ebel, of the Aphine Co., Madison, N. J., will give a demonstration of his insecticides at Baltimore the last week of May, at the Baltimore Florists' Exchange.

James McManus, now at West Twenty-eighth street, is well pleased with his new location.

An executive meeting of the committee of the National Sweet Pea Society was held at the Astor House May 5.

Alex. McConnell furnished the bouquets for the Gould wedding.

Lawrence W. Kervan is back from a two weeks' rest in Florida.

Many report the new market at Fifty-ninth street a success, but the opening of the market before 5 a. m. is widely condemned.

A. R. Kennedy, of Kennedy & Hunter, announces the arrival of the stork last week, with an embryo seedsman, the bird's first visit.

OBITUARY.

Henry Lorenze.

Henry Lorenze, of the Park Floral Co., at Park and Mississippi avenues, St. Louis, Mo., died May 6, after an illness which had continued for several years. Many members of the trade were present at the funeral and extended their sympathy to the widow and children.

Mrs. Charles Reisig.

Mrs. Charles Reisig died at her home at Riverside, Ill., May 6, aged 63 years, and was buried May 8 at Forest Home cemetery, near Chicago. She leaves two sons, Charles and Paul, and two daughters, Rose and Lillie. Mrs. Reisig was the widow of one of Chicago's pioneer florists and was herself for many years active in her husband's business. The first Reisig establishment was at the corner of Sixteenth street and Prairie avenue, when that section was the outskirts of Chicago. Later the greenhouses were removed to Riverside. Mr. Reisig opened one of the first downtown stores in Chicago, at 27 Washington street, where Marshall Field's building now stands. Later he removed to the Auditorium building, on Wabash avenue, at a time when that structure was so far outside the business district that many thought success would be impossible. Charles Reisig took P. J. Hauswirth in boyhood as his protege and later Mr. Hauswirth succeeded to the Reisig business.

John Dodds.

John Dodds, florist at the Grand Trunk shops in Battle Creek, Mich., died suddenly of heart failure, April 28, at his home, 1 Delano street. He was 54 years of age. He is survived by his wife and three children. He was of Scotch descent, came to Battle Creek four years ago and had been employed at the Grand Trunk shops since that time.

B. Latour-Marliac.

The European horticultural press records the demise of B. Latour-Marliac, whose name will forever be associated with the nymphæas. The hybrids raised at his nursery in France represent a work of forty years and include some of the best known and most valuable varieties. The hybridizer was in his eightieth year at the time of his death. The business will be carried on by a son, who relinquishes the position as postmaster at Bordeaux to take up his father's work.

Madison, Wis.—The firm of Mallory & Bridge has become Mallory & Brown, E. J. Brown having taken the interest of H. H. Bridge, and its operations will in future be conducted on property near this city instead of at Lake Mills.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

Liverpool, O.—Chal. Peterson, the oldest florist in this vicinity, is critically ill.

Ottawa, Ill.—Lohr Bros. have taken charge of the greenhouses formerly conducted by Mrs. Fred J. King, on Ottawa avenue, and will grow carnations, chrysanthemums and a general line of pot plants.

Kingman, Kan.—Riggs & Johnson have started business here as growers of both flowers and vegetables. They have one greenhouse, 25 x 100, already in use, and are erecting another house, 16 x 100.

Louisville, Ky.—The Jefferson County Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated here, for the purpose of growing flowers. The capital stock is $12,000, divided into shares of $100 each. The incorporators, each of whom holds forty shares, are George Kopmeier, Charles Scholtz, Jr., and A. J. Driesbach.

Englewood, N. J.—T. W. Lydecker & Co. are making a considerable change in their heating system. A number of small boilers in various sections of the range are being taken out and one large Kroeschell boiler will be installed in a central heating plant, to take care of all the houses.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Hugo Busch, proprietor of the Capital City Greenhouses, is planning to put up 20,000 or 25,000 feet of glass at a new establishment outside the town. His present place is at the corner of Madison and Dunklin streets and the demand is beyond his facilities.

Clarksville, Tenn.—James Morton, of the Evergreen Lodge Flower Garden, was one of the heaviest losers in the wind and hail storm which swept over this vicinity on Saturday afternoon, April 29. Over 800 lights of glass were shattered in his greenhouses. The storm was one of the worst in the history of the county.

Bettendorf, Ia.—The J. W. Davis Co. has been incorporated here, with a capital stock of $40,000, for the purpose of growing both vegetables and flowers. The officers are: President and treasurer, J. W. Davis; vice-president, Mary E. Davis; secretary, Albert Ankeny. Charles Grilk is also one of the incorporators.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Rudolph Mauersberger, who recently leased the greenhouses and grounds connected with Miss Hall's school, on the Holmes road, has secured the contracts for the landscape work on the estates of the Misses Emma and Harriet Sheldon and also the estate of William Stanley, in Great Barrington.

State College, Pa.—C. G. McBride, who is president of the Crab Apple Club, the student organization, and also editor of the Penn State Farmer, published by the Agricultural Society, says that Pennsylvania State College has a larger enrollment of students in horticulture than any other college in the country and that floriculture will be a big feature there in future.

Lake Charles, La.—J. Neuvander has returned from a business trip to California.

Eugene, Ore.—Ruggles Bros. have added a landscape department to their business.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—F. A. Denman will erect a residence and greenhouse on the south side of Albert street.

Des Moines, Ia.—Business is so good with the J. S. Wilson Floral Co. that an order has been placed with Foley, Chicago, for material for some new houses.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa Seed Co. finds its mail-order plant trade growing so rapidly that a range of new plant houses is a necessity, and will be built this summer.

Maquoketa, Ia.—Mrs. J. Odgers, proprietor of the Maquoketa Greenhouses, has been in business here for nearly twenty years and has built up a substantial trade.

Rockland, Mass.—Clarence Wilson, son of William T. Wilson, the Crescent street florist, is making a reputation as a writer of short stories. He is a contributor to Everybody's and Hampton's magazines.

Lexington, Ky.—Miss Emma Bell, who for the last five years has been associated with her father, W. S. Bell, in the management of his store here, has accepted a position in a flower store at Clarksville, Tenn.

Newburyport, Mass.—Edwin W. Pearson had a magnificent display of plants and cut flowers at the Industrial Exposition of Newburyport-made Products, which was opened in City hall April 18. The booth had a prominent position on the stage of the hall and was in charge of E. T. Goodwin.

Rochester, Ind.—J. H. Shelton, the plant grower at Eleventh street and Fulton avenue, has added one greenhouse and doubled his hotbed capacity this season. He has a fine stock of geraniums and vegetable plants. His place is favorably located, only a few squares from the courthouse.

Columbia City, Ind.—Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Noble, who for the last sixteen years have conducted the establishment known as the North Side Greenhouses, have decided to take a much needed rest and have leased the houses to Benjamin Litman. Mr. Litman is a thoroughly experienced florist, having been associated for many years with Heller Bros., of New Castle, Ind.

Charlotte, Mich.—J. H. Gibbons, a florist of extensive experience, has taken over the cut flower trade of W. E. Garman. Mr. Garman has conducted greenhouses on East Shaw street for some time, but has made arrangements to go out of the retail business and devote his undivided attention to the wholesale trade. He will have five acres of asters this summer, the entire season's output having been already contracted for by one Chicago firm. Next winter he expects to grow geranium cuttings exclusively.

Utica, N. Y.—The greenhouses of W. J. Braim, on Saratoga street, were slightly damaged recently by fire.

Ansonia, Conn.—Two baby alligators were recently on exhibition in the window of the Ansonia Floral Co. and attracted much attention. They were received by the proprietor, T. J. Mooney, from a friend who had just returned from the south.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

WRITE to The Review about Mothers' day, especially about what you did to work up trade, and how it resulted.

It is a lady florist, and one who is prospering in a country town, who says: "Our carnations are being planted in the fields today; every plant is 'perfection,' regardless of variety, for on a small place one cannot afford to grow any other kind." Nor on a large place, either.

LETTERS still coming to hand indicate that flower store men would better not take up perfumery as a side line, at least until they have read every word in the printed contract and compared it with what the gentlemanly agent has said. Warning was given in The Review for April 13, page 10.

NATIONAL SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

At an executive meeting held in New York Friday, May 5, President Burpee presiding, the following additional special prizes were received, also the executive committee appropriated $170 for prizes to be known as the National Sweet Pea Society's prizes.

Owing to the extremely late season, it was considered advisable to change the date from a week to two weeks later than that previously published, that is, June 23 and 24, but the matter will be finally decided early in June and an exact date set at that time.

The following judges were appointed for the exhibition: Samuel L. Hamilton, Huntingdon, Pa.; William Duckham, Madison, N. J.; Walter Angus, Chapinville, Conn.; William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.; Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.

BOWLING AT BALTIMORE.

The Baltimore Florists' Club is making preparations for a convention bowling tournament that shall restore the sport to its old-time popularity. Baltimore is a city of bowlers, and the arrangements for the convention contest will be the best ever known at an S. A. F. convention. The alleys engaged are those built specially for the National Bowling Congress held in Baltimore a couple of years ago. There are thirty-six alleys side by side, the greatest number to be found anywhere in the United States. The alleys are to be redressed and used thereafter for the first time for the S. A. F. This gives practically new alleys, as fine as they can be built. The Baltimore florists already have secured a large number of special prizes for the convention tournament and they expect to have represented a greater number of cities than ever before have sent teams to the S. A. F. convention.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Trade improved steadily through last week and the first half of the present week finds business good, though nothing exceptional. The usual outcome has been obtained as the result of large supplies. There are one or two lines, like Easter lilies and callas, that it is almost impossible to move at any figure, but the majority of stock on which moderate prices can be made is moving out well. The buyers, knowing that they can get good material at moderate prices, are pushing for business and the orders coming in are not only numerous but of good size. Still the market never is cleaned up, though conditions are such that some houses find themselves short of certain items, which they either must buy in the market or turn down orders.

The arrival of weather unseasonably warm has caused much stock to deteriorate. May 8 the greater part of the roses were open and other flowers were soft, but supplies still are so large that it is possible to pick out good stock for the orders. The necessity for sorting, however, naturally means that somewhat better prices are asked.

One or two growers still are cutting extremely heavy crops of Beauties, but in general the supply has diminished. Roses, too, have passed the height of the crop and are not now so overabundant as they were. Some of the best stock is of superlative quality, though a good part of the receipts are below the shipping standard.

At the opening of the week it appeared that most of the growers were holding back their white carnations in anticipation of Mothers' day and good stock, both white and colors, was commanding prices which should be considered thoroughly satisfactory. An immense amount of business has been booked for Mothers' day, especially for white carnations, and most of the wholesalers are refusing to take further orders for white, unless accompanied by orders for a larger quantity of Enchantress and colored varieties. The one factor endangering the success of the day is the uncertainty about the held-back stock; nothing but fresh flowers will stand shipment in such weather as now prevails.

The sweet pea continues to sell rather

The Finest Orchids In the Market Are Our CATTLEYAS

SPLENDID FLOWERS IN LARGE SUPPLY

These are the rich, dark-colored orchids that make the hit with the public. If you are using the pale, light flowers that so many growers produce, set some of ours on the same counter and see what happens. You can double your orchid trade by using this stock. The varieties are Labiata and Mossiae and they are great big luxuriant blooms—and don't forget the color; there's plenty of color in them, and it is what your trade wants. Now is your chance to feature orchids. We have a big supply at prices that are extremely low for such fine stock.

$5.00 to $6.00 per dozen; lots of 100 or more, 40c per flower

BEAUTIES

Splendid Stock in Enormous Supply

We are cutting the biggest crop of Beauties of the year. Shipments from the greenhouses coming in three times a day. Many thousands of each length. We can supply a thousand extra long fancy Beauties with as little notice as we need on a thousand—shorts; in fact, the greater part of the cut is medium to long, but we can supply any grade. Not only is the supply heavy, but the quality is extra good for this time of year. Not only are these the best Beauties in Chicago, but you will say you never have handled better Beauties at this season. Order some today.

KILLARNEYS

These Roses Have Not Deteriorated

The wave of warm weather has taken the quality out of most of the roses in this market, but our Killarneys are as fine as ever. Not only are these the finest Killarney and White Killarney now coming into the Chicago market, but the supply continues very large. We can take care of any order, no matter how big or how short the notice. We want buyers who need good stock to try these. Order some of these Killarneys now—it will be to mutual advantage.

SWEET PEAS

Nothing to Equal These

Sweet peas have long been one of our leading specialties—we are recognized as sweet pea headquarters in this market. The winter-blooming varieties still are in large supply and holding their quality well. The Butterfly (Spencer) varieties are coming in heavier every day. These are by all odds the choicest flowers on this market, and they sell about the best of anything in the list. We have all the fancy colors. Until the crop gets a little heavier, better order as much in advance as you can.

PEONIES

All colors now ready. Place orders here for Decoration Day.

SNAPS

Fancy long Snapdragon in all colors, but specially fine is the fancy pink, just the Killarney shade.

OUR FERNS ARE GOOD

There are plenty of ferns in the country, but those in storage are spoiling fast, and no one wants the soft new stock while good stored stock is to be had. Our ferns are good—never kept better. The supply is large. How many will you have?

better than anything else in the market. Some splendid stock is coming in, the Spencer varieties not yet being so numerous as the winter-blooming kinds. Peonies from the south have arrived in quantity, shipments coming from Sarcoxie and Villa Ridge. Most of the stock will, of course, go into storage for Decoration day, as there is no special demand at this time. Cattleyas are rather more abundant. Fine snapdragon is offered. Valley is equal to the requirements. Gladioli are plentiful; Mrs. Francis King is the best seller. Miniature gladioli in several colors are offered. Iris has been too abundant, but is now said to be on the wane. Outdoor tulips are good, bad and indifferent and selling the same.

Smilax continues on the short side. Other greens are plentiful. The price of ferns has receded; the new southern stock is in and the stored stock is spoiling rapidly. Strictly fancy ferns are scarce and selling well.

Club Meeting.

At its meeting May 4 the Chicago Florists' Club voted to hold its next monthly gathering jointly with the Milwaukee Florists' Club at Milwaukee, Wis., June 1. A. Zech, chairman of the pastimes committee, reported on the recent bowling tournament and the proposed one. He also reported plans for the annual picnic and the club confirmed the committee's choice of Ehrhardt's grove, Park Ridge, Ill., the date to be July 23.

William Mechwart was elected to membership and F. E. Gabler was proposed. A. C. Kohlbrand withdrew the resignation of John Canger. A letter of condolence was ordered sent to the widow of W. A. Starrett, formerly with the Chicago Carnation Co. I. Cassidy and George Asmus spoke entertainingly.

W. S. McGee, of the Pulverized Manure Co., promised a talk on fertilizers for the July meeting.

President Philpott was down from Winnipeg as usual, and the customary refreshments were served.

Various Notes.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports the arrival last week of 107 cases of cattleyas from Central America. The season's addition to the stock, when the plants are all in, is expected to be close to 9,000.

C. M. Dickinson reports that E. H. Hunt has placed an order for an Overland motor wagon of two tons' capacity, to be used principally for hauling incoming and outgoing freight shipments.

This week's obituary columns record the death of Mrs. Reisig, one of the pioneer Chicago florists.

One of those interested in the organization of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association stated May 8 that about three-quarters of the proposed capital stock has been placed with growers, no one being permitted to take over five shares. Nothing further will be done until the remaining twenty-five shares are placed.

Adolph Benesh, of Winterson's Seed Store, was at Norwood Park, May 6, called by the death of Mrs. Benesh's father.

Ted Vogel, long with W. J. Smyth, has returned from Los Angeles, where he has spent the last six months.

E. E. Pieser, who visited the acres and acres of peonies at Villa Ridge and Vincennes last week, says the stock

Each year from May 1 to May 20 we book orders for Peonies for Decoration Day delivery at the guaranteed price of $5.00 per 100.

This is for first-class stock, pink and white, mixed—and in the last days of May this stock for the last two years has sold at from $8.00 to $10.00 per 100, or about twice what was paid by those who ordered early.

A good many people have asked us why we take these advance orders at the low price.

The answer is: Because we handle such an immense quantity of Peonies for Decoration Day that it would be utterly impossible to move the quantity if no advance orders were taken; because an assured outlet for many thousands of dozens has given us a firm and usually rising market just before the holiday. Advance orders guarantee to us the success of our busiest week in the year.

Advance orders booked with us guarantee, also, several things to our customers. First, they are assured their supply. Second, they are guaranteed as to price. If the price makes our customers a saving, we are glad of it and welcome all, but it is of equal importance to a Retailer to be sure of his supply and cost. Then he can sell with confidence.

Remember, May 20 is the last day for booking advance orders at the guaranteed price.

KILLARNEYS Pink White

There are no roses like the Killarneys, and there are no Killarneys like Randall's—our supply always is large and fine, but just now it's even larger and finer than usual. Long, perfect buds on all lengths of stem; splendid color, clean foliage, strong stems.

Fine American Beauties—all lengths

We are now getting the largest cut of Beauties of the season and the quality is as fine as the crop is large. Can supply any length in quantity.

CARNATIONS

Buyers who want to feel that they are in touch with the largest supply and best quality of stock should order of us. We ship regularly to the most distant customers, to the most critical customers, and supply the biggest buyers all through the middle west, from Canada to the Gulf. That shows how our Carnations carry. We can meet your needs. Let us show you.

ORCHIDS

We are cutting a big crop of Cattleyas and they are extra fine; we can fill all orders on short notice.

SWEET PEAS

These fancy, long-stemmed Peas are about the most popular flowers now in the market. Nothing better liked for corsage bouquets, for table centerpieces or other finework. We still have the winter-blooming varieties in their best condition and are handling increasing quantities of the Butterfly varieties. All colors. These ship well. Order some today. You'll want more of them.

VALLEY

There is in this country no better Valley than that we always can supply. Telegraph and we ship on next train—any quantity.

Kennicott Bros. Co. announces that it will open its branch at 56 East Randolph street not later than May 15, with N. P. Miller in charge.

Fred Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, moved May 2 to his newly purchased home in Oak Park. Next day he planted his first garden and says that already some of the seeds are up.

The Chicago Growers' Exchange is a partnership between E. E. Pieser and Henry Van Gelder. It will open its market May 15, occupying all the second floor at the northeast corner of Wabash and Randolph street, except the spaces reserved by Percy Jones and Kennicott Bros. Co. The big room is being redecorated this week.

W. J. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel, Elmhurst rose growers, has just bought a big new Overland touring car.

E. Wienhoeber Co. will next week blossom out with one of the handsomest automobile delivery outfits in town. It is a Pierce-Arrow machine, with a body built to order.

C. L. Washburn has just received delivery of his new Overland touring car, and his son, E. B. Washburn, last week received a new Stearns car, having disposed of his old machine.

Zech & Mann received a box of peaches from a Florida consignor May 8.

O. Johnson says 600 boxes of glass is going into the season's addition by the Batavia Greenhouse Co.

Tim Waters is now with the D. D. Johnson Co.

Otto Wittbold, of the Geo. Wittbold Co., says he has had an unusually successful season with gladioli at the Edgebrook greenhouses, and that he has been cutting blooms for over a month.

L. Baumann & Co., 359 West Chicago avenue, have purchased the 4-story building, 28x125 feet, just east of their present establishment and are fitting up the three upper floors for warehouse purposes. This will give them 10,000 square feet of additional space, and double fire door connections with the old building are being made on each floor in both front and rear. They expect to also occupy the first floor when the present tenant's lease expires.

James Psenecka, who for many years has been foreman for Wietor Bros., removed to Gross Point last week and is now devoting his time to the affairs of the Northwestern Floral Co., Wilmette, a business established by Mr. Psenecka and James Bezdeck, and which has now grown to demand the attention of both the proprietors. Their cut is sold by Kyle & Foerster. Mr. Psenecka's place with Wietor Bros. has been taken by James Novak, who arrived May 2 from Charles City, Ia., where he has been in charge of the greenhouses of the Sherman Nursery Co. Mr. Novak formerly was with Poehlmann Bros. Co. and Peter Reinberg.

D. E. Freres and H. V. Tonner were well pleased with their first week in the Atlas block.

Word comes from C. W. McKellar and wife that it is midsummer at Hot Springs.

At J. A. Budlong's new store Phil Schupp is steadily making improvements.

A. L. Randall is spending the week ends in Michigan. W. W. Randall is off the road for a few days.

Charles Handel, who has the Schaffer place at 2129 Balmoral avenue, has overhauled his heating system and now has his plant in first-class condition. Richmond and Killarney are his specialties and he is turning out some first-class stock.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. says that the orders on the threaded tube piping system call for the delivery of over 55,000 feet before June 15.

Joseph Phillip, son of Jacob Phillip, the old-time grower of Rogers Park, is building a range of houses at North California avenue near Touhy avenue. Moninger material is being used, together with a Kroeschell boiler and threaded tube piping system.

Peter Dahm, of Morton Grove, has ordered a Kroeschell boiler to heat a new range of vegetable houses that he is erecting at Niles Center.

I. Cassidy, of Jersey City, is the latest addition to the staff of the Foley Mfg. Co. P. J. Foley says contracts never have averaged so large as this year. Orders for ranges of from half a dozen to fifteen or twenty houses are the regular thing.

The Des Plaines Floral Co. will tear down six of its old houses this summer and replace them with four larger ones of the Garland truss construction. This will complete the rebuilding of the entire range, the first houses having been reconstructed about two years ago. The Garland cement benches are being used and are considered far superior to the old wooden ones.

George Woodward, who recently underwent an operation at Passavant hospital, is getting along as well as could be expected.

Among last week's visitors at growing establishments in this neighborhood were: John Schwartz, grower for the Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn.; J. G. Crozer, Cedar Rapids; A. L. Glazer, DuBuque; F. L. Tornquist, Benton Harbor.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There is a marked falling off in the receipts of carnations, due in part to the crops going off and in part to the sacrificing of part of the plants for other crops, tomatoes for instance. Carnations have been firmer in price, as a natural result; better values have been realized by advances on certain days. White carnations were not in demand for the churches on the first Sunday in May, as anticipated. Roses, too, have shortened; really fine stock is not nearly so plentiful as a week ago. The ordinary grades are in oversupply. The market is in only fair shape; the demand is lighter than it was a week ago and prices are low. Outdoor blossoms have been freely used locally. They are too perishable for shipping. Sweet peas, generally speaking, have less stem now, but their flowers continue good. Cat-tleyas are in fair supply, but the market for them is dull.

There are no other changes in conditions, excepting a noticeable increase in outdoor flowers, particularly lilac. Valley is less abundant. Easter lilies are beginning to sell again. The opening of the outdoor season has affected asparagus sprays.

Charles Trepel is Coming.

Arrangements have been perfected whereby Charles Trepel, the prominent New York buyer, will open a cut flower department in the department store of Gimbel Bros., in this city, in September. The effect of this move will be watched with keen interest. Mr. Trepel has made a wonderful success of his ventures in Greater New York. He is now buyer for Gimbel's New York store, for Bloomingdale's and for Loeser's; the latter is in Brooklyn. The consumption of cut flowers at one of these stores, Bloomingdale's, on Saturday, April 29, is said to have been $1,800 worth; that is, the flowers bought cost the firm that amount of money. The principle is quick sales and small profits that become large through their numerous transactions. This style of doing business broadens the market, it benefits the growers and wholesalers in times of overproduction, but its effect on the retailers is problematic, depending somewhat on themselves and on the location and the conditions under which they do business. The general opinion seems to be that department store sales of cut flowers can make little difference to our florists, because they cannot satisfy the cultivated taste of flower buyers. Their mission is to create the love for flowers in those unaccustomed to them. Some idea of the methods employed in disposing of the flowers at Bloomingdale's can be obtained from the fact that on Tuesday, May 2, three young women were kept busy counting out roses from the original shipping boxes to customers

A Plant Exchange.

A few years ago the idea of a plant exchange suggested itself to the mind of an active man of affairs, with a touch of that broad humanity that marks many of our best men—a plant exchange where people could bring what they had and obtain what they had not. The idea was the encouragement of a love for plants and flowers to beautify the home, the encouragement of thrift and industry, of all that is best in those who have not been blessed with a superabundance of possessions. The spring was naturally selected as the best time for such an exchange. The promoters of the plan divided their stock for replanting, putting aside the surplus to start the collection; others joined them and it only remained to select the day, secure the aides and publish the affair broadcast.

For several years this plant exchange has been in progress. This year it was held May 5, in the afternoon; the crowd was larger and the interest livelier than on any previous occasion. But you will want to know just where and how the plant exchange is carried on, perhaps with the idea of starting one yourself; so here goes in regular and proper order.

Moorestown, N. J., is wide-awake. I will tell you just two things to prove this true: Moorestown has a Farmers' Association strong enough to bring a representative of the New York commission merchants to Moorestown, where he buys and pays for produce as the farmers unload from their wagons and load onto the cars; Moorestown, also, has the only plant exchange known in the Rising Eastern Market.

The Moorestown plant exchange was held in the covered but open space adjoining the carriage house of Walter P. Stokes. A glowing bed of dazzling scarlet tulips, circled with golden yellow, marked the plant exchange headquarters from the roadway. The impromptu place of business was well adapted to the purpose. A temporary counter had been erected on the two open sides; behind it a half dozen aides received and dispensed the plants, roots and bulbs. The stock upon which they drew was arranged in piles against the closed doors of the carriage house. In front of the counters was a crowd three deep. Everyone was expected to bring something in exchange, something she or he had produced, to be exchanged for anything in the stock that was desired. The aides had their hands full; they aimed to satisfy everyone as far as that was possible. Those who brought little received little; those who brought much received more or were given the preference with certain desirable stock, such as rose bushes, which were naturally rather scarce. Golden Glow was strongly in evidence; it is pretty safe to predict there will be lots of Golden Glow in and around Moorestown this summer. The interest was keen, accentuated by a glorious day, the holiday feeling and the big crowd, which reminded you of a bargain counter in one of the department stores, transferred to the country. The crowd was there all the afternoon, coming and going. Everyone was there for a purpose; they had planned some time ahead just what they would bring and were keen to get just what they wanted. Of course all of them could not do this, but the good effects of the plant exchange will be seen in Moorestown this year and for many years to come.

He said he liked to see what he was buying. Better carry stock, gentlemen; take a chance.

The Market.

With the exception of May 6, when there was a fairly good clean-up, especially on carnations, business has remained poor, with prices quite low even for May. It was hoped that the arrival of cool weather following a hot wave would brace prices up a little, but it failed to do so and the present week values are again on the downward grade, with the return of hot weather, but growers are hopefully anticipating better business May 13, for Mothers' day, and the coming of that best of all cut flower festivals, Memorial day. Roses continue of good quality, but prices are away down, large quantities being hawked on the streets at 25 cents per dozen, or even less. Carnations have been going at all the way from 300 for a dollar to $3 per hundred. A good average price for flowers has been $1, on occasional days there being a little spurt. Violets are gone and bulbous flowers, such as tulips and narcissi, are chiefly grown outdoors, and owing to the dry weather are short-stemmed. Spanish iris is abundant and selling more slowly.

Lilies are moving only at low prices, as are callas. Sweet peas are the best selling flowers on the market. The Spencer forms are now coming good. Stocks, antirrhinums and mignonette are all hard to sell. Yellow marguerites sell much better than white ones. Pansies are overabundant. Cattleya Mossiæ is now quite plentiful, but the demand is not good. Valley is also selling rather poorly. Adiantum is of good quality and selling well, while there is Welch Bros. report an excellent shipping trade in cut flowers. They have had individual orders for as many as 10,000 carnations on several occasions, which helps to relieve the prevailing congestion in these flowers. They bunch dark blue sweet peas like violets and move them. The resemblance is so close between the two flowers that at the first glance even those well posted on flowers are deceived.

E. H. Wilson sailed for England on the Cymric May 9, a number of friends wishing him bon voyage. Mr. Wilson hopes to return to America when his health is again robust, and it is hoped will make another expedition to China. An enjoyable dinner was tendered Mr. Wilson and a party of friends, eighteen in number, at the Parker House, May 3, the Messrs. Farquhar acting as hosts. All present made short addresses during the evening, Mr. Wilson's remarks, which were quite lengthy, being listened to with the closest attention. Charles W. Parker officiated as toastmaster.

S. J. Reuter, through M. H. Hambro, is marketing fine lily of the valley and Richmond, White Killarney and Killarney roses.

William A. Riggs' hydrangeas are noteworthy. Those in 7-inch pots carry thirteen and fourteen heads each and are the best seen this season. Mr. Riggs still ships gladioli in quantity.

A visit to the Arnold Arboretum is now full of interest. The prunus, cerasus, forsythia, magnolia and other families are well represented. Some of the new Wilson introductions are already flowering. In a few days the malus will be at their height and some of the earlier lilacs are now opening. These promise a grand display of flowers. Jackson Dawson says he has had lots of sleepless nights and anxious days caring for the big batches of rhododendron and other Chinese introductions by Mr. Wilson.

The W. E. Doyle Co. among other specialties has fine specimen plants of gardenias and boronias and an abundance of Cattleya Mossiae.

J. Newman & Sons have constantly changing windows in their Tremont street store, always full of pleasing suggestions, especially for lunches and dinner table decorations.

W. H. Elliott continues to have a heavy cut of roses of splendid quality. Mrs. Ward holds up well, as does Rhea Reid. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are in active demand, being in short supply.

John Barr is busy planting out some 30,000 carnations. He will considerably increase his glass this season. No one in this section grows finer carnations or keeps a neater and more up-to-date plant than Mr. Barr. His hydrangeas are meeting with a heavy sale, being splendidly grown.

Thomas W. Head, late superintendent on the Plant estate, Groton, Conn., and later with Stump & Walter, New York, is now associated with Arthur Griffin at Woburn, Mass. Messrs. Griffin and Head should make a strong team. Mr. Griffin's carnations have the last season brought top prices.

Charles Techa, assistant salesman with Thomas Pegler, has left the Massachusetts General hospital and is now convalescing nicely at Sharon, Mass.

Leonard Cousins, of Concord Junction, is a busy man these days, shipping large orders of pansies to points in some cases many hundreds of miles away. His stock was never in finer condition.

Artstone Flower Vases

These Artstone Flower Vases do not, like iron vases, become so hot in midsummer as to burn the plants. Artstone is indestructible from exposure to the elements, while iron, angular and grim, soon rusts and marble gradually discolors and decays. To display flowers in unsightly wooden pails, tin tubs, or the like, is an incongruous spectacle, which, except in case of inability to procure suitable receptacles for them, betrays the utter absence of artistic taste. Flowers, like gems, require appropriate settings. The superb artistic beauty of these creations attracts universal admiration and lends a touch of quiet elegance, of distinction, of refinement and culture to the surroundings. They serve to enhance the beauty of the lawn, the porch, the hall or the garden wonderfully. Popular also for cemetery decoration.

The Market.

A number of large, fashionable weddings and receptions demanded many extra shipments of choice cut flowers and kept the leading florists quite busy during the last three weeks. From now until June there will be but little demand in the cut flower line except for occasional funerals, for which, to a certain extent, home grown flowers are used.

Like other neighborhoods, we had for nearly three weeks the most abominable weather on record at this time of the year. The continual rains, which at times flooded the lower outlying sections of the city, accompanied by a decided fall in the temperature, which went as low as 58 degrees, handicapped the planting of outdoor stock, especially chrysanthemums and asters, and did some harm to the ones already planted. Those florists occupied with the growing of chrysanthemums, in and outdoors, have the greater part of their stock planted, and the plants in general are looking healthy and strong and with

Chinese asters, in separate colors, are becoming a great factor among the florists here of late and are planted by some of them by the thousands. The flowering season here is from July until the middle of September, when they are replaced by northern grown stock. Early planted single tuberoses are up, and it can be said that this bulb is planted more and more every year by all florists catering to the cut flower trade. The bulbs are in bloom regularly from

Bancroft's Beautiful ALL OVER IOWA Flowers are known

8 through roads. 30,000 ft. glass. High-grade stock. Joseph Bancroft & Son, Cedar Falls, Iowa

July until the end of November, mostly at a time when other good, white, long-stemmed cut flowers are scarce here. The first gladiolus crop is cut, and all those who made a second planting will start cutting Mays by next week, followed with America and Augusta. It was noted that all the gladiolus bulbs left in the ground from last year's planting multiplied considerably and brought a good addition of strong flower spikes; moreover, they came a week earlier than the first ones of the new crop. It would seem advisable, therefore, for all those who have the ground to spare, to leave the bulbs in for at least two or three years and then dig them up and divide them for replanting.

Various Notes.

Gardenia florida is in bloom, but is used here only for funeral work, the flowers being considered too common for any other purpose.

In regard to the observation of Mothers' day, the board of directors of the public schools left it to the schools to select any day during the first week in May to observe it, but up to the present time no extra call for larger amounts of flowers has been noticed. Neither is there any talk of a special day among the population in general. This is the first year Mothers' day has been spoken of in this city and if some enterprising florist would bring it before the public in the right way, the same beneficial results could be obtained as in other cities. Florists, it is not too late yet to talk Mothers' day. R. E.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

HUGH M. TAYLOR, wholesale seed grower, of Lloyd, Fla., is on a six weeks' trip through New Mexico and Arizona.

It is the talk at Milwaukee that James Currie, president of Currie Bros. Co., will be appointed to the park board June 1, when a vacancy occurs.

WALTER P. STOKES, of Stokes' Seed Store, Philadelphia, says Golden Andalusia pole wax bean is so scarce he would be glad to pay a premium for a few quarts of it.

SIMON ADRIANUS DE GRAAFF, father of the enterprising brothers De Graaff, who run the business of De Graaff Bros., Ltd., bulb-growers, Leiden, Holland, died April 25, in his seventy-first year.

SEEDSMEN who handle bulbs will be interested in Arthur T. Boddington's account of the Harrisii situation as it appeared on his recent trip to Bermuda. It appears on page 13 of this issue.

ON page 13 of this issue there is an article, with illustration, that will be of interest to the seed trade as denoting the progress of the work of growing Harrisii lily bulbs in California.

G. SWENSON, cut flower grower at Elmhurst, Ill., has a winter-flowering form of Countess Spencer sweet pea on which he has been industriously saving seed. He had it in bloom early in January this year.

A. A. HOWES & Co., Belfast, Me., who last season took over the seed business of W. E. Hamilton, the florist, and combined it with their own, are this year doing much the largest trade in their history.

E. L. PAGE, president of the American Seed Trade Association, passed through Chicago May 7 on his way to California. He is on a business trip in the interests of the Page Seed Co., Greene, N. Y., of which he is president.

APRIL made a rather better record with most of the mail order seed houses than did January and February, comparing with the same months last year. The volume of orders did not dwindle so rapidly this year as it has in other seasons, probably due to weather conditions.

E. W. KING, of E. W. King & Co., wholesale seed merchants, Coggeshall, Essex, and Thomas Cullen, seed grower at Witham, Essex, England, sailed for New York May 10. Mr. King is known in England as the Sweet Pea King, and Mr. Cullen is an extensive grower of culinary peas. It is their intention to visit some of the seed-growing centers in

Originally introduced by us from South Carolina in 1850 and annually grown for over sixty years under the zero winter temperature of Bloomsdale Farms, the Landreth's strain of Seven Top has obtained, by this northern culture, a hardiness not approached by southern-grown seed. All inferences would point that way, while thousands of experiments have conclusively proven it beyond a shadow of doubt; consequently, one pound of Landreth's Seven Top will in the dead of winter produce more greens than can be cut from three times the more delicate southern-grown Seven Top.

Write us how much you want and we will name you a price.

THE officers of the American Seed Trade Association have arranged for a new and important feature of the program for the next annual meeting, at Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22. This will be telegraphic reports from most of the growing sections of the United States. These reports will be given when the association is in executive session and will be strictly private and confidential to members of the association only. CLARK'S CALM VIEW.

Arthur B. Clark, president of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., finds satisfaction in the present situation and takes a calm view of the prospects, in Connecticut, where the company's headquarters is, but also in Michigan and Wisconsin, where peas and beans are largely grown. At the opening of the month Mr. Clark summarized the situation in these words:

"There is little in the way of crop news at this early date. Roots, of course, have only just been put in the ground. Most roots wintered over pretty well and we have a good acreage, a larger acreage than usual of some items, particularly turnip and beet. In a few days now we will be planting corn and we have reason to look for favorable crop conditions, not alone because the weather clerk out of his sense of fairness will appreciate the obligation resting upon him to square himself for the indignities served up to us during the last two or three years, during which we have almost become accustomed to cold, unfavorable springs continuing well into summer, but also because we have had it so steadily cold during March and April that from now on the weather is likely to be more seasonable than it was a year ago, when our May came in March and our March spread over May and June.

"Out in Michigan and Wisconsin our seed peas are all out in farmers' hands and going into the ground every day. By dint of persevering effort and the development of some new territories, we secured acreage for all of our stock seed and are putting into the ground sufficient seed to well protect our contracts, and the pea proposition is, therefore, now up to the elements, over which we have not the slightest control.

"The bean acreage is secured, but, of course, it will be some few days before we shall distribute many of our seed beans among the growers.

"As to 1910 stocks, everything grown here in the east is cleaned out nicely. There will be no appreciable surplus of any important item of our production here in Connecticut; and in Michigan and Wisconsin we are absolutely clean, of course, of peas, and have cleaned up on beans much better than we expected; in fact, in excellent shape on all but three varieties, and surplus of these is only such as will probably be required by summer trade."

50 cents per thousand under the present tariff law, and giving a history of the important litigation. Charles H. Breck, president of Joseph Breck & Sons Corporation, which brought the test case, writes under date of May 8:

counsel for the American Seed Trade Association, the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association and the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, should have some credit for his conduct of the case, for it was his ability, energy and insight into the law that prepared the foundation upon which an appeal was successfully made to the Court of Customs Appeals at Washington."

DUTY ON ZEPHYRANTHES.

Holding bulbs invoiced as Zephyranthes rosea, dutiable under the provision in paragraph 263, tariff act of 1909, for "peony, Iris Kämpferi or Germanica, canna, dahlia and amaryllis bulbs, $10 per thousand," the United States Board of General Appraisers has supported Collector Loeb, of the port of New York, in the case brought against him by L. D. Crossmond & Co., acting on behalf of a client in the seed trade.

Zephyranthes is of the natural order Amaryllidaceae and in his opinion in this case General Appraiser Waite sets forth that "they are claimed by the importers to be dutiable under the last provision of the same paragraph for 'all other bulbs, bulbous roots or corms which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, 50 cents per thousand.' Apparently the commodity in question has heretofore been classified under the head of amaryllis. If it can be excluded from that classification by the testimony which has been offered, it probably would be classified as the importers contend, but we do not think the testimony has shown that its exclusion is sufficiently general and certain to warrant us in overthrowing the practice heretofore existing as regards its classification. The protest is, therefore, overruled."

It will be recalled that the same Board of General Appraisers upheld the collector at Boston in classifying hyacinth bulbs for duty at $2.50 per thousand under the same paragraph of the law, only to be reversed by the U. S. Court of Customs Appeals. For a full account of the hyacinth case see The Review of May 4, page 52. The importations of Zephyranthes are, of course, extremely small as compared to the quantities of hyacinth bulbs and the BRECK'S HAS SALESMEN'S CLUB.

The regular annual dinner of the salesmen connected with the Joseph Breck & Sons Seed & Agricultural Warehouse, Boston, was held recently at the City Club. Alex. J. M. Joiner presided. About thirty members attended. After dinner a short business meeting was held and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Alex. J. M. Joiner; secretary, W. J. Collins; treasurer, George H. Burhart.

A communication from C. H. Breck, president of the corporation, was read and it was voted to extend to Mr. Breck a rising vote of thanks for the great interest shown by him in the organization. Addresses by heads of the different departments as regards the welfare of the general business followed, after which an informal entertainment was given by the following members, all of whom were well received and heartily applauded: Trio, Messrs. Patriquin, Thomas and Van Baarda; readings, Messrs. Haynes and Sibley; violin solo, Robert Montgomery; solos, Messrs. Ferreriar and Werner; banjo selections, D. L. Hirth and W. F. Wilson. Breck's orchestra, John L. Russell, conductor, furnished excellent music. Mr. Brittan was master of ceremonies.

A committee was appointed to arrange a series of meetings where talks on salesmanship by experts will be given, to be followed by a social hour.

Always mention the Florists' Review when writing advertisers.

The American people are the most powerful buying public in the world. They pay well for what they want and expect to get what they ask for. You can't make them buy what you want them to take—you must sell them what they want and when they want it, and you should be glad of the opportunity. The merchant who caters to the public want makes money and is successful. The fellow who "has something just as good" is fish-hooked for the business boneyard, while his clients pass by his door whistling the Missouri air. The American public want lilies all the year around, and the modern florist shop must have them—not just because he wants them, but because his trade does, and if he doesn't satisfy his trade the successful merchant will do it for him. Cold Storage lily bulbs have come to stay a while, and, besides, real good ones are quite profitable; so, after all, why shouldn't you have them at all times? Horseshoe Brand Giganteums from Cold Storage are ready for immediate or future delivery. There are none better. Order now.

Did you gamble

ON PEONIES?

If you did, you won, for all stock cleaned up at about double the price we booked your advance order at.

When we announced on this page of The Review of May 12, that, up to May 21, we would accept, and agree to fill, orders for Peonies for Decoration Day, good average stock at 5 cents, a good many buyers took advantage of the offer.

We are glad you won. We intended you should.
We aimed to show the buyers' advantage in placing advance orders—for without advance orders, many and large, we never could merchandise, at fair average prices, the enormous quantities of Peonies we handle every Decoration Day.

We are glad you won. Will you be with us next Decoration Day? Early?

PACIFIC COAST.

ON another page of this issue is an illustrated article that tells of the progress of growing Harrisii lily bulbs on the Pacific coast.

Watsonville, Cal.—H. A. Hyde is now established in his fine new location at the head of Main street, where he has seven acres most admirably adapted to the production and display of his stock. A lath house and several greenhouses have been erected. He has quite a patch of callas being grown for the bulbs, in addition to a great variety of other stock. In one of his greenhouses he has quite a variety of adiantums, including a seedling of his own that promises to be an important addition. It takes a position somewhere between gracillimum and cuneatum, but the fronds are over double the length of those named.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Everything is lovely in the neighborhood of San Francisco, except business, and that particular article is rather quiet at the present time. Funeral orders were fairly plentiful during last month, but they have suddenly dropped off until they are scarcely noticeable. We have, however, a sprinkling of weddings to cater to and from reports in the air there will be considerable of this class of work for several weeks to come.

Flowers are quite plentiful, although there is a lessening of carnations and lilies. The heavy crop is over for the present and prices have stiffened a point or two. Roses also seem to have quieted down somewhat, but there is no scarcity of them. Outside stock, with the exception of bulbous flowers, is daily getting more plentiful. Violets, by the way, have entirely disappeared from the field and the same can be said of daffodils, tulips, lilacs and freesias.

Peonies are now at their best and move well. They do not seem to be in such profusion as in former years and all stock shown is quickly bought up. Wild flowers have taken the place of the fruit blossoms and a few early gladioli show us that the season is on the wing. Judged by orders from out-of-town dealers, we are going to have a heavy Memorial day business and everyone is looking forward to a good clean-up before the summer stillness is upon us.

Various Notes.

J. Seulberger, of Oakland, has departed on a three months' trip to Europe.

E. W. McLellan & Co., of Burlingame, are cutting heavily of Beauties, Maids, Brides and Liberty at the present time. Their stock looks remarkably fine.

The daily papers are devoting considerable space to the flower stand privilege that the state leases to Cohen & Figone. The claim is made that this firm is paying but $250 per month, while a bona fide offer, made by Antonini & Co., of $500 for the same stand, was refused by the state harbor commissioners.

W. H. Swanigan has retired from the retail florist trade in Oakland and has accepted a position with Clarke Bros., of the same town.

Geo. W. Savage, formerly of Los Angeles, is in town with the intention of permanently locating in this neighborhood.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The flower trade is unusually quiet. The principal demand is for funeral work. With the passing of Easter, flowers became scarce. Carnations are almost off crop. Roses are making a better showing; Carnot, Kaiserin and My Maryland are coming along nicely. My Maryland has a tendency to be soft and is often a source of contention. Violets are entirely out of the market; sweet peas are rapidly displacing them. Cecil Brunner roses are coming in nicely and find ready sale; there is no oversupply of them.

Outside work is progressing rapidly, as all danger of frost has passed. Outside roses are showing color. Rhododendrons, viburnums, wistarias and Azalea mollis are in full bloom. Lilacs are rapidly being depleted. Peonies are in bloom in limited quantities; it will be several weeks before they will be plentiful.

Various Notes.

A. Stadel recently purchased a farm at Silverton, Ore., where he will conduct a general farming and dairying business.

P. Johnson has given up his store at Fifth and Washington streets.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June 14 to 16, 1911.

THE advantage of making one's special effort for fall business rather than for orders for spring planting was again apparent last month. The autumn season is longer than the spring season—much longer than the present season for planting can be in most sections of the country.

SIMMONS BILL IN AGAIN.

At Washington May 4 Representative Simmons, of New York, reintroduced his bill to regulate the importation and interstate transportation of nursery stock. This is the bill that last session was fought by the nursery interests for the reason that it places it within the power of one man to shut off arbitrarily and without appeal a large part of the trade's supply of raw material. It is an administration measure. It would enable the secretary of agriculture to establish and maintain quarantine districts for plant diseases and insects and to regulate the movement of fruits, plants and vegetables from infected districts.

ORCHARDING NORTHWEST.

A news-letter from Spokane, Wash., say that contracts have been awarded to nurseries to set out 2,000,000 apple and other fruit trees in eastern Washington and north and central Idaho this season. Of these more than 400,000 will be planted in Spokane county, which already has 1,500,000 growing trees. One nursery at Kennewick, Wash., has orders for 1,000,000 trees. Fifty thousand trees are being planted near Lewiston, Idaho, while twenty miles north of McArthur, Idaho, 1,500 acres are being prepared for apple culture.

It is expected that not less than 2,000,000 acres of logged-off lands in eastern Washington and Oregon, northern Idaho and western Montana will be cleared during the next five years and devoted to general farming, dairying and orchards.

The grandest Fern of the age

NEPHROLEPIS ROOSEVELT

IMPORTANT SPECIAL NOTICE--PRICE ADVANCE

THE heavy demand from those who have seen Nephrolepis Roosevelt growing on our place and scarcity of stock compels us to advance the price on all orders dated after June 1st to the following:

2 1/4-in. pots, 50c each; $4.50 per doz.;
$35.00 per 100; $300.00 per 1000.

It is our belief the price of Nephrolepis Roosevelt for 1911 will be maintained during the season of 1912.

Nephrolepis Roosevelt is a sport from Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, but a wonderful improvement over the parent variety. The fronds of Roosevelt are from a third to one-half wider than Boston and beautifully tapered from base to tip. Each of the pinnae is distinctly undulated, giving the whole plant a decidedly wavy effect which attracts the eye instantly. Nephrolepis Roosevelt will make more young plants, produce a third more fronds, has more graceful, drooping habit and will finish to a larger and finer plant in small pots than any other fern on the market. Our stock is positively free from that vicious little white scale which is causing fern growers so much trouble.

Orders received to June 1st will be booked at the following prices: 2 1/4-inch pots, 40c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000. 25 plants at 100 rate; 250 plants at 1000 rate.

PITTSBURG, PA.

The Market.

The wholesale houses here have been having a peculiar experience for May, possibly on account of the bad weather; stock became unusually scarce and they had a hard time filling orders, but there has been a decided change in the weather and no doubt stock will be more plentiful from now on.

Plantmen are beginning to show new life and from now until after Decoration day will have more than they can do.

The retail stores are all busy, as most of them handle plants and there has been a good run of funeral work.

Various Notes.

Lord & Burnham have just closed the contract with J. S. Crall, Monongahela, Pa., for a new house, to be erected at once.

Schenley park was in its glory Sunday. Thousands of tulips and other bulbs were in full bloom, together with the shrubbery and trees, and as the day was well-nigh perfect, immense crowds were attracted from the city and suburban towns. On viewing this parade one did not wonder that this is a good flower-buying city. Superintendent George Burke certainly knows the secret of arranging charming effects and our parks are great educators of the people and should receive the full encouragement of every man who is interested in any way in the trade.

Miss Wells, of Steubenville, who has been spending the winter in California, is back in the store, looking much improved for the rest and trip.

Ed McCallum, of the McCallum Co., is a sufferer from lumbago. The firm's business, however, made it necessary for him to get out this week, but he is making careful turns and no false steps, thus guarding against an unpleasant reminder that he has not entirely recovered.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

A review of the trade situation shows a healthy condition, all good stock offered seeming to find a market at fair figures. The continued cool weather retards the supply and the quality is certainly improved in consequence.

Roses have been coming in rather slowly and of exceedingly poor quality, with Maid, Bride and Killarney more in evidence than any other varieties. Carnations have joined the procession, and prices are nearly cut in two; thousands were offered on the market Saturday for 15 cents per dozen.

Immense quantities of lilac began to come in last week. The southern supply arrived in large quantities and was of good quality and in heavy demand. The local supply will be ready in a few days. Narcissus poeticus is still with us in enormous quantities. They do not move well this season, as everyone is tired of them and thousands go to the waste barrel.

Sweet peas have sold well and the supply of inside stock is getting rather short and we shall soon have to wait till the outside stock arrives.

March-like weather continues, with a mixture of raw, cold days and a few of comparative brightness. The season so far is quite backward, but we look for an early change to summer temperature.

Decorations for weddings and receptions, combined with funeral work, have kept the store men on the jump, but the cloudy weather in the last month has had a bad effect on the bedding plants and they are about a month behind time.

There is a good call for smilax and other greens. Q.

A Visit to Anderson.

Tuesday, May 2, about twenty of the Indianapolis florists went to Anderson to attend the monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association, which was held there upon the invitation of Stuart & Haugh. The party left on the 2 o'clock interurban car, arriving at four p. m., and was met at the station by Messrs. Stuart and Haugh and a number of florists from the surrounding towns and escorted to the Stuart & Haugh greenhouses. This was probably the first visit to Anderson, for most of the florists, since Stuart & Haugh rebuilt their greenhouses, and everything was found in apple-pie order, the stock being of high class, particularly the carnations, which were unusually fine. The new range of glass is certainly a big improvement to the place.

The party then adjourned to the Anderson library, where the meeting was held. After the regular routine of business, considerable speech-making was indulged in and numerous invitations to the association to hold its meetings in the surrounding cities were given, among them being New Castle, Richmond, Knightstown and Cumberland. After the meeting the florists were the guests of Stuart & Haugh at the hotel, where an elaborate spread was served, for which Stuart & Haugh were awarded a vote of thanks.

Among the visiting florists attending were: Joseph Hill, J. A. Evans, George Gause, Chas. Jones, of Richmond; Myer Heller, of New Castle; B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown; Robt. McKeand, of Marion; Mr. Maxiner, of Alexandria; Ira Clark, of Greensburg; M. A. Barick, of Seymour; Ray Newcomb, of Chicago; E. A. Nelson, Chas. Williams, Henry Rodenbeck, Fred Hukreide, G. Rieman and Albert Pittet, of Indianapolis.

Various Notes.

WESTERLY, R. I.

The Market.

We have just passed through another week of fine weather, regular summer weather, which has brought out an abundance of flowers. The stores and greenhouses never looked better.

There have been many funerals here recently, which have kept the retailers exceedingly busy. Weddings and May parties have also been plentiful. With the approach of Memorial day and Mothers' day, the prospects for business during the next few weeks are good. Roses and carnations are plentiful. On the whole, trade has been quite satisfactory.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Hadfield, of Kingston, R. I., celebrated their silver wedding anniversary May 3 in their new home, near the Idle Hour Nursery. The decorations were white carnations, used with abundance of green. Mr. Hadfield makes a specialty of asters.

The Foster Greenhouse Co. is making a fine showing of carnations. This firm does nothing but wholesale work.

Great quantities of arbutus are for sale at the local news stands.

Conrad Schultz, of the Beach Street Greenhouses, is making big improvements at his Franklin street plant, which he purchased in the spring of 1910. He has made great changes there in the last year and intends to make still greater changes in the year to come.

S. J. Reuter & Son are certainly getting their share of both retail and wholesale trade. They are shipping some fine roses daily to their Boston branch.

Miss Susie Lampheare has entered the employ of Conrad Schultz, as book-keeper.

Miss Ethel Noble and Edward Landry were married recently at the home of the bride. Miss Noble at one time worked in a florist's store in Providence.

The local florists are making big preparations for the Watch Hill trade. People are already beginning to arrive at that resort.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There was a good volume of business last week, but the large supply of stock of every description caused a seeming surplus. Prices have accordingly been well down and the eyes of the dealers are now on Memorial day and the following school graduations. The growers, on the other hand, are busy with their spring work and all feel well satisfied with the winter season's business.

Various Notes.

Victor Scholboe is arranging to erect a greenhouse at Westerly this summer.

Edward E. Ely has been reelected park commissioner of Providence for a term of three years.

T. J. Johnston & Co., Edward Brooks, proprietor, are busy with a number of small weddings and receptions.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport, was a visitor in Boston last week.

S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, has opened a handsome new store in New London.

Thomas Curley is busy laying out and caring for the grounds surrounding the state normal school and the state house.

Joseph Kopelman received a large consignment of flowering dogwood from the south this week. Saturday he had one window of his store on Washington street banked with it and it attracted general attention.

Alexander Macrae, Elmer E. King and Frederick Hoffman have been appointed a committee to investigate cost, formulate by-laws and arrange other details incidental to the establishment of a wholesale market here next fall. Fifteen growers are now interested in the project.

The New Fern Nephrolepis Dreyerii

(SPORT OF BOSTON)

GROWN BY

G. DREYER, Elmhurst, Long Island, New York

THIS New Fern, when exhibited at the S. A. F. & O. H. Convention last August, received the following description: "Nephrolepis Dreyerii has many good points which will render it popular. It makes a quick growth, is compact, of good color, and stands considerable rough treatment, adapting itself to almost any condition. It is of the Scottii type, but not as stiff, the fronds drooping gracefully, giving the plant a very attractive appearance."

Price: 2 1/4-inch pots, per 100, $25.00; per 1000, $200 00.

CARNATIONS—HARDY.THE NEW HARDY EVER-BLOOMING CARNATION "CRIMSON KING."

Everybody has asked for a carnation that would live out in the garden during the winter. We have pleasure in offering this new plant, as it will fill the bill. It is absolutely hardy, standing even the Canadian winters in the yard. It blooms all summer long, never a day that you cannot cut blossoms. By potting up in the fall you can have flowers in the house all winter. The color is a rich crimson, the fragrance is delicious. We know of no plant that the florists can offer to their patrons that will give as much satisfaction as this hardy carnation, Crimson King, 2 1/2-in. pots, $1.25 per doz.; $8.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000. 25 plants sold at 100 rate; 250 plants at 1000 rate. Our new trade list of everything you need now ready, mailed on application. Write today.

OIL FOR FUEL.

A subscriber requests the publication of the following inquiry:

"Florists who have made use of oil in place of coal for fuel, please advise us through this column as to the cost and character of burners, life of same, effect oil has on boilers, and relative cost of oil and coal."

The Review will be pleased to give space to any replies.

STEAM FOR SMALL HOUSE.

I am building a greenhouse 32x60 feet; with walls five feet high and the ridge thirteen feet from the floor. How much radiation do I need for heating with steam in Ohio climate? C. H.

To carry a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees in occasional below zero weather with low pressure steam you will require twenty lines of 1½-inch pipe as returns, supplied by a 2½-inch riser under the ridge. But why use steam? Hot water will be much better; if this is all the glass you have you should avoid night firing. F. R.

TRACTION ENGINE BOILER.

I have a traction engine boiler rated at fifteen horse-power, heating a house 27x100. Could I extend this house and still have heat enough for general stock in the climate of the state of Washington? A. C.

The boiler in question should be sufficient to heat a house of the cross-section mentioned, 150 feet in length, to 60 degrees by using sixteen lines of 2-inch pipe the length of the house. Three of the sixteen lines can be used as flow pipes, while thirteen are used as returns. F. R.

A CARNATION HOUSE.

We have a twenty horse-power steam boiler, used four years. Can we tap it with 2½-inch holes and use it for hot water? It is an upright boiler, with a grate three feet across and a space of two feet between the grate and the tubes. Can we burn hard coal with good results? With this boiler we wish to heat a carnation house 20x100 feet, and twelve feet to the ridge. The house runs east and west. The back wall is six feet high and the front wall five feet high, with three feet of glass in the front. In this Connecticut climate,

Awarded the Certificate of Merit

at the National Flower Show, Boston, Mass.; and also received the universal approval of all the visitors who examined its merits, the expression of the majority being

"THAT IS THE BOILER I HAVE BEEN LOOKING FOR"

The points of merit that appealed to the judges and the critical visitors were that the fire-box is entirely surrounded by water, there being no brick work to require constant repair; every part of the boiler is easily accessible for cleaning and oiling, which is the most important feature to be considered in purchasing a boiler that is idle during the summer months; all the castings, doors, grates, etc., are made double extra heavy.

☛ Made in 23 sizes for steam and hot water.

☛ In use during the past five years by well-known florists in all parts of the country.

☛ Have shown a saving in coal consumption of from 25 to 40 per cent over other types of boilers.

☛ All parts of the boiler subject to wear are made standard.

☛ The grates are of the shaking and dumping type, with openings for egg, pea or soft coal.

☛ Tested at the factory to 150 pounds pressure.

The Market.

In the last week we really had no cause for complaint, for stock, on the whole, was cleaned up pretty well. The supply of roses and carnations was not much ahead of the demand. Bulbous stock and violets will see their finish by the end of this week. There have been too many callas for some time. Snapdragons of really good quality also move slowly. The supply of valley might be heavier, while good sweet peas are rather scarce. The green goods market is well supplied. We could easily get along without the few Easter Milwaukee Bowlers at Chicago.

The fifteen Milwaukee boys who were the guests of the Chicago Florists' Club May 7 were accorded a grand old time, which again proved that Chicago hospitality is hard to beat. Upon arriving in that city, we were treated to an auto ride through Lincoln, Humboldt and Garfield parks. This most pleasant trip came to its end at the Hofbrau, where a sumptuous dinner, which lasted about two hours, was served. The next step after this "ordeal" was the return bowling match, which was commenced at once. Imagine a bunch of fellows filled to their full capacity trying to bowl! It seemed not to be anything new for the Chicago boys, for they won three games straight, with flattering scores.

After the game a substantial lunch was served. It was at this time that President Philpott, of the Chicago club, who presided, called upon several present to say a few words. In responding, the Milwaukee speakers admitted that they were an easy prey, but promised to practice and get even some other time. It was also announced that the Chicago Florists' Club would hold a joint meeting with the Milwaukee Florists' Club at the Cream City, June 1, and it is at this time that we intend to redeem ourselves.

The following were in the Milwaukee party: Gust Rusch, Fred W. Holton, A. Hare, Tom Cassidy, G. Pohl, Nic Zweifel, Pete Nohos, Louis Manus, A. Leidiger, A. T. Kellner, G. H. Hunkel, Roy Currie, R. Leitz, W. Hummel and E. Oestreicher.

The Market.

Business is a little dull and flowers are quite plentiful. Carnations retail at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen; roses at $1.50 per dozen. Snapdragons sell fairly well at 75 cents per dozen. Bulb stock is not so plentiful now. Tulips and daffodils retail at 50 cents per dozen. Violets are about gone; what few there are retail at $1 per hundred blooms. Sweet peas bring $1 per hundred.

Funeral work continues fair, using up plenty of flowers. Pansy plants and daisies are now for sale; the pansies retail at 25 cents per dozen roots and the daisies at 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen.

We are having warm weather here and garden work is in full swing. Stock is coming along nicely for Memorial day. Tulips and daffodils outdoors are in full bloom. All the uptown stores are making nice window displays.

THIS shows our 2 h.p. Suction Lift Pumping Engine, the type of the Standard Pumping Engines which most florists find best adapted to their use. This machine delivers from 800 to 1000 gallons of water per hour, against a constant pressure of 90 pounds per square inch, supplying one or two 3/4-inch hose for spraying and irrigating. The water is forced directly into the pipe lines at high pressure, and no tank is needed.

We make different styles of Pumping Engines to meet all requirements, and ours is the longest experience in this line. Our machine is

THE STANDARD OF PROGRESSIVENESS AND RELIABILITY.

One of them lasts a lifetime, and they are entirely simple, economical and easy to operate.

Our catalogue illustrates and explains in detail the different types of the Standard Pumping Engines, with all the special features which give them great advantages over other pumping methods.

MERIDEN, CONN.

The Market.

The warm weather has brought out many of the Easter lily buds and there is a large supply on the market. Carnations are scarce; the wholesale growers, instead of forcing them, are holding them back for Memorial day. Funeral work still keeps the florists on the jump. Many weddings have taken place during the last week; therefore roses and valley have been in great demand. Judging by the looks of the fruit trees, we ought to have an abundant supply of fruit in the coming summer. The street florists are now regularly seen.

Various Notes.

R. C. Blatchley, of the Blatchley Co., has purchased a new Metz runabout.

Dondero, the fruit dealer of West Main street, has opened a flower store, using half of the store for that purpose.

The Blatchley Co. had a fine window display of azaleas and ferns last week.

A "floral ball" was recently given by the dancing class of Meriden. The hall was beautifully decorated with green leaves, daffodils and cut flowers. Twigs tied with yellow ribbon hung from the side lights, softening the glow. Flowers were used abundantly and this affair made local business good for one day.

R. W. Barrow had a fine window display of cut flowers and potted plants.

John Bonell is handling large shipments of Easter lilies. S.

Little Rock, Ark.—Gus Garrett, at 1224 Jones street, is building an additional greenhouse, at a cost of about $1,500.

CELERY GROWN UNDER THE SKINNER SYSTEM.

A Rain Machine

You can have rainfall at your command—IN any quantity—at any time—with the Skinner System of Irrigation.

The special nozzles, set in the overhead pipes, spray the water in a fine mist uniformly all over the plants and ground, just like a steady, gentle rain.

The most delicate foliage cannot be injured; the ground does not cake and crack, but keeps soft and porous, letting in the air, so essential to rapid plant growth.

The Skinner System of Irrigation will save enough in labor in one season to pay for itself. The area that one man can water is limited only by the extent of the installation. Write today for our interesting illustrated booklets on indoor and outdoor irrigation.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING

PACKING CO. LTD

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Business for the last week or more has been good, with a large number of funerals. Roses and carnations are plentiful and of good quality. The days have been warm, with cool nights, and flowers are beginning to show the effects of the warm days.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel is still out on the coast. At last accounts he was in Seattle, Wash. His firm is cutting lots of carnations, but is a little off crop in roses. The Killarneys are full of new growth and the new crop will soon be on.

Ben Kramer has been busy right along. He has had a good run of funeral work.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has had about all the work it was possible to do for some time. This firm is having large cuts of roses and carnations. My Maryland is of extra good quality.

Henry Seymour always has something on hand in the way of business. His spring business has opened up in good style. One day recently he had the orders for an unusually large funeral, for which many designs were made and some of them large ones.

J. C. Elspersman reports business as on the increase again. George Elspersman, his nephew, was married May 8.

Nellie Goodge is having her full share of spring work and finds business about as good as she could wish.

Karl Zeidler has a fine stock of spring plants for his large trade. Funeral work has been quite plentiful with him.

Louis Fritsch is a busy man these days.

Royston & Fenton say that the demand for roses is only fair at present.

YONKERS, N. Y.

The Yonkers Horticultural Society May 5 held a business and social session. It was decided to hold a June show at Holly-Wood Inn, the date to be decided later. Schedules may be obtained from H. Nichols, Glenwood avenue, Yonkers. An interesting exhibition is expected, as competition promises to be keen.

After business was disposed of, the regular bimonthly social was thoroughly enjoyed, refreshments, stories and songs being heartily appreciated.

FARMINGTON, UTAH.

The Miller Floral Co., which was organized only about a year ago, has met with gratifying success, and it is reported that plans are now being made by which the amount of business will be doubled during the present year. These plans, however, will not be completed till June 15, when the company will hold its annual meeting. During the last year the two houses, 40x300 and 40x150, have been devoted principally to roses, but it is the intention to begin the growing of carnations also in the near future.

The company was incorporated under the laws of Delaware, with $25,000 preferred stock and $75,000 of common stock. The officers at present are: President and treasurer, Robert Miller, formerly of East Brookfield, Mass., and still owner of greenhouses there; vice-president, Warren E. Tarbell, of East Brookfield; secretary, Nephi Palmer, of this town. The directors are Robert Miller, James Murdock, N. R. Robinson, W. E. Tarbell and J. A. Loflan.

Robert Miller, the president, was born in Scotland and has spent most of his life in growing roses. He was employed in different large greenhouses in Washington, D. C., and in the Waban Conservatories, at Natick. He passed two years in Utah before deciding to leave East Brookfield and make his home in the west.

Somerville, Mass.—Mr. Rosenthal has opened a store in the Central building, under the name of the Davis Square Florist.

Anderson, Ind.—The Indiana State Florists' Association was entertained May 3 at the greenhouses of Stuart & Haugh, on Jackson street. Extensive preparations had been made for the reception of the visitors, who were highly appreciative of the firm's hospitality.

South Bend, Ind.—The Beyer Floral Co. has sued the South Bend Mfg. Co. for damages amounting to $38,000. The Beyer company owns a tract of land near the Sample street bridge, and it is alleged that this land has been rendered practically worthless by the overflow of water caused by the raising of the dam by the manufacturing concern. Aside from its possibilities as a truck and flower patch, the land was partly used as a park, which was rented to picnickers for the sum of $10 a day.
